150 GIRLS KILLED IN FIRE

2,000 Persons Are Trapped in a Big Ten-Story New York Factory Building

FIRE TRAGEDY HALTS SABBATH RITES IN JEWISH HOMES

Mourning Spreads When Names of Terrible Tragedy Become Known.

Heartrending Scenes About the Factory as Relatives Seek Bodies of Loved Ones.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Most of the girls who lost their lives and those who were injured in the fire were of the Jewish faith. It was the Jewish Sabbath and at sundown the orthodox Jews of city went through the ancient ceremony of pouring wine upon the bar table and of kindling it. Then they passed their bare hands through the blue flames.

It was while this sacred ceremony was going on in thousands of homes that the news of the fire horror spread through the city and transformed many of the houses into places of mourning.

A partial list of the injured follows:

Partial List of injured.

Levine, Sam, 20, No. 1,582 Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn; shock and contusions of both hands. New York Hospital.

Velakowsky, Fread, 20, No. 60 East 128th street; compound fracture of right leg and fracture of arm. New York Hospital.

Nevero, Rebecca, nineteen, No. 19 Centre street; fracture of right leg and right forearm and bruises of the breast. New York Hospital.

Lopez, Daisy, twenty-four, No. 11 Charlton street; fracture of pelvis, injuries to the face and left arm. New York Hospital.

Ugo, Kate, twenty-five, No. 23 Washington place; dropped from eighth story window, internal injuries. Bellevue Hospital.

Fleibheim, Fannie, 21, No. 334 Pearl street, Brooklyn; fell down stairs, contusions of right elbow. Attended and sent home.

Unidentified woman, 25, 5 feet 4 inches, dark complexion, hair and eyes, black shirt waist, black shoes and stockings, one gold tooth in upper jaw; jumped from eighth story window. Internal injuries. Bellevue Hospital.

Unidentified woman, twenty-four, five feet five inches, 130 pounds, brown hair and eyes, sharp features. Died at St. Vincent's Hospital.

Wild Scramble for Car.

Mrs. Josephine Canno, forty-five, and her widowed daughter, Mrs. Jane Bucnlo, both of No. 480 Stanton street, were employed as cutters by the Triangle Waist Company on the tenth floor of the building. When the alarm of fire was sounded through the building, Mrs. Canno grasped her daughter by the hand and the two rushed to the elevator, which was waiting.

There was a wild scramble among the employes to get in the car, and Mrs. Canno and her daughter were separated. Mrs. Canno was carried by the crowd into the car, the door was slammed shut and the elevator descended to the lower floor. That was the last Mrs. Canno ever saw of her daughter. The young woman was evidently burned to death. Mrs. Canno tried to go back for her daughter, but was restrained by the police.

Annie Gals, forewoman of the Triangle Waist Company, said:

"I had charge of 1,500 employes of the company, nearly all of whom were women working on the eighth and ninth floors of the building. I was on the ninth floor at about 4:30 o'clock. The employes had received their pay envelopes and were preparing to go home. Some of the girls were in the dressing rooms changing their working clothes for street clothes and others were laying away their working instruments when a cry of fire went up. I do not know where it came from, but it was taken up by many others.

Men Acted as if Insane.

"Dancing about I saw something curling through the ninth floor rooms, coming from where I did not know. In the twinkling of an eye the place was in wild disorder.

"The girls became hysterical and panic stricken and the few men seemed to lose their heads. They all acted as if they had suddenly gone insane. I shouted to the girls to remain quiet for a moment, and I said, 'If you will get into line we can all march down the stairs quick and get out of the building.'

"But it was like trying to run with a lot of maniacs. At this moment a flame shot up the elevator shaft or the stairway. I remember very little of what occurred after that. There was a wild rush for the elevator shaft and stairway, they being the only means of escape. The girls screamed and wept and wrung their hands and tore their hair. I hope I shall never witness such a scene again. It was horrible. I shudder when I think of it and I cannot efface it from my mind.

"The elevator came up to the ninth floor and I was literally carried off my feet and swept into the car by the crowd that rushed onward behind me. Then I fainted.

Saw Sister's Agonized Face.

"The car emptied its load of humans on the ground floor, and when I awoke I found myself in the arms of a fireman being carried somewhere. They revived me and I went home. The last thing I remember came as I left the ninth floor and just before I fainted was the face of my sister Marie, distorted by fright. She seemed to be to be enveloped in flames, but the flames, I suppose, were supplied by my imagination. Poor Marie. They left her in the building with the other unfortunates and I suppose she is dead. But I pray that she is only among the injured, and that she is now at some hospital."

LACK OF FIRE ESCAPES TO BLAME, SAYS CROKER

NEW YORK, March 25.—Fire Chief Croker to-night said about the Green street fire catastrophe:

"This calamity is just what I have predicted. There were no outside fire escapes on this building. I have been advocating and agitating that fire escapes be put on factory buildings just such as this. The large and deplorable loss of life in this fire and panic is due to neglect in not providing proper devices for safeguarding the lives of employes."

More Than 2,000 Employes, Mostly Girls, Were Kept Prisoners in Death Trap by Locked Iron Doors, and Trampled or Burned to Death on Narrow Stairs or by Jumping from Windows. Life Nets Prove Useless in Saving Terrified Workers.

Fire Chief Croker Says: "This Calamity Is Just What I Have Been Predicting. There Were No Outside Fire Escapes on Buildings. The Loss of Life Is Due to Neglect."

Known Dead	150
Probable Dead	175
Injured	100

NEW YORK, March 25.—A fire that spread like a spark in a powder train trapped hundreds of employes of the Triangle Shirt Waist Company on the eighth, ninth and tenth floors of the ten-story loft building at Washington place and Greene street, at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

More than 150 lives were lost. The police figures at midnight were 175 dead and 100 injured. The dead are chiefly women and girls, some of them pitifully young to take up the burden of wage-earners, and some of them old women whom an unkind fate kept in battle for daily bread when their years should have won them a peaceful close of life.

The cause of this frightful calamity is official negligence. Housing during the busy hours of the day at least 2000 employes, this big and high-reaching building was equipped with only one narrow iron fire escape, and that in the rear, leading into an almost blind court.

As though this neglect and absolute disregard for human life were not enough, a criminal trap placed as a warning to the employes of the Triangle Company that they were constantly under suspicion of theft, added scores to the roll of death.

Iron Door as Thief Trap Adds to Death Roll

An iron door, opening inwardly, had been placed at the head of the stairway on the ninth floor by the Triangle Company. When expensive material was being handled on this floor, where scores of women were employed, this door was closed and no one could leave the room without a superficial search, the women being required to open their coats and cloaks and expose the contents of their handbags or any packages they might have with them.

The entire force had to undergo this scrutiny at the close of the working day. When the alarm of fire was given to-day, there was a mad rush for the stairway. The iron door shutting off the stairway was closed and sealed by the press of the struggling mass of women against it.

It was not opened until many of the frightened women had hurled themselves from the windows or had fainted from fright and were left to die in the flames.

When by chance, rather than concerted effort, this diabolical trap was sprung, the rush of women down the stairway left dead, dying and cruelly trampled in its wake, and at points the stairway was fairly choked with the dead. Fire Chief Croker and his men did their best, but were practically helpless against the deplorable absence of safeguards over human life. They found the sidewalks littered with the dead when they arrived and women and men hopelessly cut off from escape and with the fire searing their bodies, flinging themselves headlong from the windows.

Chief Croker was not slow to fix the blame. His face drawn and his jaw firmly set, he looked at the heaps of bodies about where he stood and declared that the lack of outside fire escapes was responsible.

Chief Croker Predicted Such a Fire Disaster

"I have predicted and tried to avoid just such a scene as this," he declared. "The building was not adequately equipped with fire escapes, and this same scene is likely to be repeated to-morrow or any other day in the big office and loft buildings in this city. The lives of the employes in these big buildings are not properly safeguarded, and if the law does not provide for their protection the law should be changed. This is the most frightful experience in my career as a fireman. It is a fearful chapter in the city's history."

The employes of the Triangle Company were the only ones besides porters, elevator conductors and engineers and firemen at work in the big building after 5 o'clock this afternoon. The three floors given over to this company teemed with women and men, busy at their machines and benches, and most of them in a high good humor that they had received their wages and the day's work was about to close on the eve of a holiday.

The closing hour was 5 o'clock and many of the employes had left their work and were preparing to go home, when, as the hands of the clock pointed at two minutes to 5 there was a whiff of smoke from the eighth floor, a rumbling sound and a flash of flame.

Shrill screams sounded the alarm and panic and dread seized the hundreds of men and women who began the despairing struggle for life. Small profit then that the fire chief of the city had begged vainly for adequate measures to protect human life. The windows opened at their dizzy height on space. The stairway from the ninth floor, where the 1,500 women were employed, was barred by that strong iron door, a monument to greed, avarice, simpleton fear held human life so cheap.

The steep and narrow fire escape, loose on its fastenings and terminating far above the ground trailed its shaky way down the rear of the building into the blind court that proved to be a pit of death. Only one person at a time could tread its winding way and many who rushed for this slender thread of promised escape was dashed headlong to the court below by those who followed in the wild stampede. The flames, after the first flash began to climb and eat their way upwards with amazing rapidity. Driven like cattle before this storm of flame and smoke the women and girls sought the windows and within three minutes after the alarm had been given the trapped and frenzied women began to leap from the windows.

A man who, from the street, had seen the whiff of smoke from the eighth story window ran to Broadway and turned in the alarm. Looking back he saw a woman, and then another jump from the ninth story windows. He pulled the alarm again and again, and then rushed back.

Teamster Shows Himself Fire Hero.

The two falling bodies surprised a teamster who was passing below the building. He looked up and saw the windows of the eighth, ninth and tenth floors peopled with the pale faces of women and faintly heard their agonized cries. Puffs of smoke were coming from these windows. The teamster, who had the heart and courage of a true man, and called human life more than the terrified creatures who had rallied to safeguard the lives of the women and men who were working to enrich them, stopped his horse and stripped the animal of its blanket.

Two or three other men who had run up saw his plan, and in a moment they were holding the blanket far below the windows where women were tottering.

One jumped from the ninth floor, struck the blanket and brought the men down in a heap. She was killed instantly. Others ran up and again the blanket was stretched. Another woman jumped and she too, brought down the men who held the blanket, and was instantly killed. The men realized what a difficult effort was theirs and as it looked liked an invitation to death to spread the blanket again, they stood helplessly by.

From below it could be seen that women at the windows were beating out the flames that now and then caught in their dresses. One woman, her clothing afire, threw her pocketbook and then her hat from the window. She then hurled herself after them.

Dr. Keefe, of St. Vincent's Hospital, was driving past in the ambulance as two more bodies of women fell to the pavement. He jumped out and ran up. By this time there were six lying on the sidewalk. He found signs of life in three of them. A taxicab drew up. Dr. Keefe placed two of the women in the taxicab and the other in the ambulance and started for the hospital.

The woman in the ambulance died and one in the taxicab died while Dr. Keefe was working over her. The other one died after reaching the hospital. Dr. Keefe returned to the scene and other ambulances were called.

Women Drop to Death.

Inside the building the two passenger and two freight elevators were running. The only fire escape swarmed with human beings, swaying to and fro in its dizzy height, and ending abruptly above a depth of space of time that the first piece of fire apparatus had not yet reached the scene. A hose wagon soon rolled up, and the screech of the whistles of the approaching engines could be heard. Firemen first on the scene snatched out their life net and many men in the gathering crowd surrounded it.

As soon as it was spread there was a cry of warning from those looking up, and a group of women, estimated at more than a score, jumped almost together for the net—the only avenue of escape.

Fire Net Helpless.

The net gave away, flinging those who held it to the pavement and the pile of lifeless bodies were left where they fell after the firemen had worked the net free to spread it again.

The firemen with their strong net were almost as helpless as the teamster and his horse blanket. Every time the net was spread the women would jump from the ninth floor in groups and smash the net to the ground by the tremendous velocity of their bodies falling from such a height. The force with which some of the bodies fell broke through the vault lights of the sidewalk and three mangled corpses of women were found in the subcellar under the sidewalk.

Joseph Zitto and Joseph Caspar were in charge of the two passenger elevators on the Washington place side of the building, where the main entrance opens. At the first alarm, they say they began to make trips to the danger zone as fast as they could operate their cars. The two freight elevators on the Green street side were opened by Frank Formenek and Michael Schiera, and they took a hand in the life saving.

The two passenger elevators are said to have made at least twenty trips and the two freight elevators half as many. The machinery of the freight elevators broke down under the rapid work and they were rendered useless. After one or two trips by the passenger elevators the press against the doors of the shaft became so great that it was opened with difficulty. Zitto struggled to close the door of the shaft when his car had been jammed full, but after he had started the car it was torn open and a number of women leaped into the shaft after the descending car, falling on the roof of the car even after it had reached the ground floor. Those who had landed alive had been crushed to death against the walls. With this gruesome freight Zitto continued to run his car until the shaft was practically clogged with the dead on the roof of the car, and the smoke and flames were roaring in the shaft.

It is estimated that about 600 escaped by way of elevators, but by the time the first ones to escape in this manner reached the street, the bodies were already hurling down from the upper stories. The iron door, that criminal barrier of death, held the panic driven women on the ninth and tenth floor from the stairways so long that it looked as though none would escape by this avenue.

Finally, breathless, torn and wild with fright, those who succeeded in breasting the human torrent when the gate opened made their way to the street, and glancing about them ran away from the frightful picture of the dead bodies of their fellows strewing the sidewalk.

Water Supply Fails.

Firemen began to battle their way into the building as soon as they arrived to aid in clearing the stairs and making rescues but the water had shut the building into a furnace and they could not mount high. An attempt had been made to get water through the stand pipes, but it was diverted and soon flooded to a depth of several feet the sunken areaway, to which the one fire escape, still laden with women and men, and those who had been rendered helpless by their falls were drowned in this pool of water.

Few escaped alive from the flimsy structure. After the areaway was flooded, and whenthe water was cleared away the most horrible picture of this infernno-like scene, painted by the gaunt hand of criminal neglect, was unveiled. Firemen and policemen turned away in horror. Not a spark of life was left in any of the maimed, mangled and drenched figures.

After the first few women had paid the penalty of working under brutal and criminally negligent conditions by taking the only chance open to them for their lives and leaping from the windows, the others who had not been driven to this last resource by panic were finally forced to take the chance by the flames at their backs.

The lurid glare silhouetted their figures in the frame of the windows, while the quivering crowd below could only shout advice, not knowing the torment that was driving them on. Then came the firemen with their nets and it was noticed that the clothing had been burned from their backs. The last to leap took the jump practically with their last strength and their clothing was burned almost entirely from their bodies. From the windows from which they leaped the rags and fragments of dresses fluttered, flags of shame for the frightful slaughter of the helpless and the neglect of those responsible for the public safety.

BOSTON AMERICAN $ 35,000 PRIZE COUPON DISTRICT 10 VOTES

NAME

ADDRESS

TOWN AND STATE

VALUELESS AFTER APRIL 9, 1911.

SPECIAL OFFER TO CLOSE IN 5 DAYS

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

A man who has a big note to meet in five days and who hasn't enough money in the bank so far to meet it, doesn't waste any time in playing golf or counting the sparrows on a bush.

He hustles to get that money and he doesn't stop hustling, for he knows that five days pass mightily quickly.

All candidates in the AMERICAN'S $35,000 Prize Contest are in the position just now of the man who has a big note due in five days. He haven't any time to fool away.

In five days more, at 10 p. m. on next Friday, March 31, the double March offer in the contest will come to a close. No more votes will be accepted for the double March offer after that hour except votes which come in by mail and which were mailed, as shown by the postmark, before or up to 10 o'clock next Friday night.

It's Time to Move.

The moral is clear. Every candidate needs to do two things just now. The first is to get every vote, especially votes by subscription, that he possibly can between now and the end of March. The other is for every candidate to hustle in those same votes without delay. Don't wait till the last minute. Don't hold off till the last possible hour in which you can bring in or send in or mail in your votes to the Contest Department in order to be on time. Something may happen. Allow as much leeway for accidents as you can. If you have votes to send in send them now.

Every candidate knows how big votes by subscription count during March. The special vote bonus, in connection with the double March offer, makes March votes of tremendous importance.

A special vote bonus of 3,000 votes is given to each candidate for each and every lot of ten subscriptions sent in between March 1 and March 31.

In addition, a prize of a fluick runabout, a classy car of latest model, is offered for the candidate who polls the highest vote by subscription during March.

Vote Is Needed.

The special vote bonus offer is to be a tremendous factor, not only in determining the winner of the Buick runabout, but also in settling who will be the ultimate winner of the capital prize in the main contest—the $8,000 house and two lots at Riverton-on-the-Hudson.

So there is no time to lose. The March offer is a big proposition and it has only five days more to run. Like all good things in life, it must be taken on the jump before it is too late.

Any candidate who should think that there may be a big list of prizes for April. So they are holding back votes to land one of the expected April prizes.

That is wrong. There will be no April prizes. Candidates who look for April prizes will be disappointed. Don't hold back votes in that idea. Send them in now, while the March offer is still open.

The Contest Editor will publish the second list of candidates' standing in all districts just as soon as the list can be compiled after the close of the March offer. This second list will be figured up to March 31 at 10 p. m.

You know how important it is to rank well in these lists of standing. That makes another strong argument for sending in votes now.

JACK JOHNSON GETS 25 DAYS IN A CELL

SAN FRANCISCO, March 25.—Jack Johnson, champion heavyweight pugilist of the world and reckless automobile speeder, will have twenty-five days in which to slow down and cool off, the period of detention in the county jail having been awarded by Justice Treadwell.

Johnson was entirely unprepared for such treatment and expostulated, but with scant courtesy from the court. Johnson was made a specialty of conducting his own cases hitherto when arrested for speeding and handled his case to-day until the sentence was awarded. Then his silliness deserted him and he besought counsel.

In response to the frantic demands of Johnson for help, John Greeley, attorney, stepped into the breach to save the fighter from the ignominy of a jail sentence. Greeley mopped right up front with a motion for an arrest of Judgment while an appeal bond was filed. Judge Treadwell had gone on with his calendar in the meantime and looked rather tired at Greeley when the motion was made. He marking: "I presumed the attorney knew that there could not be an appeal filed when a defendant has pleaded guilty."

All avenues of escape being shut off in that direction, Johnson, a much crestfallen man, was compelled to submit to arrest and was taken to the city prison pending his transportation to the Black Maria to the caravansary conducted by Sheriff Finn, at Ingleside. Johnson will make an attempt through some superior judge for a release by habeas corpus writ.

After the court adjourned Johnson tried to undo his way into Judge Treadwell's chambers, but without success.

J. Burg, who was arrested with Johnson, the two men having engaged in a race on the beach, was let off with a fine of $50.

CHAMP CLARK BUYS WATCH.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Champ Clark to-day bought for his own use a good watch. He believes he will need it when he comes to preside over the next House of Representatives. Mr. Clark has never owned a good watch, but has wanted one always. He has never felt he was able to invest in one. The $12,500 a year he will receive as speaker opens a vista of prosperity.

How to Get Rid of Pimples

It is truly remarkable how Cadum, the new remedy, causes pimples to disappear. Bad cases are frequently helped in a week, and sometimes even sooner. Cadum causes pimples to dry up and fall off, leaving the skin as soft and smooth as a baby's. Pimples are a disease of the skin, and are not caused by bad blood, as many people suppose. Cadum helps these annoying and disfiguring facial blemishes because it can be applied direct to the trouble, and its soothing, antiseptic and healing powers stop the itching at once. Cadum is equally good for rash, blotches, scaly skin, chafings, eczema, sores, eruptions, acne, pustials, etc. 10c and 25c per box. At all druggists.

Latest Showing of Easter Millinery

At Prices Ranging from $5.00 Up to $95.00

Butler's Entire Millinery Department Is a Tempting Paradise to Every Woman Whose Mind Is Bent on the Topic of the Moment—Millinery!

Street and Demi-Tailored Hats

The Spring favorite, the Helmet, jauntily trimmed with waving ostrich plumes or rich silk cords.

Boat shapes of fine hemp, attractively adorned with wings of combined velvet and ostrich.

Smart turbans with velvet "dog ears" as trimming, in bright colors. Colonial shapes with French flowers or wide bands and wide flanges of velvet as additional trimming.

In fact, we have all the prevailing straws, the season's accepted colors and fashionable trimmings—velvet wings, aigrettes, showers of flowers, lace facings, ostrich feathers, etc., etc. If it's correct, it's at Butler's.

Misses' Hats

Extensive variety of modish shapes in misses' hats, for school, country and dress wear. The latest prices consistent with good materials. The smartest styles in Boston.

Picture Hats

Elegant dress hats comprise appropriate styles for every requirement. The finest woven hemps, tagals, etc., with sweeping wide brims, some decorated with lace, in both underneath and allover effects.

Magnificent ostrich plumes, draped in the prevailing serpentine effect, and also in the graceful shower effect, are used lavishly on the higher-priced hats.

Fetching little turbans, including the novel Batavia cloth with bandings of fancy feathers, velvet or French flowers, are quite the made for wear with tailored costumes.

Large white hats are very decorative. Soutache braid as crown and brim makes a chic touch together with wavy ostrich plumes.

A limited number of stunning French models still on hand, but you may not find them here long. Butler's adaptations are quite as satisfactory, so see here.

Special sale of fine Ramie Hat Braids, in 10-metre lengths; colors are black, white, navy, king's blue, brown and burnt. Just the thing for home millinery. Per piece 50c

HEARTRENDING SCENES AS FIRE TRAPS ITS HELPLESS VICTIMS

Fifty Working Girls, After Fleeing to Floors Above, Plunge to Instant Death in Street or Are Killed in the Crash

NEW YORK, March 25.—It was one of the most thrilling and heartrending fires that this city has ever experienced. Girls employed in a shirtwaist factory were cooped up on the eighth, ninth and tenth floors, their escape cut off below by a roaring furnace.

As the fire quickly reached them and the thick volume of smoke swirled through the floors where the girls were imprisoned the hundreds of victims were driven frantic with fear. Screams of anguish that could be heard for blocks came from the windows of the upper stories.

Then one girl, her clothing ablaze, was seen at one of the windows. She shrieked for help. Then, crazed with the pain of the flames and fright, the girl leaped wildly through the air. Her body struck the street and was crushed to a jelly.

Many Trampled to Death.

By this time madness seized all of the girls. The wildest panic imaginable ensued. Some of the girls dashed down the smoke-choked stairways and were trampled to death. Others followed the lead of the girl who leaped from the window.

Before the fire had been burning long fifty girls had taken the mad death-leap from the upper stories of the burning structure. Fully as many more had been trampled to death in the stairways. Others were burned, cut and bruised.

An immense crowd gathered in this congested business section of the city. The streets were jammed and the police had to fight with all their power to keep the crowd back from the structure.

When the first girl leaped to the street a cry of horror went up from the throng below. Many of those who watched with blanched faces the burning building and saw with horror the faces of the doomed girls at the windows were women and girls from other buildings in the neighborhood.

Women covered their eyes with their hands to shut out the awful sight. Some of them dropped to the street in a hysterical faint. The clang of ambulances and the rattle of the fire apparatus added to the wildness of the scene.

2,000 Employes in Building.

The building in which the fire tragedy took place is located at No. 243 Greene street and No. 23 Washington place. On the eighth, ninth and tenth floors was the Triangle Shirt Waist Company, employing several hundred girls.

There were in the entire building about 2,000 employes. Nearly all of them were girls. They were just thinking of getting ready to go home when the startling cry of fire rang through the tall human hive of industry.

It was believed that the fire started on the seventh floor. It blazed forth so quickly that before many of the girls had a chance to get out, great tongues of flame leaped upward, and igniting the inflammable material on the various floors soon became a blazing inferno.

Those of the girls who were unable to get down the stairways or into the elevators rushed to the upper floors. They cried for help, and very soon the top floors were a bedlam of mad shrieks.

Climbing to Dodge Flames.

From one floor to another, higher and higher the girls climbed, trying in vain to get away from the menacing flames. They ran to the ninth, then to the tenth, then to the eleventh and finally to the twelfth.

Some of the girls even made their way to the roof of the doomed structure. But they soon realized that they could not get away from the flame of death. Shooting upward, like writhing serpents, the fire leaped, catching the pitiful victims and sending out their lives in a moment.

Girls held on to one another in an agony of fear. Their clothing blazed and they either fell down unconscious and were suffocated or staggered to the windows and with their expiring strength hurled themselves to the street.

Like blazing human torches, the girls fell through the air, their bodies turning over and over in the fall. The police lifted the bodies and carried them to adjoining buildings while the great forces of ambulance doctors who had been summoned to the scene made hasty examinations of them.

"Dead! Dead!"

That was the verdict of the doctors when they had taken one hasty glance at the girls who had jumped from the building.

Relatives Hurry to Scene.

Hundreds of relatives of the victims soon heard of the catastrophe and hurried to the scene. Then followed scenes that can not be adequately described to give a proper idea of their pitifulness.

Men and women tore their hair and their clothing in their terrible suffering. The names of loved ones dead or believed to be dead were cried out in tones that wrung the hearts of those who heard.

Many of the girls lived on the East Side of the city not far from the fire. They belonged to various foreign nations and the babel of different tongues filled the air. In their agony many men and women fell on their knees and prayed for the safety of those who were dear to them and who were known to be in the building.

When the fire firemen reached the scene they realized that they were confronted with a holocaust. A second and third alarm were sent in rapidly. Ladders were hastily reared and great streams of water were poured into the burning structure.

It was found that the extension ladders fell short of the upper floors of the building where the girls were imprisoned. Hanging out of the windows were scores of girls.

"Help! Help!" they shrieked.

"Don't jump—wait—wait!" shouted the firemen.

But the words of the firemen were drowned in the noise that came from the dying victims. The girls could not understand what the firemen said and even if they did they were in too great peril to heed the warnings that were constantly shouted by the brave men who were working like heroes to rescue the poor victims.

Life nets were stretched with frenzied haste and an effort made to catch the victims as they shot downward like great human embers of the conflagration. Some of the girls were caught in the nets and others missed them.

Roaring through their trumpets the fire chiefs hurled their pleading commands to the girls not to jump—that they would be saved if they would hold on a little longer.

But the firemen themselves realized the futility of this hope because the flames had eaten their way up to where the frightened, crying creatures, with the fear of death on their faces, and looking out of their eyes, were huddled.

Girls Fight for Life.

From the street below and from the windows of other buildings the mad battle for life on the upper floors of the burning building could be seen. Girls fought their way toward the windows in search of air and running from the smoke that was stifling them.

Grabbing one another by the hair, by the clothing and about the bodies, the frenzied creatures fought for their lives. Hair was pulled from the heads of terrified girls, their clothing was torn to shreds and their faces were lacerated by the nails of the insane throng that faced horrible death.

Firemen and policemen cursed and wept at their impotence. They fought themselves like demons, but they were so far below those they would help that they were able to do but little.

Blazing Bodies Hit Street.

In some cases blazing bodies hit the life nets and bounded into the street. When the bodies were picked up life was either gone or the body was terribly mangled.

An avalanche of blazing bodies poured down upon them. Ambulances came clanging to the scene, whirling madly through the throngs that banked the street from wall to wall.

Improvised hospitals were established in the streets after the police reserves had cleared space and the crushed and mangled, injured and dying were given attention and the dead grouped and covered.

Within half an hour after the fire broke out the police said that fifty dead were in the streets, and declared that at least as many more must have been trampled to death or died from burns or suffocation within the building.

Many of the victims in which the doctors found traces of life were hurried to the various hospitals. Some of the girls were pitifully burned.

In some instances girls were found alive whose hair had been completely burned from their heads and their clothing from their bodies. The girls were wrapped up and hurried away to hospitals.

As if by magic the news that the "Triangle" was on fire spread to every part of the city. Thousands of people from every tenement in the district. Reserves came down from every police station to keep some semblance of order, and a harder work for the police than handling a riot. Turning away fathers and mothers, who insisted on rushing to the relief of imprisoned and burning children, was no task for the finest police in the world, and the men felt it and said it. One of their hardest tasks of the day was furnished by a little messenger boy, who had come to walk home with his sister. Nobody told him, but the little girl was one of those who jumped to death.

Rushed to the Hospitals.

Into adjacent streets the ambulances were driven. There were rows of them. Dead or alive, the bodies were rushed to the hospitals. The cries of the injured tollers could be heard even above the pumping and blowing of the fire engines, the cries of fire captains and policemen.

When the holocaust had passed the stage of being an ordinary fire there were scenes of panic in every shirtwaist and garment factory in the district. Most of them were compelled to knock off for the day. In every case the workers made straight for Greene street and Washington place. The rush of relatives, friends, coworkers and more lookers-on made the work of firemen and police harder, and harder and called for a doubling of the police lines.

Fathers muttering their fears, mothers wringing their hands and calling out to Heaven in agonized prayer—these were familiar scenes for blocks. When it was known that many little homes in the most densely settled section of the New World had been visited by death, and nobody knew just which homes among 600, there were anxious hearts which could not be comforted.

"I saw both by girls at the window together," said Morris Rosenthal, fifty-seven, a bushelman. "I saw Rosie, and then I saw Esther. I think the younger girl saw me and waved her hand at me. Then I saw them no more. I saw fire at the same window. I wish one of the policemen would abuse me if I am not to see my children again." Rosenthal's oldest boy was among the fire fighters. He was sent back to the house, two of his mates detailed to accompany him.

SUFFERED MANY YEARS RELIEVED BY PE-RU-NA.

Mrs. George Parker.

Colds and Catarrh.

Mrs. George Parker, 419 Water St., Menasha, Wis., writes: "We have used Peruna in our family for a number of years, and have found it a perfectly reliable medicine. It soon rids the system of any traces of a cold, and prevents serious consequences.

"I began using it for catarrh, which I suffered with a good many years, but had not been very serious until recently. Since I have taken Peruna the dropping in my throat has discontinued, and my head and nose are not so stopped in the morning. I am pleased with the results, and shall continue to use it until I am entirely rid of catarrh.

"I heartily recommend it as an honest medicine."

Head and Lungs.

Mr. John McLaughlin, 1419 School St., Chicago, Ills., and his wife express their appreciation of the merits of Peruna in the following words:

"We are pleased to testify as to the merits of Peruna in cases of catarrh. We were both troubled with catarrh of the head and lungs for several years, and did not seem to find anything which would benefit us.

"Finally, on the recommendation of a friend, we took Peruna, and in a short time were on the road to recovery.

"Now we keep Peruna in the house all the time, and when either of us contracts a cold a few doses will set us right. It acts as a preventive of catarrh, and is also very fine to build up the strength.

"We believe it to be an honest medicine, well worthy the confidence of the sick."

GIRLS TRAPPED IN INFERNO PLUNGE TO DEATH IN STREET

Maddened Young Women Jump Or Are Forced From Windows In New York Skyscraper Fire-trap, or Die in the Flames

NEW YORK, March 25.—Inside the burning building the tortures and horrors of Dante's "Inferno" were outdone. Death in one fearful form after another was wrought by wholesale. The structure was a flaming hell, in which men and women, young girls and youths were sent to an agonizing end.

From top to bottom of the flame-swept sky-scraper people died like rats in burning traps. All the dreadful scenes took place which have often been prophesied of fire and panic in an overcrowded building during working hours. The sights actually beheld by the horrified rescuers and helpless spectators exceeded even the worst that has been pictured.

Girls Flee Toward Roof.

When the first alarm of fire came from the seventh floor the girls on that floor and the five above it fled upstairs toward the tenth floor. In those upper floors they were trapped, trapped with fire driving them from below and with the shuddering distance to the street confronting them at the windows.

No one thought of using the elevators at first. When they did start to the elevators became jammed, cutting off that means of escape.

Terrible Scene for Spectators.

Spectators from behind the long police lines and from the roofs of nearby buildings then saw one of the most horrible phases of the holocaust—the plunge to death of victim after victim from the high windows to the cruel asphalt below.

Deep groans went up from these spectators as one girl after another shot from the flame-wreathed window casements and hurled down to the pavement. Some girls came down feet first, as they jumped. When they struck the pavement the shock of the impact made their bodies crumple up in ghastly heaps.

Jumped Like Human Wheels.

Other victims, jumping from the windows head-first, and pushed out in numerous cases by the frenzied pressure from behind, spun over and over in the air like human pin-wheels. Many of these landed head first and were picked up with heads and features crushed beyond identification.

The frightful furnace from which these girls leaped in their last despairing hope for life was indicated all the more by the fact that the clothing of many of the victims was in flames as they came down through the air. They were on fire before they jumped. With flames streaming up as they fell, and shrieking one final, hopeless cry, these living torches found death and frightful injury on the street.

Fight for Life on Stairs.

While some of the victims were leaping to their death from the windows others were struggling in a last frenzied fight for life on the stairways.

The failure of the elevators to work sent many of the fire-imprisoned in a mad rush for the stairways. On the seventh floor they found fire barring the way. In their fear many tried to dash through this barrier of flame and were roasted alive as they ran.

The stairways soon became jammed with a hideous maelstrom of humanity, which shrieked and cursed and prayed and fought for life and air. Some were smothered to death by mere pressure of numbers. Others fell and were trampled upon till the very breath of life was driven from their quivering, gasping bodies.

SCENE OF HORROR AS GIRLS LEAP FOR LIFE

NEW YORK, March 25.—Down in the streets about the big loft building, scenes were enacted which caused even indifferent New York to shudder. It was almost the closing hour for the toilers of the great manufacturing establishments of the neighborhood. Mothers were waiting in doorways for their daughters. Young men were waiting for their best girls.

One young man, said to be Harry Greenberg of Flatbush, twenty-four years old, was among those who waited. High up in the tenth story of the burning building was Ida Klein of Third avenue. The young people were to have been married Sunday evening in one of the lodge halls of her neighborhood. To-night they were to have been members of a theatre party.

The young man entered Green street to find the section blocked with police lines and jammed with fire apparatus. Policemen refused him entry. He appeared to lose all control of himself. It was all that four big officers could do to subdue him. They did not convince him that he ought not to go in. Friends finally induced him to leave the fire lines, a young man broken in spirit and crushed by great grief.

Girls Masses of Flame.

It was at about this time that the first girl was seen to hurl herself from a window. Her dress was a mass of flame. Everybody in the great throb of people turned their heads away. The fire nets had not been placed in position and the child, for she was little more, was mangled beyond recognition.

Firemen placed both hands to their mouths to shout at the young women that they must wait only a moment longer. It was no use. Nobody can say that the messages reached the young people. Whether they did or did not the girls were now too frantic to be reasoned with. Behind and below them all was smoke and fire. Great tongues of flame darted at them, missed them, started back and came forward again. It seemed to be only a question of time when the fire must claim them all for victims and the girls jumped.

Within an hour from the time the fire was discovered all the elevated and surface and tunnel lines in New York seemed to be dumping passengers by the thousand at the nearest points to the scene. All Manhattan came to see the spectacle. When it was known that the death that was climbing to the hundred mark nobody thought of the spectacular any longer.

To-night the district of garment workers is inclined, even in its grief, to be sullen and angry. That there will be a thorough investigation, with an earnest effort to find place the responsibility for the cruel deaths of scores of young women, goes without saying. The city departments responsible for conditions will be raked with a fine comb.

Panic Frenzy Ruled.

At first there was effort on the part of a few cooler heads to guide the panic-stricken mob and to help the weaker. But a few minutes of the fire frenzy served to wipe every thought of sense or sacrifice from the general mind. The flight became one wild individual struggle.

In the melee friends and relatives were separated. Many of the girls in the death-rush were sisters, working side by side in the same room. These tried to cling to each other at first. But they were torn apart. Then all sense of kinship was lost ere long, and each one—man, woman, youth and girl—fought for himself or herself.

As the flames swept from side to side and upward through the structure the stairways were illuminated and glimpses could be obtained of the struggling masses on the different flights and landings.

At the turns of the stairway the most ghastly scenes took place. There people were jammed into shapeless heaps. Every one that fell caused others to fall. Some, in their fall, fairly dragged down others with the death-grip like that of a drowning person.

But, for the most of the victims, there was no human succor. The mad stampede down the stairways accomplished what the fire and the jumping from windows did not. Three times agencies of death wrought with fiendish combination.

It was doubtful if, with perfect order and under a trained fire drill, if all the occupants of the upper floors could have marched down the upper stairways and gotten to safety and the street.

With the panic and the crippling of the elevator service they did not have a chance. In a few minutes there was the fire and the crush of death on the stairs for one fate, and the suicide leap from the windows for the alternative. For all the victims it was simply a case of which form of destruction came to them.

EYE-WITNESS' STORY OF THE FACTORY FIRE TRAP DISASTER

Veritable Rain of Death as the Blazing Bodies of the Girl Victims Plunge Through Air.

BELOW is given a vivid impression of the great factory fire-trap disaster as it appeared to an eye-witness, a reporter, who was upon the scene only a few minutes after the first alarm was sent in. His account of the tragedy was the first connected story weaved from the overwhelming mass of dramatic episodes which made the disaster one of the most appalling the nation has suffered since the Iroquois Theatre and General Slocum horrors.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Before a veritable rain of death—the falling bodies of men and girls—from the blazing top floor windows of a ten-story building at Greene street and Washington place late this afternoon, the awe-stricken throngs that had rushed to see the fire turned away and hundreds of them fled.

It was not a holocaust, but a tragedy of panic. The hundreds of people working in the building became within two minutes after the fire started, a terror, blind and fear-crazed throng that could not find what few means of escape there were.

The windows of the three upper floors at 5 o'clock seemed to be hurling forth human beings as from the flame-red muzzles of fearful mortars, and a brave elevator man who was running his car for the last possible time down from the tenth floor, could hear the bodies of those who leaped down the shaft beating, with terrible incessancy upon the roof of the cage. The elevator man tried to go up again, but could not. The dead prevented.

The girls employed by the Triangle Shirt Waist Company on the ninth and tenth floors jumped from the windows by fives and sixes. They could be seen—if one dared to look—struggling for the first chance to plunge to certain death. The but the women fell into their life nets, but the women fell into them in such numbers that their combined weight broke the nets.

Heroism During the Tragedy.

In the midst of the panic there was also heroism. There was the elevator man, James Zito, who made three trips through the smoke and flame, bruised and beaten by his terrified passengers and forced to hear at every door the wild, pitiful appeals for him to stop, when his car was already packed so that he could not close the door.

And there was a little office boy, known only as "Solly," who, from the human maelstrom on the top floor, led twenty girls to safety over the roofs.

The calamity which will cast the shrouds of mourning over more than a hundred homes was due, according to Chief Croker, to the lack of outside fire escapes.

"It is just what I have been predicting," said the fire chief, in a voice that quavered. "There were no outside escapes on that building. I have been advocating and fighting for a regulation to compel them to put fire escapes on just such structures. I do not hesitate to say that the great loss of life was due to this neglect."

The fire started about 4:20 o'clock on the seventh floor. Zito, the elevator man, saw it first. It spread with almost incredible rapidity, burning upwards. The first thing Zito did was to run his car to the upper floors, where he found a fighting crush of girls. When he got his first load to the ground he told another employe to turn in an alarm.

Three alarms went in on top of each other. The reserves of three precincts and mounted men from almost all sections were drafted to take charge of the crowds. As the fearful scenes began the watchers were glad to withdraw, but many remained, fascinated, while they were appaled. Ambulance calls brought almost every surgeon and vehicles from five hospitals. But the injured were sadly few. Nevertheless, many who broke through the life nets were taken to the hospitals with some hope of recovery.

Tragedy Unnerves Firemen.

A fourth alarm was turned in at 5.20. The firemen were working valiantly but the flames had embraced the entire top of the building. The sight of tragedy every moment unnerved even some of the fire fighters and police. One incident that brought a great rolling cry of dread from the watching throng, happened when the blaze was at its height.

Against a lurid background of fire, a young man and a girl appeared together at a window on the eight floor. The man was holding the girl firmly by the hand. The man was seen to fold the girl to his breast and press a kiss upon her lips. She jumped to her death upon the pavement below, and he followed an instant later.

Two girls, who jumped from the top floor, crashed through a sheet iron grating on the sidewalk. One girl, after vainly trying to persuade a companion not to jump, watched her body crash on the sidewalk, and then she jumped herself. Both were killed. Mounted policemen from all the traffic precincts were drafted to the scene to keep the huge crowds back.

Police headquarters ordered the morgue to provide all the coffins it had in stock to remove the dead from the scene of the fire. Five patrol wagons loaded with seventy-two coffins were sent immediately. Superintendent Fane, of the morgue, was informed by the police at 6:30 that probably many more coffins would be needed, and he ordered one of the wholesale manufacturers to ship as many as possible to the morgue without delay.

Six ambulances, ten surgeons and boxes of emergency supplies were rushed to Bellevue from the other hospitals in preparation for the reception of the injured.

Volunteer in Elevator.

While Zito was running his elevator another hero came to his aid. Thomas Gregory of No. 240 East Eighty-third street, who works at No. 103 Bleecker street, was going home and saw smoke. He ran into the building and made three trips in the elevator, taking down fifteen persons at each trip. He said he left the hallways on the upper floors crowded with frenzied people, who fought to get into the elevator and clawed his face and neck. After the third trip the machinery broke down.

The lives of about twenty girls were saved by the coolness and good sense of "Solly," the fourteen-year-old office boy in the factory of Klank & Harris, on the tenth floor.

The girls there were just putting on their hats to go home when the alarm went through the building. They were running for the fatal window, when "Solly" rolled to them to follow him and led them to the roof, where they were able to save themselves by a short jump to the lower roof of an adjoining building.

These girls were so terrified that they would undoubtedly have been among the dead if the boy had not kept his head.

Commissioner Driscoll ordered the bodies inhabited and taken to the morgue as soon as permits could be gotten from the Coroner. The morgue was turned into a sub-precinct police station and bureau of information, in order to facilitate identification of the bodies.

Hard Work for Doctors.

The scene that presented itself with the arrival of the doctors from the various hospitals is one never to be forgotten. In addition to the bodies lying on the street, there were several maimed and injured and badly burned who were breathing their last.

The surgeons went from one to the other as rapidly as possible. The test of life was the stethescope. The white-coated men from Bellevue Hospital placed the appliance in the region of the heart. If there was a spark of life the sufferer was given to the care of the ambulance driver with instructions to hurry to the hospital. If there was no response the doctors passed on to the next unfortunate.

At times the bodies were found wrapped in the death clasp as they had fallen. For the first twenty minutes it was the task of the surgeons not so much to minister to the living, but to separate the dead from the dying. There was little difference in the appearance of these dead and dying. Before they had risked death by jumping most of the girls had been badly burned. The clothing had been consumed before, in the agony of their pain, they had leaped from the upper stories.

Of all the bodies that lay in the streets with the coming darkness, three only were of men. The others were of young women, the majority yet in their teens. In the areaway between the building and the building of the New York Law School, there were other bodies in a space where no firemen could reach.

Law Students and Girls.

In the adjoining University Law School building, which is two stories higher than the one in which was the fire, there was at the time Prof. Sommers with a class of law students. The class heard the cries of fire and looked into the areaway that separates the building.

It was here that the fire escapes proved so inadequate. They were then jammed with panic-stricken girls, clinging to the escapes and endeavoring to descend. The smoke that enveloped them made this a hard task.

A short distance separates the two buildings. A painter had left a ladder in the room used by the law class, and this was utilized. In a minute it was run across to the crowded fire escape and ten of the girls were taken to the escapes and into the law school.

On the floor below, Professor H. G. Parson had a class of forty girl students in gardening. When the escapes were jammed the professor rescued several from the escapes. Then his own class, all young girls, became panic stricken. Afraid they would be killed in a panic in the building he was obliged to turn his attention to them.

One woman jumped and her clothes caught on a hook on the outside of the building. Thousands saw her hang there and burn to death and there was no way to rescue her.

Many more must have been trampled to death or died from burns or suffocation within the building.

Improvised hospitals were established in the streets after the police reserves had cleared spac and the crushed and mangled, injured and dying were given attention and the dead grouped and covered.

EMPLOYES ESCAPE FLAMES OVER ROOF

NEW YORK, March 25.—Max Blanck and Isaac Harris, the proprietors of the Triangle Shirt Waist Company, were in their offices on the tenth floor of the building when the fire started. Mr. Blanck's daughters Henrietta and Mildred, had just come to the office to ask their father to go shopping with them, and he was about to leave when some one rushed in and told them the building was on fire. They all ran to the windows and saw the commotion in the street below. Girls had already started to jump from the eighth and ninth floors.

Mr. Blanck, his two daughters and Mr. Harris rushed to the elevator shaft. They found a frightened group of some thirty persons waiting. When the elevator came up all that could crowded in, but the proprietors and the Blanck girls were left. The elevator failed to come back.

After waiting several minutes they all went to the roof scuttle and made their way to the top of the building. Flames were then licking their way all around the top of the structure, except on one side where another building, one story higher, closely adjoins. By "boosting" one another and finally pulling up the last man the twenty or more people were able to get to the roof of the other building and make their way to safety.

Mr. Blanck when seen tonight was in a highly nervous condition. Mr. Harris was unable to see any one.

Mr. Blanck said that the firm had taken great precautions against fire; that there were two stairways in the building and two elevators, with fire escapes in the rear. He said there were always two watchmen on duty, night and day, but that the watchmen were cleaning the building when the fire started. He added that there were automatic fire alarms on every floor and that it was a rule of the firm that no door should ever be locked during working hours.

Mr. Blanck estimated the damage at $200,000 and said that about 80 per cent. of it was covered by insurance.

Within half an hour after the fire broke out the police said that 50 dead were in the streets and declared that at least as many more must have been trampled to death or died from burns or suffocation within the building.

Improvised hospitals were established in the streets after the police reserves had cleared spac and the crushed and mangled, injured and dying were given attention and the dead grouped and covered.

ONE-HALF BOTTLE OF THE GREAT KIDNEY REMEDY ACCOMPLISHES WONDERS

When I sent for a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, I had to make water every two or three hours through the day and night. I passed but a very small quantity, but with a scalding and straining at the end of each passage. Before I received sample by mail, I went to our best doctor (and he is second to none in this vicinity) and told him how I felt. He put me up a bottle of medicine. I was about a week taking the medicine, but was no better than when I began. I then began your sample bottle, and before I got through with it, I felt a change. The scalding sensation did not bother only a few times in the middle of the day. I would not have believed such a small quantity would have done so much, but before it was gone I learned that our druggist kept Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and so got a large bottle for one-dollar but actually worth one hundred dollars. I only took one large tablespoonful three times a day and before I had taken one-half bottle I was all right and have been since. Gratefully yours,

GEORGE S. CHAMPLIN,
Ashaway, R. I.

MANY THRILLING RESCUES BY HEROIC FIREMEN

Story of How One Man Was Saved After Being Nearly Drowned in Cellar of Burned Building.

NEW YORK, March 25.—When the dead body tagged No. 101 had been recovered Battalion Chief Worth reported to Chief Croker that his men believed they had heard groans from the cellar. He asked permission of the chief to send men into the water-filled hole, and this was given. A force of men under Worth wading in water almost up to their necks were rewarded when they reached the elevator shaft to find a man alive. He was standing in water up to his neck, but appeared unhurt.

The firemen succeeded in getting him out and took him to the office of a store across the way. Here Dr. Neil of St. Vincent's Hospital gave him a hypodermic and a big drink of whiskey. The man seemed dazed for a bit but came around all right and he said: "My name is Herman Meshel. I live at No. 352 East Fifteenth street and am a tucker by trade. I was working on the eighth floor when the fire occurred.

Slid Down on Wires.

"I ran into the hall. It was filled with girls. The elevator had gone down and did not come back. I reached out and got the wire cables and tried to slide down. I slid down."

In proof of this, the rescued one showed his hands which were cut and bruised.

"When I got there there were three men and a girl at the bottom of the pit."

He was asked what became of them and said he did not know. Meshel said he was twenty-two years old. He had stood, evidently dazed by his fall, in the water for four hours. It is believed the others lost in the shaft with him are dead. He was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital.

The Misses Rachel and Pauline Greenman, eighteen and twenty years old, who were injured in the fire, were the sole support of their widowed mother, and lived at No. 98 East Seventh street.

They had been employed in the factory for four years. They escaped from the flames by jumping three stories to the street, but were badly hurt.

Presentiment of Tragedy.

Mrs. Ella Cohen, their sister, worked in the shirt waist establishment for five years. She said last night that she had always believed the building to be unsafe, and that the roof scuttles, while she was there, were always locked. "I thought it was a death trap," said Mrs. Cohen.

Miss Pauline Greenberg, a cousin of the Misses Grossman, was to have gone to work to-day. She said yesterday that she had a premonition of danger and refused to go.

Tillie Eli Kliesman of No. 1172 Washington avenue, Bronx, was waiting outside the building when it caught fire. The girl, seventeen years of age, was there to meet Minne and Rose Wagner, two of the operators in the Triangle Waist Company, who live at No. 1318 Brook avenue, Bronxville. When the girls came pouring from the place in panic the Kliesman girl waited anxiously for the faces of her friends and, not seeing them, moved across the street. The two were killed by jumping from one of the windows.

On the sidewalk also was the sweetheart of Bertha Weintraub, who lives on 10th street. He was among the spectators and was horrified when the Weintraub girl leaped from an upper window. Both legs were broken and she was internally injured.

Nearly dead she was hurried to Bellevue Hospital with her sweetheart in the ambulance by her side.

Shrieks in Many Tongues.

One moment before 5 o'clock the "dinner way" of East Twenty-sixth street and the East River was crowded with employment and the short block between Fifth avenue and the river was thronged with shrieking struggling men and women, calling aloud in Russian and Italian, tearing their hair and rending their clothing. The first engines were arriving on the run from the scene of the fire.

From the hospital reserve assistants were rushed to the morgue and the police surgeons barely had darted out in the house that some one called out as dead might have survived the gruesome ride around the corner in the squads of reserves, first from the East Twenty-second street then from the Thirty-fifth street station. Captain O'Connor led his men against the host of the frenzied. Inspector Walsh appeared to take wider charge. Coroner Feinhauser came to the Coroner's office and the grim work of reviving and counting the dead was on.

It had not been since the fateful fourteenth day of June, 1904, that the street had seen such a scene. Then they brought the mangled bodies of those who had perished in the burning of the General Slocum, and last night similar tactics were pursued.

Morgue Overcrowded.

The thrush of bodies soon overcrowded the limited accommodations of the morgue and reserve was had in the pier shed which the departments of charities and correction use. Ambulances, dead wagons, patrol wagons, private vehicles impressed for the moment into service, were around the First avenue corner followed by mobs of weeping, screaming men and women, only to be stopped by the long cordons of police across the thoroughfare. Down into the large dark pier they trundled and then the charred, distorted, often almost unrecognizable bodies were lifted out and placed in a row, one, two, three, four, five, steadily, monotonously, one after the other, until as the hour went on the men at work counting had reached the number of 112, fourteen of whom were men and the remainder women and young women for the most part, principles bread winners for scores of little families, barely eking out the crutch of starvation in the tenements and slums of the city.

Under Inspector Walsh the police went at the grievsome work in a methodical matter-of-fact manner. It was foreseen that to permit any of the hundreds of men and women on the street to invade the pier, would mean panic and demoralization. So, although mothers and fathers, husbands and sweethearts, sisters and brothers were pleading and praying once to be allowed to find the body of the loved one, the police were obliged to turn deaf ears and keep all at a distance.

Pay Envelopes in Dead Hands.

Men who have been hardened by years of experience to the scenes of suffering, policemen and morgue attendants were selected to go down that long and growing line of bodies to find, from the lacerating marks or articles of identification. The search of the body of an unrecognizable form of a young girl would reveal a ring, perhaps a pocketbook clutched in a death grip, or an article of dress torn out of the way, a peculiar shoe, something, and it would be carefully noted.

In almost every hand of the women could be found a pay envelope or a fragment of a pay envelope and in many of the cases, keen eyes could discover through the smudge and black a name, half a name, a first name. Behind the searchers came other morgue attendants carrying huge bundles of white shrouds, which mercifully were spread over the blackened and dead forms.

All results were taken to a central bureau, where they were carefully tabulated, and then policemen walked up to the swaying crowds at First avenue.

Like a Plague City.

The scene resembled that in a plague-stricken city, where men go about crying "Bring out your dead!"

At the coroner's men went about crying aloud, "Who seeks a girl with a ring with the initials 'G. K.'?"

A shriek above the roar of the crowd would be heard and a woman would stagger forward, or a man, perhaps. Another man would cry, "Who seeks a girl whose pay envelope bears the name of 'Kaplan'?" An old woman and her husband here crept forward, and, hearing the name repeated, turned without a word, swayed a little and left on her face.

One man and woman with the frenzy of grief, dashed through the policemen's fighting, tearing and screaming. The policemen themselves, almost overwrought, let them go and they rushed into the pier. Their eyes ranged wildly. They were Mrs. Josephine Panno of No. 49 Stanton street, and her son-in-law. They were seeking her daughter, Mrs. Jane Bucalo, eighteen years old, whom they knew had been seen alive for the last time in the struggling crowd. Mrs. Panno, unheeding the kindly restraining hands that were held forth to her, walked down the long line of the dead and finally with the light of hope in her eyes. Another wagon arrived, men drew forth another body. She gasped and then turned again. There was still hope. But the strain had been too much for her son-in-law. Suddenly he shrieked aloud, and began tearing his hair. Another moment he fainted, reeled and fell face forward, a mantee.

The wagons still rolled in, the list of dead still swelled. The mob struggled and fought. The efforts of several hundred policemen to hold them back.

GRAPHIC STORY TOLD BY GIRL WHO ESCAPED

By ETHEL MONICK.

One of the girl employes who escaped.

NEW YORK, March 25.—What has happened is like a dream. Looking back over it, I cannot realize that I have been through the terrible disaster; that many of my girl friends are dead and that I escaped. I was in the first elevator load of girls that came from the ninth floor of the Triangle Waist Company.

"The first I knew of the fire was when I saw smoke. I was on the ninth floor. It was just two minutes of five o'clock, and I had on my hat and coat. The cashier had just asked me to go up stairs and get another girl's pay envelope for her. I said: "Why it is only a couple of minutes yet and I want to get away early," because we were going to work to-morrow. I wanted to accommodate her, but am glad now that I did not because if I had gone to the office floor, like the others I would have had to jump for my life.

When I saw the smoke I turned to one of the girls who was putting on her hat and she said, "No, that is the steam!" But I turned and looked and I looked again there was fire all about us. I first ran into the hall. There were a dozen there before me and a hundred followed, all screaming.

Fire Seemed Everywhere.

There is a door in the hall where a man stands and searches us at night to see that none of the girls carries home any lace in her pockets. The door leads to the stairway to the floor below. It opens inwards, and the crowd against it prevented it being opened. Then I ran to the elevator. The other door is by the freight elevator. By this time it seemed there was fire everywhere.

There was a crowd at the elevator and when it came up the girls piled in. It was shored along. When it was full and the man started down a half dozen girls jumped in on top of our heads and more climbed on top of the elevator cage.

The elevator man ran us down. When I reached the street girls were already jumping from the ninth and tenth floors. I ran across the street and looked up. Two girls I could not recognize through the smoke were standing in the window holding hands. I saw them jump and turned my head.

When I looked again they were on the sidewalk and there were others jumping. It was the most dreadful sight I ever saw. I saw a forewoman whose name I don't know go sine came through the air all doubled up and saw her strike on the pavement.

All I could see for several minutes were the girls I had worked with jumping from the windows, and all I could hear was their cries as they came through the air and hit the sidewalk with a sickening thud.

Girls Had No Chance.

The place was a fire trap. The girls stood no chance. In the few minutes that we waited for the elevator the girls piled to the windows for the fire escape to the rear. There were a hundred trying to get through the window at one time. Some of the girls never left their machines.

That any got out is the wonder of it all.

The company had the eighth, ninth and tenth floors. On the lower floor were the cutters and some operators. The cutters were all men. I think there were fully 500 girls on that floor. Then on our floor were five or six hundred. As a fact, I don't know how many there were except there were sold to be 1500 girls.

On the floor above there was the office and shipping rooms and more girls. The place was overcrowded with machines. They were set facing each other, so that the girls sat in rows with their backs to each other, and faced girls who whose backs were to other girls. The aisles were between the girls, and there was not room to walk through unless you squeezed through sideways.

When the cry of fire was raised the girls in the aisles stood up, and this blocked them. Then there were girls who had knocked off work and were getting their clothes. Some of the girls just stood still and wrung their hands.

Then there were the pressers. Most of these were old women. None of them could get away, because it was a battle to get anywhere, and oh, these poor old women! I don't think any of them—there must have been fifty—got away.

Everyone that did not get to the fire escape and get down or to the elevator or the stairway on the eighth floor had to jump. There was not a chance, I think, for all to jump, because fire was every where and girls were at the windows and they were crowded so no more could get there.

I saw a lot who got out. I saw Harry Blank and Bernstein, Sarah, the shop room girl, Dinah the bookkeeper and her sister, and, for a time I thought Pauline Greenman had escaped, but one of the bodies I saw was hers.

Five minutes before I had been standing upstairs talking to her and then to see her dead in the street was terrible. They talk about girls working in the south there and say the building is fireproof and there is no danger, but that place was a death-trap. I know I am lucky, but I can't understand it all. It is like a dream, an awful one.

COMPANY HAS BIG TRADE IN THE NEW ENGLAND STATES

The Triangle Waist Company has no Boston representative at this time, according to the statement made to the AMERICAN last night by Monie Rosnosky of Columbia road, Dorchester, former representative for this company.

"The Triangle Waist Company is one of the largest waist manufacturing companies in the country," said Mr. Rosnosky. "The firm did a $2,000,000 business last year. The members of the firm are Louis Harris and Max Blank. The New England business amounted to $200,000 last year. I should estimate that 1,000 people were employed by the Triangle Waist Company.

"I never noticed any fire escape," Mr. Rosnosky replied when asked where the fire escapes on the buildings was located.

"I don't remember ever seeing one," he continued. "The only way to get down was by a narrow staircase, two feet wide, about twenty-five feet from the corner of Washington Place and Green street on the Washington Place side. Towards the corner came two passenger elevators which in case of fire would act as a shaft for the flames.

"There was also a freight elevator in the back at the opposite corner.

"The building was Nos. 15, 17, 19 and 21 Washington place and covered a quarter on Green street, and the building had a frontage of fifty feet on Washington place and about 150 feet on Green street."

"Were there any fire extinguishers around, or, in fact, any apparatus that might have been used in putting out a fire?" he was asked.

"There may have been, but I don't remember any," he answered. "In fact, I remember that I was on the eighth floor at work that they need to use the freight elevator in addition."

LAW STUDENTS HELP SAVE GIRLS ON ROOF

NEW YORK, March 25.—The most thrilling rescues from the fire were made by students of the University of New York. One of the college buildings adjoins the burned building. Employes to the number of about fifty, who found escape from below cut off climbed to the roof through the scuttles and waited their fate.

The students at the alarm of fire turned their attention to rescue work, and when they gained the roof of their building found girls huddling in groups on the roof of the burning building. They bridged the distance between the two roofs with ladders and by daring and heroic work rescued every person on the roof of the burning building.

When the fire had been checked and long after the work of rescue of any person left in the building had become hopeless, a count was made of the bodies on the sidewalk and it revealed the appalling total of sixty-two.

Fire Chief Croker, who had to send in four alarms to subdue the fire in this "fireproof" building, was told of the count. He shook his head. "That won't cover it. There are more up there," pointing to the blackened ruins of the top story, "and more on the stairs and more in the area way. It will be more than a hundred."

But even the chief's estimate was too low, for he soon discovered when his men who were penetrating every quarter of the building began to return with reports. The figures leaped by tens and twenties, until the estimate of probably 150 fatalities was not considered too high.

Of these about eighty-five per cent. were women. On the ninth floor groups of bodies were found near several of the window doors. These were the younger girls and the old women employed as pressers, who had not been strong enough even to battle their way to the outlook and take the murderous chance of the leap to the street.

Little Work for Doctors.

Ambulances were summoned from all the hospitals, but the doctors had little work to do because there was no escape for those penned in upstairs and left to the mercy of the flames, and only a few had breath left in their bodies after taking the frightful leap from the high windows.

Great throngs began to gather and the police reserves from the surrounding precincts were called to hold the crowd in check and establish fire lines before the relatives and friends got the news of the disaster and began to gather.

The bodies were arranged in long rows on the sidewalk outside the building and the two big search lights of the fire department were called into play to light firemen in their search for the dead on the upper stories. The night was one of tragedy and sorrow that those who witnessed will never forget. The wails of the bereaved women and children who had heard of the fire and had come in search of their own could be heard a plaintive note above the hum and clank of the engines.

Patrol wagons brought several bodies to the street. They were filled and numbered and sent away to the Charities pier at the foot of East Twenty-sixth street, twelve coffins in each patrol wagon. At the pier the bodies were taken out of the coffins, laid in rows on the pier and covered with a white sheet to hide if possible the marks of their suffering. The wagons were sent back with the coffins and came back again with them filled.

Everybody was searched for effects or jewelry that gave any clue to identification and these articles were placed in an envelope bearing the same number as that given the body when it was placed in a coffin at the scene of the fire. The same system of identification was employed after the Slocum disaster, the only great fire disaster that ever the company had with the murderous fire of to-day.

Relatives and friends were directed to go to the pier by the police all over the city, and the first arrivals stormed the doors of the pier. Reserves were called out and police lines established at First avenue. Thousands were waiting there at midnight.

The building in which the fire occurred is a ten story brick structure on the Northwest corner of Waverly place and Greene street. It extends half way to Waverly place along Greene street. There is an alleyway between it and the next building, that which fronts on Waverly place, and is used in part by the law school of the New York University.

The three upper floors of the building were occupied by the Triangle Waist Co. Below them Meyer Brown & Wallach have a factory. The first floor is the Fur Exchange, Bernstein & Meyer, cloaks and suits, have the second floor. Harris Brothers, clothiers, have the third and Morris Bloom, clothier, the fourth.

All these houses had closed to-day when the fire occurred on the eighth floor where the Triangle Company was rushing full time and where the operators were to have reported to-day for work.

Pimples Off In 5 Days

The New Calcium Sulphide Treatment Does Wonders to Every Kind of Skin Eruption.

Trial Package Sent Free to Prove It.

You don't want to wait forever and a day to get rid of your pimples or other skin eruptions. You want to get rid of them right now. Next week you may want to go somewhere where you wouldn't like to have to take the pimples along.

You can get rid of them just in time by taking Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

These wonderful little workers have cured bad boils in three days, and some of the worst cases of skin disease in a week.

They contain as their main ingredient the most thorough, quick and effective blood cleanser known, calcium sulphide.

Remember this, too, that most pimple treatments reek with poison. And they are miserably slow besides.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers have not a particle of poison in them. They are free from mercury, biting drugs or venomous opiates. This is absolutely guaranteed. They cannot injury harm but they always do good—good that you can see in the mirror before your own eyes a few days after.

You'll no longer be humiliated by the sight of a splotchy face. Don't have strangers stare at you, or allow your friends to be ashamed of you because of your looks.

Your blood makes you what you are. The man and women who forge ahead are those with pure blood and pure flesh.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will make you happy because your face we'll be a welcome sight not only to yourself when you look into the mirror, but to everybody else who knows you and talks with you.

As Quickly As Water Dissolves Sugar

About The Time It Takes For A Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet To Work On The Food And Bring Relief.

TRIAL PACKAGE SENT FREE.

There is no long wait between the time you take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet and the feeling of relief it will bring to an overloaded stomach. It gets busy in a jiffy and quickly sets things to rights in that tired and disordered stomach. It goes right at the work of digesting the food it finds lodged there and in no time at all has things on the move—the gases cease forming, the breath is sweetened, the coating on the tongue disappears and you are no longer conscious that you even have a stomach.

That is one of the chief recommendations for Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets—that they don't take forever to accomplish the purpose for which you need them. It is just as if you put an extra stoma'h on two to w rk when yours needed help. You can't continually overload your stomach and expect it to always smile. It is going to get rebellious and sulky after awhile and refuse to go on being driven to do double work. You must use it occasionally—not by starving and thereby weakening yourself physically—but by using a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet to do the work of digesting your food.

These tablets contain all the active elements of the natural stomach juices and will alone and unaided digest food just the same as the gastric juices. And nothing could be more harmless than these tablets. They do not affect the system in any way—do not cure nor say ailment except as they digest food. Use them freely.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by all druggists everywhere. Price, 50 cents per box. A trial package will be sent if you will write F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

HOLOCAUST WARNING SOUNDED FOR BOSTON

Necessity for Better Building Regulations Seen by Mayor and City Commissioners.

MAYOR FITZGERALD, Building Commissioner Everett, Fire Commissioner Daly, Schoolhouse Commissioner Logue and other city and State officials, discussed last night the New York holocaust and the lessons it ought to teach the people of Boston and the Legislature of Massachusetts.

The Mayor and Commissioner Logue declared that the lesson of the hour was the necessity for a "fire hazard" bill, among other things forbidding the further use of the wooden shingle. Building Commissioner Everett made the astonishing statement that there are many such fire traps in Boston. New ones are being discovered every day. Modern office buildings meet every requirement, Mr. Everett said, the trouble coming from old buildings, which are suddenly remodelled for manufacturing purposes. Not only his own inspectors, but the men of several city departments, including the fire department, are constantly on the watch for these traps. Mr. Everett asks the aid of the general public in this work of detection.

New York Commissioner's Advice.

Rhinelander Waldo, Fire Commissioner of New York, who is stopping at the Hotel Touraine, got his first news of the fire from the AMERICAN. Between the bulletins Commissioner Waldo expressed his opinion that the principal lesson from the fire was the need of a high pressure service, and of its absolute need here in Boston.

Expressing his personal sympathy for the survivors and his deep regret for the great loss of life, Mr. Waldo did not attempt to conceal his satisfaction with the report that while the first alarm was not sounded until 5:18 p. m., the fire itself was under control at 6 o'clock. The New York commissioner passed up the subject of exits and fire escapes, declaring that in New York the number and adequacy of these avenues was entirely in the hands of another department than his own.

Mayor Fitzgerald had just concluded a speech, at the flower show in Mechanics Hall, when a copy of the AMERICAN was handed him. The Mayor read the story of the New York fire."Awful!" he exclaimed, "awful!"

"Dorchester and South Boston are bound to go the same way," said the Mayor. "Unless something is done, both sections of Boston may meet the same fate as did that New York factory. More than buildings is at stake. Human lives are the question; not money.

"I think that the people will now come to see that the city should appropriate more money for the Building Department. I hope the members of the Legislature will see the necessity of passing the 'fire hazard' bill, and that the citizens will stand back of me in the appointment of more building inspectors.

"The business men are bound to take steps in the matter. There is no question about it."

"Terrible!" Says Governor.

Governor Foss said: "It's terrible. I am so shocked I don't know what to say. I do not think such a thing could happen in Boston. I certainly hope that the investigations of the Fire Hazard Commission will bring about a state of affairs in which such a catastrophe would be impossible."

Many buildings in Boston are not properly equipped with fire escapes or other means of egress, but the horror with the loss of many lives would be possible in Boston. So said Building Commissioner Arthur H. Everett. His department, Mr. Everett said, with the co-operation of other city departments, is finding such fire traps every day.

"Under the law," said Commissioner Everett, "every building in Boston must be equipped with two separate means of egress. These means must be made to comply with the best judgment of the building commissioner. The building department has enlisted the aid of the police, fire, water, public works and water department, and, in fact, every department of the city, in locating buildings which are fire traps.

Find Fire Traps Daily.

"The owner of such a building cannot be prosecuted until he refuses to comply with the law, and he will not comply with the law until the building commission gets after him. It costs him money to make the required alterations.

"Every day the employes of this department and other departments report to the commissioner several buildings which lack the required means of egress. Some days as many as a half dozen such cases are reported. We make an investigation and prescribe the required alterations. We seldom meet opposition, although the owners of buildings dislike the idea of spending money for such work.

"Outside fire escapes are always necessary. If there are two broad sets of stairways in the building, the conditions are usually sufficient to comply with the law. In many buildings, veritable fire traps, which we are constantly discovering, there is only one staircase, and this is narrow.

"In cases like these it is necessary to immediately build a fire escape or another staircase. Different conditions require different means of egress. This was perceived when the law was enacted and all orders for changes in buildings are, therefore, left to the discretion of the building commission.

"Here is an instance: A building which was occupied by a small number of persons several years ago is now occupied by several hundred employes. The conditions of the building were such as to comply with the law several years ago but now-short-handed. The Mayor is fully alive to the situation. Mr. Everett will have more inspectors.

"I wish I could say as much for suburban Boston, but in all truth I cannot. I dread to think of what may happen in my own section, Dorchester. Some of us have been endeavoring to get a law that will forbid the roofing of houses here with wooden shingles. We would not insist upon slate. Anything will do that is incombustible. I regret to say that certain interests are opposing us, but we are still hopeful.

"If we do not get some restrictive legislation along this line, Dorchester and the other suburbs will remain a prey for the first chance fire that comes along in a good breeze. Then look for another Chelsea.

"Only a day or two ago Mayor Fitzgerald called a conference on the subject. It was attended by Superintendent Rourke, Building Commissioner Everett, Fire Commissioner Daly, Dr. Durgin of the finance board and myself. All the city department chiefs are cooperating. All are trying to locate fire-traps and report them. One unusual thing about it is that the new Fire Commissioner is continually investigating along this line. Under the law Mr. Daly is not required to do this work, but whenever his men find bad conditions of the fire-trap order, they are promptly reported to the Building Commissioner.

"Somerville, Brookline and I believe Holyoke, have put the ban on the wooden shingle. All have passed a second-class fire and experience. I am hopeful that the Legislature will come to the relief of suburban Boston before the lesson is driven home by fire."

General Josiahus H. Whitney, chief of the Boston Police, agreed with Commissioner Logue that in Boston not any building employing more than ten persons above the second floor must have two ways of exit, one of which may be a fire escape over a private way. One of the exits must be inclosed within a brick wall.

"The district police," General Whitney said, "have no authority along this line in the city of Boston. In the rest of the State we see to it that if there are not adequate exits, they must be made. In factories there must be so many inches of wall space for each one hundred employes, and all factories above three stories in height must have outside fire escapes. Our desire and the general policy in Massachusetts is not to have tenement flats that is, a fire escape built within a tenement. Under the modern construction of this kind may be found in the Wood hills at Lawrence."

President Charles H. Winslow of the Board of Fire Underwriters expressed the opinion that Boston has a very good system for fire protection in its water facilities and in its fire department. Mr. Winslow said he was not acquainted with conditions of modern buildings in regard to fire hazard.

"We see what we can do to improve conditions," said Mr. Winslow. "If facts about wood shingle roofing that might be defective in fire protection come to our notice we would notify the city."

Need of a High Pressure Service for Boston is Emphasized by Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo of New York. Visiting Here

Commissioner Waldo was seen early in the evening, before the extent of the catastrophe was known. He had been in telephonic communication with fire headquarters in New York. Regarding the fire he said:

Mr. Waldo's Statement.

"I have just talked with New York over the long distance telephone. They believe there may be as many as 120 bodies in the ruins, in addition to the sixty known to be dead from jumping from windows. There may be 200 girls who have perished.

"While I know New York well, of course, I cannot recall just now whether the building where the fire was is a test.

"Our fire ladders are made to reach to the seventh floors, about eighty-five feet. We rely greatly, for extinguishing fires on upper floors, upon the high pressure service, with standpipes and hose on the upper floors.

"The building in question is located, as you know, in the wholesale dry goods district.

"If there is any question about fire escapes on the building that is up to the Building Department.

"As a matter of fact, the Fire Department has all the actual fire-fighting equipment it needs. They give us all they want.

Asked if the law compelled builders to put fire escapes on the front as well as the rear of the buildings the commissioner replied that this was governed by the construction of the buildings and its surroundings.

High Pressure Invaluable.

"So far as the Fire Department is concerned," he continued, "I understand that this was a four-alarm fire, that its first alarm came in at 5:15 and that it was under control by 6 o'clock. If this is so it speaks well for the good work of the department.

"The law puts the question of fire escapes and exits up to the Building Department. The Borough Presidents also have more or less to say about it.

"The high-pressure service, which you should have in Boston, is invaluable. It gives a 300-pound pressure, all the water you need."

Fire Commissioner Daly said:

"The fire department has neither authority over nor responsibility for building conditions or exits. As a matter of fact, the Boston fire department, in addition to its regular work has one in for building inspection and fire protection. When defective conditions are found, we report them to the owner, the fire underwriters and the building department.

"This tragedy in New York emphasizes the importance of the proper maintenance of the fire department. I have estimated $1,000,000 as necessary for the expenses of the department for the ensuing year. I hope the city government will see fit to vote the appropriation."

Charles Logue, of the Schoolhouse Commission, who was at one time acting Building Commissioner, expressed the hope that the New York tragedy might give it cause to get legislation at the State House.

"Conditions in downtown Boston," Mr. Logue said, "are incomparably better than conditions in New York. A fire the other day in a tenement house in Roxbury served to wake Boston up, however, to the fact that Building Commissioner Everett

INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, SOURNESS, GAS AND STOMACH-HEADACHE GO.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch Gas and Eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of Dizziness, Heartburn, Fullness, Nausea, Bad taste in mouth and stomach headache this is Indigestion.

A full case of Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents and will thoroughly cure your out-of-order stomach, and leave sufficient about the house in case some one else in the family may suffer from stomach trouble or Indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly printed on these 50-cent cases, then you will understand why Dyspeptic trouble of all kinds must go, and why they usually relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or Indigestion in five minutes. Diapepsin is harmless and tastes like candy, though each case contains power sufficient to digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat, besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but what will please you most is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for Biliousness or Constipation.

This city will have many Diapepsin cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be cranky about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever try a little for Indigestion or Gastritis or any other Stomach misery.

Get one now, this minute, and forever rid yourself of Stomach Trouble and Indigestion.

PLAYWRIGHT WALTER ANSWERED BY MAYOR

"Shameless Vituperation," Mr. Fitzgerald Says of "Easiest Way" Author's Criticism.

Mayor Fitzgerald last night replied to a letter addressed to him by Eugene Walter, author of "The Easiest Way," which the Mayor banished from Boston, declaring that Mr. Walter's communication was "shameless vituperation." Mr. Walter's letter was published exclusively in yesterday's AMERICAN. In it the playwright scored Mayor Fitzgerald and declared that Boston was about the worst city morally in the United States.

This is Mayor Fitzgerald's brief answer.

The Mayor's Statement:

"I have read Mr. Walter's letter, published on the first page of the evening AMERICAN.

"After perusing this mass of shameless vituperation, I am less interested in the attack which it makes upon the morals of the city of Boston than in the writer's state of mind. The proposition is plainly the work of a man who is beside himself with rage.

"I leave it to the sober sense of this community, and of the entire nation, to say whether a mind that could concoct such a letter and spread it before the newspaper public, which includes persons of all ages, is capable of distinguishing between morality and immorality on the stage.

"Mr. Walter has sat down at his desk, pen in hand, and written his own condemnation."

What the Author Says:

Here are some of the statements made by Mr. Walter in his letter to the mayor:

"You take the reputation of a man (David Belasco), who has builded it more carefully and longer than most men have sown, and you endeavor to place him on the level of a common seducer of public morals.

"You condemn Miss Frances Starr and her associates as accessories before and after the fact in an effort to debauch public taste and morals and American art.

"Boston has dividends the reputation of being the centre of culture and the centre of illiteracy and vice in the United States.

"The Common has been turned into a pasture for the exploitation of sexual perverts and exhibiting prostitutes.

"In no place in the United States is the social condition so rampant as in your own city.

"I know conditions in Boston, because I have personally seen them.

"An echo of Boston's vice reaches the very uttermost limits of Alaska and the furthermost corners of Southern California.

"The country at large suffers from the exodus of prostitution, thievery and crime that spreads its contagion from your centre of culture to the furthermost corners of the United States."

NEW ARREST MADE FOR SELARO DEATH

Pasquale Dellecrge, one of the two men wanted by the Watertown authorities for being implicated in the killing of Dominick Selaro a week ago last night at No. 810 Mount Auburn street, Watertown, was arrested by Lieutenant Thomas Lyons and Patrolman Andrews of the Watertown police at the corner of Arlington and Mount Auburn streets, East Watertown, last night. He will be arraigned on the charge of murder in the Waltham District Court to-morrow morning.

Before Selaro died in the Cambridge Hospital he gave the names of three men whom he alleged were the assailants. Nicolo Selano was arrested last Sunday morning. Nicolo Lombardo, another of the men, is still sought by the police. Both of the arrested men are suffering from gun shot wounds in the legs.

ROCK RIDGE HALL AT WELLESLEY DESTROYED

Main building of Rock Ridge Hall School for Boys, destroyed by fire at Wellesley yesterday, and snapshots of students making merry with rescued musical instruments while the blaze was in progress. By Photographer Waldron of the AMERICAN staff.

Main Building of Exclusive School for Boys Burned with Loss of $50,000.

ROCK RIDGE HALL, in Cliff Road, Wellesley Hills, the main building of one of the most exclusive preparatory schools of the same name for boys in the world, was destroyed by fire yesterday, the fire starting while the school was in session.

Some of the books and school paraphernalia on the first floor were rescued by students and teachers. Everything on the second and third floors was burned. The damage was estimated at $50,000.

Lack of fire fighting apparatus was responsible for the fire getting such headway before competent help arrived from Newton.

The blaze was very spectacular and the greatest excitement prevailed while great tongues of flame shot from the roof and the sixty boys, assisted by scores of men and women of the neighborhood, dashed wildly about in an effort to get out of the burning building some of the belongings of the students.

Masters Help Boys Out.

Dr. George R. White, who has been at the head of the school for ten years, and R. H. Ritchie, one of the masters, helped get the boys out of the burning building.

Miss Lillian O'Donnell, a maid employed in the school, went to the attic and found it in flames. Ralph Cotter, a student, telephoned for the fire department and the alarm was sounded through the school. This was at 9:30 o'clock.

With the sound of the fire gong the boys got to work with the school fire fighting apparatus. A line of hose was run through the building and into the attic. From there the boys scrambled onto the roof and began to direct a stream through the flames were breaking through next to the main chimney.

In the meantime Stanley Wood, nephew of Major-General Leonard A. Wood, rang a sounded the alarm from Box No. 214. Chief Field of the Wellesley fire department sounded two others when he arrived and also telephoned to Newton for assistance.

The Newton steamer had difficulty in getting up steam and by the time they had been done the upper part of the building was burned. The flames ate their way down from the top to the first floor.

Stanley Wood was cut on the face. He was in his room trying to get his clothing together when a piece of the skylight fell and cut his head. He was but slightly injured.

Walter McKenzie, a mechanic, had his hand severely cut when he broke the window in the basement in trying to get at the hose.

Studies Will Go On.

The building destroyed was occupied by sons of wealthy people. Among the most prominent were: Hiram Ricker, Jr. and his brother Charles L., sons of Hiram Ricker, the Poland Spring man; J. R. W. Johnson of Missouri, H. E. Felt of Tacoma, Wash., R. L. S. Fowler of Cheyenne, M. Hoyt Gannon of A. A. McCandless and J. A. Gilman of Honolulu, and J. A. Zinn, son of a Boston florist.

The burning of Rock Ridge Hall will not interfere with the studies of the boys, as Recitation and Hawthorne Halls were untouched and recitations will be held in these buildings on Monday as usual.

The building will be rebuilt at once. The students were to have begun their Spring vacation next week. The building was fully insured.

Students were at the school from all parts of the world. One was from Spain, another from Mexico, a third from Honolulu and nearly every State in the union was represented.

An alarm was sounded, brought many girls. They were all eager to help the boys save their property and the teachers had their hands full trying Appeals for Labor Aid.

Miss Rebecca Weiner, aged twenty, a garment worker from Hartford, Ct., yesterday called at the numerous trade union headquarters with an appeal for some definite action by local labor leaders that will prevent the alleged exportation of Boston men by local agencies for use as strike-breakers in her home city. The Hartford strike, it is said, is seriously handicapped, she said, by the large number of Boston men sent there at the behest of the proprietors of the struck shops.

2000 BLOCK ADAMS SQUARE DURING FIRE

Crowds Returning From Theatre Make Difficult Work for Fire Fighters.

Over 2,000 people, returning from the theatres, watched the firemen fight a fire that started at 10:30 o'clock last night on the ground floor of the building at the corner of Washington street and Adams square. The crowd was so great that all car lines were blocked and the fire apparatus had difficulty in moving into position. The fire did $2,000 damage.

The building is of brick, four stories high. In the basement is a barber shop. On the first floor is the establishment of Irving Davis and the Morris Syndicate, clothing merchants. The Dana Clothing Company occupies the second floor, the third is vacant, and the rooms of the Building Trades Credit Agency are on the fourth.

The fire started in the clothing store on the ground floor. Several men were in the barber shop below, but knew nothing of the trouble till a passing pedestrian saw the flames. An alarm followed in due time, and when the apparatus arrived, the flames were spreading rapidly. All the large plate glass windows on the street floor cracked and fell. Streams of water playing through the openings soon had the fire under control.

Chief Mullen in Peril.

Chief Mullen and Deputy Chief Sennott were on hand, and had a narrow escape from serious injury when one of the huge glass windows fell to the pavement a few inches from where they were standing.

The flames swept through the first floor of the building, which was filled with clothing, piled in counters. It is thought that only the suits on top of the piles are burned, but no figures can be obtained as yet. Chief Mullen estimated the total damage at $2,000. This includes smoke damage to the upper floors, and the damage in the barber shop from water that leaked through the floor and brought the occupants scurrying to the street.

Origin a Mystery.

The origin of the fire is not known and there is a certain amount of mystification in connection with it, which may lead to an investigation. The quick work of the department averted a serious blaze, and several members of the Portland Fire Department, who were in the crowd and watched the fight, took occasion to congratulate Chief Mullen on the way the fire was handled.

When the members of Ladder Co. No. 1 from Friend street arrived at the fire, one of them found the door of the clothing store open. This is to be regarded as something out of the ordinary, in view of the fact that the street is full of pedestrians at that hour of the evening. The police were on duty all night.

Deputy Chief Grady called the attention of the Protective Association officials to the fact that the door was found open. "Yes," said Grady, "I was informed that the door was found open. We have been unable to find anyone who will admit that they were in the store at any time soon before the fire started. There appears to be no explanation for this condition." Deputy Chief Grady reported this to the Protective Association.

SOMEONE GOT FOSS' OVERCOAT; NOW WHO?

At the opening of the flower show in Mechanics' Building last night someone got Governor Foss' coat. No, not his goat; his nice, black, waterproof, $60-topcoat.

In connection with the disappearance of the Governor's coat it is stated that the last person to leave the coat room before the Governor went after the coat was a man named John F. Fitzgerald, who lives on Rockwell street, Dorchester, and who is a city employe, Mayor.

Famous Bostonians are getting involved in coat scrapes of late. It was only a fortnight or so ago that Henry M. Whitney, speaking at a legislative committee hearing in the State House, started to wear with the coat of a stage-struck citizen instead of his own.

The sequel of events at the flower show was thus: Governor came in with Mrs. Foss. He put his coat in an anteroom back of the stage. Mayor Fitzgerald came in then with four men. They put their coats in the same room. A policeman was "up stage."

The Governor spoke and departed with his friends, via the coat room. The Governor and friends got to depart.

But he couldn't find his coat. The horrible suggestion was made that the last people in the coat room was the Mayor and party. Nevertheless, gone was His Excellency's garment.

Finally Fitzgerald borrowed a coat from Chester I. Campbell, manager of the show, and went out to his limousine. Then it was found out immediately that the Governor decided he could get home without his overcoat, so he borrowed Fitzgerald's over-coatless.

The whereabouts of the missing coat was a mystery.

OLD HARVARD MEN MEET.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Sixty members of the Harvard Club and their guests gathered at the clubhouse and listened to speeches of the day in Cambridge. President Lowell of Harvard spoke on a "Present Duty of Harvard"; Henry Lee Higginson, '55, of Boston, gave a brief talk on "Harvard a Great Men;" Mitchell Dawson, president of the Associated Harvard Clubs, spoke on the various alumni of that organization; Edward S. Martin of New York read several verses which he had written for the occasion; James Byrne, a New York lawyer, made a brief speech in commemoration of the forty-fifth annual dinner and Franklin D. Roosevelt, the insurgent New York Senator, made an appropriate address.

HUNT IN WOODS FOR LYNN BANDITS

The woods between Lynn and Salem were searched all yesterday afternoon and last night by police from both cities, ready to shoot on sight two bandits who had exchanged revolver shots with John J. Middleton, superintendent of the Judkins Ice Company. Middleton came upon the pair in the company's blacksmith shop and drew on them. They fired at him. Several shots were exchanged. One of the bandits was hit, judging from the cry of pain he uttered. After a running revolver duel with Middleton, the two intruders fled into the Salem woods.

The police of Boston and other places in this section of the State are on the lookout for the pair. Hospital surgeons and other doctors are asked to inform the police of any suspicious man or pair of men seeking medical aid for gunshot wounds.

When Middleton came upon the men in the blacksmith shop one of them had a gun in his hand. Oil had been sprinkled about the floor, it is thought that the pair intended to set fire to the place after robbing the safe.

JOHN SHEPARD 77 TO-DAY.

Brother Two Years His Junior Also Celebrates.

John Shepard, head of the Shepard-Norwell Company, and his brother, George W. Shepard, also connected with the company, celebrate their birthdays to-day. This doesn't mean they are twin brothers. By a coincidence the two were born on the same day of the year, and because of this they have often been twitted by their friends as being "twins." John Shepard is seventy-seven to-day, while George W. Shepard is observing his seventy-fifth birthday. The former will celebrate with a small dinner party to-night in Charleston, S. C., with Mrs. Shepard. They are on their way to Boston from Ormond, Fla. This week Mr. and Mrs. Shepard will visit Washington. Mrs. Shepard is home to be back at his office in Boston to-morrow week.

GOV. FOSS A WALKER.

Out Tramping Every Day to Keep Off the Doctors.

From 8 to 9 a. m. Governor Foss may be found any day now taking his morning constitutional in Jamaica Plain. He is doing it for his health. Strenuous labors at the State House, lasting often from 9 o'clock in the morning till 9 o'clock at night, have made it necessary for the executive to get some outdoor recreation to balance the pressure of indoor applications to State affairs.

The morning walk is the smallest answer. About 8 a. m. the Governor starts out for a constitutional about Jamaica Plain, ending at the State House in time to be there between 9 and quarter past.

Politicians can take the tip that the best time to see the Governor during the cold and a nasty office time is to trail him through Jamaica Plain.

in Malden Poorhouse.

Friendless and suffering in poverty, Professor William A. Carnes, noted throughout the country as a blind tenor singer, died yesterday at the Malden almshouse. He was seventy-seven years old and a native of Ohio. He had been in the almshouse since 1895.

ATE 24 FRIED EGGS; WON FIFTY DOLLARS

George Ward of Brockton is New England's latest champion eater. He won a $50 bet in that city last night by eating eighteen fried eggs in fourteen minutes. Having won the money, Ward ate six more eggs and a pound of cheese to satisfy his hunger.

Ward lives at No. 654 Main street, Brockton, and is a trolley conductor on the Old Colony line. In the car barn one night an argument turned on how many eggs a person could eat, and the fried-egg-against-time match was pulled off.

Ward won the money in a canter. He ate fourteen eggs in fourteen minutes, going three eggs over the mark in one minute less than the stipulated time.

Then he said: "I'm kind of hungry. Just bring me a half a dozen more fried eggs and a pound of cheese. And better bring a cup of tea, too. Water is kind of thin with the eggs." Then he finished his meal.

With the eggs, the cheese, the tea and the money, Ward strolled home.

MILL LEAGUE REAL THING IN BASEBALL

Just Watch Woonsocket, Milford, Hopedale and Whitinsville This Summer.

The real habitat of the baseball fan and the real fan himself have been discovered. The place is the Blackstone Valley, and the inhabitants are fans from the cradle to the grave.

Boston, New York or Chicago followers of the game are mere "pikers" in the fan line compared with those enthusiasts who follow the fortunes of the Mill Baseball League, risk their hard-earned pay in wagers with an abandon that shames the bettors in the big city grandstands, have a line of ball slang peculiarly their own and in short make the umpire in manage that makes the bleacher talk in the big league towns sound like the prattle of the infant class in a Sunday school.

"Talk about baseball being a democratic institution! Take in one of the games in the Mill League in Woonsocket, Milford, Hopedale and Whitinsville, and you'll see it the really, truly democracy of baseball—the millionaire mill owner and his poorest paid employe, the town banker and the grocery store clerk, the rich and the poor, the social elect and the town drunkard side by side, all rooting for the home team in the common language of baseball.

Some democracy that!

Some Sporting Blood.

Talk about your sporting blood. There's where you get the real article. Take Hopedale, the home of the Drapers and a few other millionaires, and Milford, the rival town across the river, with not quite as many millionaires, but just as red-hot sporting blood when it comes to backing the town ball nine. There's been the hottest kind of rivalry between these towns for years and years. This year it's gone up to sizzling heat. For Milford's team has been admitted to the Mill League, and the Mill-ford fans say that means they don't do to Bristow Draper and his Hopedale aggregation. So they're going to support a strong team, too, even if there are no millionaires in the big down-town pockets. Milford has a baseball association. A majority of the males in town are eligible and the initiation fee amounts to a sizable sum. The only kicks are from the fans who know that isn't ready and willing to stand for an assessment of $2 or $5 any time throughout the season if the team needs it.

Four-Team League.

Last year the pace set by the league was a stiff one. It was so hot in fact and it proved such a drain on the fans that it was decided that a four-team league was about the proper thing and the Rebels of Thompsonville and the Berkeleys were dropped. That left Woonsocket, Whitinsville and Hopedale in the league and Milford was added on the assurance that it had a team that could go the limit when it came to supporting the Milford nine.

Whitinsville, which boasts some of the best baseball talent in the league, is again after the pennant this season. It won it last year, but the old Whitinsville aggregation big money to do it. Under the new arrangement Whitinsville will have to provided he hasn't reported for duty, is to be taken back on the old terms. Not more than one declave game has been won by former star players in the big leagues.

$7,000 in Salaries.

The other teams in the league assert that it cost Whitinsville at least $7,000 in salaries to win that pennant last season. Whitinsville says it cost it the cost was no object. It isn't uncommon for a star pitcher to get $40 or $50 per game, $35 to $50 for one game in the Mill league and $25 to $30 per game for the rest of the games $250 or $300 each in salaries alone.

Baseball has not only Milford's rivalry to contend with this season, but the Whitinsville fans are determined that the pennant will not go to Hopedale if money and enthusiasm can keep it in Whitinsville. There's exactly the same feeling in Woonsocket. Even as until May 6, when the season opens, and all through the summer right up to Labor Day, you can bet there will be but little heard in those four towns excepting baseball talk. The season's over and done with now, but a lot of big league players are being signed and started on the rolls of the colleagues and semi-professional players.

BIG FIRE IN PROVIDENCE.

Blaze Starts in Drug Store and Causes $25,000 Damage.

PROVIDENCE, March 25.—Fire that started early to-day in the drug store of Elmer W. Robinson on Watchemoket square swept the square and did $25,000 damage before the fire was controlled. The Providence postoffice was burned.

The fire was caused by the explosion of chemicals in the basement of the drug store with four other men. He rushed to the postoffice, extinguished the flames, but another bottle of acid exploded and he was badly burned about the face and hands and driven from the store. Thomas A. O'Neil, clerk in the postoffice, rescued the mail sacks and books of the postoffice.

The building where the fire started is of three stories and wooden. It was occupied on the lower floor by the drug store and postoffice and on the upper floors by the East Providence Business Men's Association, the Young Men's Republican Club and the Progressive Club. An adjoining building, used as an Armenian boarding house, was also destroyed.

MISS CONSTANCE ZERRALIN, WHO WILL NAME THE SOMERSET

MISS CONSTANCE ZERRAHAN

Beacon Hill Girl Is Champion Chopper

Chopping wood is the newest fad of the athletic society girl of Boston. Miss Isabel P. Curtis, daughter of Mrs. Greeley S. Curtis of Mt. Vernon street, is the champion feminine woodchopper of the fashionable Lenox colony in the Berkshires.

Miss Curtis is staying at Stockbridge because she likes the outdoor life and crisp air there better than she does the social whirl. She takes long walks, trams of a dozen miles is an afternoon's nothing to her.

But chopping wood—saving wood, too—is where she gets the most fun. Only one other day she bought herself a new axe, her old one was well nigh used up.

Miss Curtis is quoted as saying she can cut down a tree as well and as quickly as a man can. When it comes to sawing wood she is an expert. She recently sawed several cords of hard wood for Charles H. Wills of Wills Ian just for exercise.

CHILDREN RESCUED IN CAMBRIDGE FIRE

Four children were rescued by policemen and two families were driven into the street by a fire that destroyed the upper part of the three and a half story frame building at No. 22 Vincent street, North Cambridge, last night. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kleinberg, who occupied the second floor, were overcome by smoke.

The Kleinbergs and their four small children were asleep when the flames, starting from a front room, spread with great rapidity. Seeing the blaze, Patrolmen Kemple, Fabry and Degan reached the house before the fire department apparatus. With the assistance of Mrs. Reid, a neighbor, the patrolmen fought their way to the upper story of the house and pulled the children from their beds. Mr. and Mrs. Kleinberg were aroused after some difficulty. The policemen each carried a child to the street. Reid carried out the fourth child.

The fire started from a lamp which exploded. The light had been left burning for a boarder who occupied a room in the Kleinberg flat. The damage was $1,000.

BOSTON SOCIETY GIRL TO CHRISTEN BOAT

Miss Constance Zerrahn Will Be Sponsor for New Merchants' & Miners' Ship.

MISS CONSTANCE ZERRAHN, daughter of Frans E. Zerrahn of Overbrook, Milton, will be sponsor for the new steamship Somerset of the Merchants and Miners Transportation Company when that vessel is launched next Wednesday at the yards of the New York Shipbuilding Company at Camden, N. J.

Miss Zerrahn, who is still in her teens, made her debut into society early last Winter. She is a niece of Ellerton P. Whitney, one of the officials of the line.

The launchings will take place at 12 o'clock, noon. The Somerset will go into the water fully equipped with all necessary machinery and will operate between Baltimore, Savannah and Jacksonville, in the Southern service of the "M. & M." This vessel will carry a crew of forty men, under command of Captain Pratt. It will accommodate 140 cabin passengers. A wireless outfit and other up-to-date equipment will be installed. The dimensions of the Somerset are: length 338 feet, beam 46 feet, tonnage 4,200.

FITZGERALD STARS IN WRESTLING BOUT

Mayor Fitzgerald's middle name isn't Francis. It's Gotch-Hackenschmidt-Roller and all the rest of the collar-and-elbow artists. The Mayor is a wrestler, physical as well as political and theatrical.

Few Bostonians know this. Ex-Mayor John F. Feeney of Woburn didn't know it. Joe Maynard never believed it, even after Feeney told him. But it's no. Feeney and Maynard can prove it by their bumps and bruises.

Just after office hours one day this week ex-Mayor Feeney strolled into Mayor Fitzgerald's office in City Hall and challenged him to a wrestling match.

Four minutes later Feeney was face up on the floor with the Boston Mayor holding both his shoulders and one hip to the boards. As near as Feeney could recall it, Mayor Fitzgerald had given him the toe clutch, the half-Nelson, the headspin, the flying mare, harem skirt and the double cross.

"That trip to Palm Beach," remarked The Terrible Fitz, "just put me in fine shape."

Joe Maynard, president of the Democratic City Committee, heard about it. When Jim and Joe Maynard were out of trip to Worcester, and were putting up at the Bancroft House, they had a story from the Mayor's room and yanked His Honor from the bathtub last night. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kleinberg, who occupied the second floor, were overcome by smoke.

Joe can't say whether what followed reminded him more of the famous fight of Sodom and Gomorrah or the explosion of a cannon cracker. When the pajamaclad Mayor had come up from the floor, he allowed that he'd had all the plain and fancy stuff in wrestling that he'd been claiming Day.

That's Fitz, the Wrestling Wonder.

Exhibition by Team.

The newly formed degree team of Franklin Lodge No. 39, Degree of Honor, will give its first exhibition drill before Beacon Lodge No. 3, A. O. U. W., in Priesthood Hall, No. 575 Tremont street, at 8:30 tomorrow evening.

DIAZ SELECTS NEW MEXICAN CABINET

De la Barra for Secretary of Foreign Relations and Limantour Keeps Finance.

By E. T. SIMONDETTI,
Editor of El Diario.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

MEXICO CITY, March 25.—President Diaz selected his new cabinet to-day, but announced late to-night that he would not make its personnel known until Monday, owing to the fact that some of the portfolios have not been finally accepted by those to whom they were offered, and there were some minor difficulties which would be disposed of to-morrow in conference. It is not likely, however, that more than one or two changes will be made in the cabinet as it stands to-night.

In this cabinet it is stated on good authority, Francisco de la Barra, now ambassador to the United States, is secretary of foreign relations, replacing Enrique Creel; Jose Yves Limantour remains secretary of finance; Gonzales Cosio remains secretary of war and navy; Demetrio Sodi, now chief justice of the supreme court, replaces Justino Fernandez as secretary of justice; Norberto Dominguez, now general postmaster general, becomes secretary of communications and public works; Manuel Marroquin, the engineer who is directing the construction of the Mexico city water works, becomes secretary of agriculture and development in place of Olegario Molina, the new secretary of public instruction is Jorge Vera Estanol, the young lawyer who recently defended the government in the suit brought by the English American Cotton Raising Company of Tlahualilo.

The selection of the Secretary of the Interior to succeed Raymon Corral has not been made. The new members of the cabinet are all Limantour men, which shows where the strength of the new government will lie.

CAMBRIDGE MEN GO UP.

Promotions Made on the Police Force.

Mayor Brooks of Cambridge last night announced the first of the new promotions in the police department of that city. The promotions will take effect at 8 o'clock this morning. Lieutenant David A. Stevens of Station 1 has been appointed captain of Station 4. Lieutenants James McNulty of Station 4 and James A. Cox of headquarters will be on duty at Station 4. Sergeant William H. McMenimon of Station 3 has been assigned to headquarters with a rank of lieutenant. Sergeant James M. Keaney has been appointed lieutenant at Station 1. Sergeant Patrick F. Murray of Station 4 has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant at Station 1. Patrolman Richard Aylward of Division 1 has been appointed sergeant at Station 3. Patrolman John H. Winslow of Station 1 has been appointed sergeant at the same station.

BIGAMIST GOES FREE.

Belief That First Wife Was Dead Saves Him From Jail.

Although David Chennerhouse was found guilty of bigamy in the Chelsea police court and was sentenced to one year in the House of Correction, the sentence was suspended, and he is now a free man. Chennerhouse married Catherine McManus October 27, 1890, and became the husband of Mrs. Sarah Lambert November 3, 1906. Several months after his first marriage he disappeared, and just before his second marriage he was informed that his first wife was dead. The sentence was suspended because of his belief that his first wife was dead at the time of his second marriage.

Kenny secretary.

Wife Calls Husband Drug Fiend ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ Says Littell "Weeps at Will"

Man and woman principals in unique divorce suit.

GEORGE E. LITTELL

MRS. AGNES M. LITTELL

Woman Seeking Divorce Says Her Spouse Can "Talk Black Into White."

CHARGING that her husband can talk black into white and uses quotations from the Bible to assist him, can cry real tears at will, that he is a drug fiend, and that he will not live in one place long enough really to get settled down, Mrs. Agnes M. Littell has filed a suit for divorce against her husband, George N. Littell, both occasionaly of this city. Lawyer Harvey H. Pratt is attorney for the woman.

"My husband can talk black into white," said Mrs. Littel. "He works on people's sympathies, because he can cry without even pinching himself. We were married here in Boston in 1903. My husband is a graduate of Michigan University and a clever man. We lived in Boston for a while, and then started to move around. I suppose we have lived in a hundred different places. Just when we were getting settled somewhere, he would come home in a great hurry and say that he had a business call to some other town and we would have to move. I never suspected anything really wrong. Whenever I asked questions, he would tell me just to keep quiet, that everything would come out all right and for me not to bother. He had been passing himself off as an army officer.

"I came East from Tacoma. I have some property up in Maine, and I went there for a while, and then came back to Boston. He came to New York and then came on here. He found me, and after he had begged and pleaded with me I agreed to take him back. We lived here for a while, but finally I left him.

"He used to drink terribly, used drugs and abused me. He was cured of the morphine habit. Later I found a hypodermic syringe in one of his pockets.

"The third of last March he left Boston. I had decided to get a divorce, and to get him back where I could serve the libel on him I wrote to him, and he came back. I got his address through his uncle.

"Mr. Littell is a mighty clever talker. He knows the Bible by heart and talks it. To hear him you would think he was a saint."

DARING THIEF GETS RINGS WORTH $300

FALL RIVER, March 25.—While two policemen were standing across the street and hundreds of shoppers were passing, a daring thief entered the Oriental store of A. D. Sorub, in North Main street, tonight, and stole a $300 tray of rings from the show window. He escaped before the theft was discovered by the proprietor and his clerk. Two women who saw the man help himself to the tray of rings told Mr. Sorub, after the man had disappeared in the throng of shoppers.

The store is in the heart of the brilliantly lighted business section of the city. The two policemen, who were on the opposite side of the street, were called, but found no traces of the stolen rings or the thief. The man was forty years old, well-dressed and smooth-shaven.

GOOD SUNDAY WEATHER.

Tomorrow Warmer but Unsettled, Says the Prophet.

To-day being Sunday the weather is going to be good. That's what the weather man promised last night. He also said that to-morrow would be warmer but "unsettled." Reports from over the country last night showed that the weather was working both ends against the middle. It was snowing in the Rockies. Rain was falling in the Gulf section. It was hot along the Mexican border but cold in Maine.

MUNICIPAL REFUSE PROFIT DIVISION

A cooperative [illegible] the municipal refuse will divide the profits, and at the end of the life of the contract the plant will [illegible] the property of the city [illegible] of the refuse problem which Councillor Matthew Hale will present to the City Council at its meeting to-morrow.

As the matter stands at present the city is in the market to have this work done at the lowest possible figure, as a result of the trouble over the acceptance of the Boston Disposal Company's bill. Councillors Hale and [illegible] have worked out this [illegible] and they have ready presented it to the Finance Commission for investigation. They are both satisfied that it is most advantageous plan yet offered to the city for the economical maintenance of [illegible].

The plan if put into operation will provide that any company which agrees to do the work will furnish the plant, agree to dispose of the garbage and other waste in a sanitary manner, allow its books to be examined by the city, allow its plant to be examined by the city to prevent any unnecessary depreciation and at the end of the contract turn over the entire plant to the city.

FLOWER NAMED FOR FOSS AT BIG SHOW

Five thousand people attended the opening of the National Flower Show in Mechanics Hall last night. The feature of the evening was the christening of a new plant, one of the Croton species, named the "Foss" Croton, in honor of Governor Foss, at the request of Robert Craig, who originated the new Croton in a Philadelphia hothouse. An orchestra played "Hearts and Flowers" during the brief ceremony of christening. The "Foss" plant is small, having the appearance of a rubber plant.

Some of the exhibits were of Dutch, Italian and rose garden, and there was one bower of floral beauty showing a wax bride and her attendants burdened down with blossoms.

Besides Governor Foss, Mayor Fitzgerald and Congressman McCall were present and all spoke. The show, which will last through this week, is under the auspices of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists. The show will be open to [illegible].

SEEK CAMBRIDGE PLUMS.

Large Number Are Running for Office.

A new city government is to be inaugurated in Cambridge one week from to-morrow. For the first time in years the Democrats will be in a strong majority. Already applications are being made for the appointive offices under Mayor-elect J. Edward Barry.

The principal appointment will be that of city treasurer. The present treasurer is W. W. Dallinger. The aspirants for this position are the present Mayor, William F. Brooks, Timothy W. Good, principal assessor, Henry J. Cunningham, and John J. Ahearn.

These men, it is said, will not be disturbed: Clerk of Committees John McDuffee, City Clerk Edward J. Brandon, and Mayor's Clerk Edward A. Counihan.

There are over twenty aspirants for the position as city messenger.

OLDEST TEMPLAR IS DEAD.

Charles Henry Dillaway, the oldest member of the Boston commandery of the Knights Templar, is dead at "Longridge," his beautiful home on Worcester street, in Wellesley Hills. The funeral will take place at the home, Monday, at 11 o'clock. Burial will be at Woodlawn cemetery.

He was in his eighty-seventh year, and death is attributed to "old age." His wife died about two years ago, and it is believed that grief over her loss induced the first breaking up of his robust constitution. His health was further impaired when he broke his leg about a year ago.

Mr. Dillaway retired from active business about two years ago, being succeeded by his grandson, C. Warren Dillaway, as average adjuster of losses on vessels, with offices on Kilby street. He was born March 14, 1825, on Salem street, next to the old Christ Church in the North End, where he lived for years and where his father and grandfather resided.

DARTMOUTH BALLOON RACE.

Hanover Club Will Compete Against Winners on May 20.

HANOVER, N. H., March 25.—President Pearson of the Dartmouth Aero Club announced to-night that the club will enter in a balloon race against Williams in Pittsfield on May 20. The race as originally scheduled called for Amherst as the opponent, but there was a faculty objection at Amherst.

MIKADO SENDS MESSAGE TO PRESIDENT DECLARING JAPAN IS BENT ON PEACE

WASHINGTON, March 25.—A message from the Emperor of Japan to President Taft, in which the ruler of the Japanese country assures the head of this government that the relations of Japan with America were never more cordial and peaceful, was given out today at the White House.

The giving out of this letter, signed by the Emperor [illegible] at the White House [illegible] President Taft [illegible] Ambassador Uchida and Ambassador De La Barra of Mexico.

Talk Mexican Situation.

It is believed that the Mexican situation and the message that was received from the Emperor of Japan were talked over.

This is the text of the Emperor's message:

To the President of the United States of America:

I was greatly pleased to receive your very kind message, conveyed to me through my ambassador in Washington, and I thank you for it. I was already well convinced that you have given no credence to the false and wicked report regarding Japan, but it was especially a source of profound satisfaction to receive from you the assurance that the relations of amity and good understanding between our two countries were never better than at this time. I am most happy to be able to and entirely reciprocate that assurance.

(Signed) MUTSUHITO.

Japan Is Warned.

Ambassador Uchida and Ambassador De La Barra arrived at the White House at different times but they left together. The three men were in conference for fully an hour.

The speech of Sir Edward Grey on Anglo-American arbitration has caused a great deal of comment here. It is believed it may have given a hint to Japan that in case of a Japanese war with America that England would not support Japan.

It is believed here that the Japanese government was not slow to understand what it is believed Sir Edward Grey meant and that Japan acted accordingly.

President Taft had previously, it is believed, assurances of the friendship of Japan and it is thought that this induced him to request Governor Johnson of California to stop anti-Japanese legislation in that Japan [illegible].

Protest by Japan?

There is a rumor in Washington to-night that Japan has protested to the United States against impending anti-Japanese legislation in California, and it is known that urgent dispatches were sent yesterday from the State Department to Governor Johnson of California. That these dispatches related to Japan, and that they were sent with the consent and approval of President Taft is presumed.

Dispatches from California state that the communications from the State Department to Governor Johnson were in the nature of appeals against any anti-Japanese legislation or agitation at this time. In California Governor Johnson was represented as having declared that he would willingly make public the communications if President Taft consented. At the White House to-day it was declared that it was not desired to have the dispatches made public at this time.

Secretary of State Knox will be back in Washington on Monday, when he and the President will confer on the situation. A statement may then be made. The fact that M. Uchida, the Japanese ambassador called on the President on Wednesday and that within two days after his call these dispatches were sent is what leads to the broad conjecture that Japan has at last laid before the administration representations regarding pending measures in California. The AMERICAN correspondent learns that one of the measures, which it is feared was loaded with dynamite, concerns the alien ownership of lands. Japan has a fear that this bill will be levelled specifically against her citizens that it will contain a specific restriction against the ownership of land in California by Japanese subjects or that it will be retroactive and that in consequence the Japanese who already own land in California will, in the event of the passage of the proposed law be compelled to dispose of their holdings at a sacrifice. There is reason to believe that Japan would be satisfied if the law should [illegible].

JAPANESE RULER'S MESSAGE OF PEACE CABLED TO TAFT

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The following [illegible] President [illegible] at the White House [illegible]:

To the President of the United States of America:

I was greatly pleased to receive your kind message, conveyed to me through my ambassador in Washington, and I thank you for it. I was already well convinced that you have given no credence to the false and wicked reports regarding Japan, but it was especially a source of profound satisfaction to me to receive from you the assurance that the relations of amity and good understanding between our two countries were never better or more cordial than at this time. I am most happy to be able to and entirely reciprocate that assurance.

(Signed) MUTSUHITO.

[illegible] some time in the near future may make recommendations to Congress on this subject. At the time the President took office former President Roosevelt had just come through with a dispute with the officials of California on this point of alleged Japanese legislation and Mr. Taft in his inaugural address laid stress upon the necessity as he expressed it, of some legislation that would remedy the condition.

Reason For Manoeuvers

Advices from London are to the effect that it is the general belief there that President Taft sent the Army to the Mexican boundary to influence the Mexican government [illegible] consummation of the [illegible] would have given [illegible] unusual advantages [illegible].

It is also asserted that had the treaty been signed it would have required a similar agreement [illegible] Mikado a coaling station [illegible] Pacific [illegible] full right of fortification.

In diplomatic circles it is understood that the negotiations between Mexico and Japan were made known to President Taft and that he took drastic steps [illegible] Mexico of his protest.

It is understood that the action of President Taft resulted in breaking off the negotiations between Mexico and Japan.

Health and Beauty Notes

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

Mrs. Ruth O.: There can be no possible excuse for a woman of your age neglecting her complexion. It is a duty you owe yourself to look as youthful and charming as possible. I would not encourage you to use face powder; it rubs off too easily, shows too readily and does no permanent good. The use of a good lotion made by dissolving four ounces of spurmax in half a pint of hot water and adding two teaspoonfuls of glycerine will take away that coarse, sallow, oily look to your skin and make it soft, pink and youthful. This lotion is an excellent beautifier and whitener and will last longer than powder. It is splendid for cold sores, freckles, pimples and preventing chapping in the winds.

Virginia: Lack of exercise and eating too much solid food during the winter months account for your sallow, pimply complexion and loss of energy. What you need is a reliable system tonic and blood purifier. Try this: Dissolve an ounce of kardene in a half pint alcohol, adding one-half cup sugar and hot water to make a full quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal and in a short time you will feel like a new person. It will give you rich, red blood, fill you with energy and put the color and look of health into your face.

Sibyl H.: It is a shame for a girl of your age to have wrinkles. Try this complexion jelly and you will be surprised how it will clear your skin and smooth out those horrid wrinkles. This greaseless cream jelly can be made by mixing one ounce of almozoin with half pint cold water and two teaspoonfuls of glycerine. Stir and let stand over night. This makes a splendid and inexpensive cream jelly. It will clean the pores, keep the skin free from blackheads, and is splendid for chapped hands and face. I find it excellent for reducing the size of large pores in the skin, and for removing tan, freckles and certain types of pimples. I recommend it for massage purposes, it leaves the skin soft and smooth and contains no grease or oil to cause hair to grow on the face.

Mrs. Edith: You can rid the chin of that fuzzy growth without resorting to the painful electric needle if you get from your druggist an ounce of powdered delatone and with a little water mix into a stiff paste enough to cover the offending hairs. Spread on thickly and let remain two or three minutes, then rub off and wash the skin and you will find the hairs are gone. While delatone is a trifle expensive it does the work quickly and seldom requires a second application.

Isabel R.: Don't be discouraged because your hair is dull, faded and streaky, as you can restore its youthful, glossy blonde tint if you steep an ounce of marlax in a pint of water. You should first wash your head with canthrox, rinse and dry, then wash with the marlax tea, rinse again and dry carefully. Do this, and at little cost and effort your hair can be kept a light, golden shade without the least possible danger to hair or scalp.

Miss B. K.: The worry and bother of wearing hair nets and veils to make your hair stay up and conceal that dull, stringy, unkempt appearance you speak of could easily be avoided if you would stop shampooing with soap. The alkali in soap irritates the scalp, makes the hair streaked, dull, coarse and brittle. If you will shampoo every two weeks with a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water, your hair will always be light, fluffy and easy to do up, besides looking decidedly neat. This shampoo lathers abundantly, dries quickly, stops itching scalp and cleanses as no other shampoo will. The luxury of extreme cleanliness of the scalp which comes from the use of this shampoo has made it so popular that many of the best hairdressers now use it exclusively. It is inexpensive and can be bought at any drug store.

S. D.: Yes—nothing is a more important factor in a beautiful face than bright, clear, youthful eyes. You should use regularly a good eye tonic. Get an ounce of crystos; dissolve it in a pint of water and use two or three drops in each eye daily. It will clear and strengthen your eyes, remove all signs of weakness and inflammation and make them bright and sparkling. For weak, dull, expressionless eyes I think this tonic simply wonderful. It is very soothing and is fine for those who wear glasses.

E. B. S.: Although gray hair is sometimes caused by worry, it is generally due to a diseased scalp as indicated by such symptoms as dandruff, itching scalp and brittle, falling hair of which you speak. To restore your scalp to a healthy condition, first keep it clean by shampooing every ten days or two weeks with canthrox, then massage the scalp, using a good quinine hair tonic. You can prepare the tonic yourself by adding one ounce of quinzoin to a half pint of alcohol and a half pint of cold water. This is much better than most ready prepared hair tonics, as it contains nothing to make the hair coarse, sticky or stringy. It will remove the dandruff and stop your hair from coming out. You will find it an ideal dressing for the hair and very refreshing to an itching scalp.

Mrs. L.: What a shame to have wasted so much money in vainly trying to get rid of your fat. I have a formula that some of my close friends have tried with marvelous success. Here it is: Dissolve four ounces of parnotis in 1½ pints hot water; when cold strain and take a tablespoonful of the liquid before each meal. This remedy will not injure your health or force you to starve yourself in order to get back your comely figure. It cuts down fat rapidly, is not expensive and will surely help you.

LICENSE PUBLICITY BILL LIKELY TO BECOME LAW

After a Generation, Legislature Seems Ready to Demand Open Hearings by Board.

O'MEARA FIGHTS PUBLICITY

Commissioner Doesn't Want the People to Know What Goes on in Police Circles.

THERE seems to be a fair chance that the publicity bill, providing for open hearings of the Licensing Board, will get safely through this session of the Legislature. This measure, or one along the same lines, has been presented regularly each year for the last fifteen or twenty years, and now it seems that the members of the House and Senate are determined that the Licensing Board shall be compelled to conduct its hearings in public.

If this good news is not too good to be true, it is safe to say that it is the only publicity bill of a dozen or more presented to the Legislature that will be passed. All the other publicity bills have received the usual legislative knock-out drops and the remains will be interred in catacombs under the State House.

"Persistent Publicity."

Last Fall, when the politicians were surging up and down the State, there was a grand old slogan about "Persistent, Pitiless Publicity." It sounded well. The politicians liked it. It rolled over their tongues like a brook rippling over pebbles. The public liked it. It promised great things. But alack, and alas, it has taken its place with that other immortal lemon strip tossed to the perspiring hoi polloi by the picturesque son of Commodore Vanderbilt—"The public be d——d!"

[illegible] Vanderbilt, with his hat on the back of his head and a dollar perfecto at an angle of forty-five degrees in his mouth, had been approached by the above mentioned perspiring hoi polloi for an increase of wages. He was told that the public would back up the demands of the workingmen. It was at this point, without even removing his dollar perfecto, that he threw the above quoted choice morsel of citrus fruit to those who had dared to appear before him. And he rolled on in his golden chariot and the hoi polloi perspired, sneezed, wheezed a little, and forgot all about it.

O'Meara in at the Finish.

So it is with our epigrammatic lemon. "Persistent, Pitiless Publicity," now numbered 11,999 in the State House Chamber of Horrors.

Police Commissioner O'Meara put the finishing touches to the bill providing for publicity in the police department. He appeared before the committee the other day and after carefully shaking the moth balls out of his frock coat, cleared his voice, wheezed for a moment or two and then declared that nobody wanted publicity in the police department except one newspaper—meaning the AMERICAN.

Every year he had been forced to come before the legislative committee and explain that it was much better to conduct all police business in the dark and in secret, rather than in daylight, so that the public that pays for the police department might not know what is going on. It is all a beastly bore for us fellows of the Union Club to have to explain these things year after year, don't yer know, and it is sincerely hoped that this will be the last time that the measure will be brought forward! And more drool on the same line.

Dare Not Copy Outsiders.

It had been suggested that in all the European cities—London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, and in New York, Chicago and other American cities—trials of policemen were conducted in public and there was no secrecy at all or dark chamber methods in these places.

But the Commissioner airily declared that Boston copied nothing from New York or other cities and that the police department here was unlike any other police department in the world—which is true—and that for thirty years, or indeed ever since he migrated from Prince Edward's Island, he had been studying newspaper methods and police methods, and he was convinced that there are many things that the public should not know about and that open trials would only aid in giving the newspapers more sensational news to publish.

"And," said the Commissioner, loftily, with his brow arched, "too much sensationalism in news is already being published."

Committee Acted Unfavorably.

There were some earnest advocates of the measure, but it was clearly to be seen that the committee was unfavorable. The members yawned, sneezed, hiccoughed, and Commissioner O'Meara, as smug as the cat that swallowed the canary, finally gathered himself together, made a few more remarks and left the operating room where the poor old publicity bill lay manhandled, cocained, chloroformed and with every bone in its body broken.

It wasn't halcyon and vociferous occasion. No requiem was sung, but it so happened that a leaden footed messenger boy, ambling idly through the hall, was piping that old familiar lay handed down by the Roman legions to Nero, long before he twanged his fiddle and Rome was a heap of ashes. It was this:

"Hail, hail, the gang's all here.
What the h—l do we care!"

This is usually more effective when given in chorus and in close harmony, with or without the barbershop chord.

Truancy Cure of Boy by Luther Burbank

Scientist Will Give Him Lessons in Botany and Plenty of Sunshine in California Garden

LOS ANGELES, March 25.—Donald Mi[illegible], a ten-year-old boy of Pasadena, has a golden opportunity to become famous by becoming a specimen for Luther Burbank, the plant wizard, of Santa Rosa. Young Donald is a very ordinary boy with an unusual penchant for truancy. It is because of his extraordinary record as a truant that Donald attains fame.

As to whether or not Donald really becomes a matter of history will depend on the ability of the plant wizard to put his ideas of child training to practice. Burbank has revolutionized plant life and now he believes that he can overcome truancy, and to do this young Donald will pose as "the specimen."

It is understood that the boy will be given sunshine, a reasonable amount of work, several hours play a day, a course in botany—and at least an hour's walk through the wonderful garden of Santa Rosa.

DEATH STOPS A WEDDING.

Worcester Girl Left Heartbroken Over Demise of Fiance.

WORCESTER, March 25.—Miss Signe Erlandson, a young Swedish girl of No. 94 Fraternal avenue, is brokenhearted over the death of Oscar Sigfrid Nordin, whom she was to have married within a few weeks. Their engagement was announced several weeks ago. A home in the Belmont Hill district had been fitted up by Nordin and the young woman was preparing her wedding trousseau. But three days ago Nordin was stricken down with an attack of nephritis and removed to the City Hospital. Miss Erlandson was at his bedside daily.

Can't Leave Budapest to Attend Hearing in Newport.

NEWPORT, March 25.—The clerk of the Superior Court at Providence has received a [illegible] from Aurel Batonyi dated Budapest February 10, which includes a statement from his physician saying it is impossible because of sickness for him to answer in person the litigation brought by his former attorneys, Gardner Pierce and Thornley of Newport and Providence, who secured judgment by default. Mrs. Foss, wife of the Governor of Massachusetts, has returned to Boston. She and the Governor may spend a part of the Summer here.

NEW ENGLAND APPLES BEST

Noted Orchardist Says They Are Big Money Makers.

It was asserted by John H. Hale that New England apples are far superior to those raised in other parts of the United States. Mr. Hale is a famous nurseryman and orchardist. He spoke yesterday on "The Horticultural Awakening," in Horticultural Hall, under the auspicies of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. "Here in New England there is a great field," said Mr. Hale, "for legitimate investment in our orchard properties if handled by men of intregity and wide experience."

GIRL SUES FOR $100,000.

Rosa Deutsch, Actress, Charges Breach of Promise.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Suit for $100,000 in which breach of promise is alleged was brought by Miss Rosa Deutsch, a chorus girl, against Harold Dady, son of a millionaire Brooklyn contractor and political leader. Scores of letters bearing such endearing terms as "Sweet Rose" and "My dearest Rose" figure in the case. The plaintiff alleges that she first met Dady in Havana. Subsequently Dady married an actress of "Parisian Widows" company.

TELEGRAPHERS TO STRIKE.

Operators on the Illinois Central Want Increase in Wages.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 25.—Charles H. Mulhall, chairman of the general grievance committee of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, to-day announced that the telegraphers on the entire Illinois Central system will strike March 30 if the railroad has not consented to the increase in wages on or before that time.

POLITICIANS THINK O'MEARA WILL STAY

Expect Gov. Foss to Reappoint Him Police Commissioner When Term Expires.

DOZEN OTHERS IN [illegible]

Executive Said to Believe in O'Meara Rather Than Favoring Any Democrat.

OBSERVING politicians expressed the opinion yesterday that Police Commissioner O'Meara is at present the most likely candidate to succeed himself of any who yet has been mentioned.

The Police Commissioner's term expires in June and, while it is not known that Mr. O'Meara himself is making any effort to be reappointed, some of his friends are very active in his behalf, and are urging before Governor Foss Mr. O'Meara's claims for the place.

It is said that several organizations throughout the city are earnestly working for Mr. O'Meara and that the Republican machine is friendly to him and hopes that he will be reappointed.

There are at least a dozen avowed candidates for the place other than Mr. O'Meara. There are perhaps twenty other patriots who stand with mouths wide open and with lightning rod grasped firmly in the right hand, hoping that a bolt from the blue will strike them.

O'Meara Against Field.

They all realize that while Mr. O'Meara is a passive candidate, he has at present the best of all the others, and later on they will probably unite against him for the common cause. Just now it is O'Meara against the field with O'Meara well down in the stretch.

Many reasons are given by Mr. O'Meara's friends and by Governor Foss's friends why O'Meara should be reappointed. He is a Republican, of course, as everybody knows. the term of office is five years and the salary $5,000 a year—a rather juicy plum in these days of high living. Governor Foss was not always a Democrat. He has known O'Meara for a great many years and he believes in him.

It is argued by those who assume to know that the Governor would prefer to reappoint O'Meara than take a chance with some Democrat who might become aggressive later on against Foss and use the police force as more or less of an adjunct to a political machine.

Refused to Resign.

Governor Foss has been led to believe that O'Meara has never permitted the police force to engage in politics in any way. O'Meara's refusal to resign before Governor Draper retired from office, so that Governor Draper might have appointed his successor, was regarded as an act of great dignity and high citizenship by Mr. Foss.

The fact that the city is wide-open, that burglaries, hold-ups and crimes of all kind were never so common has been pointed out to Governor Foss, and also the statement made by O'Meara that the police department is powerless to check crime. But Governor Foss, who sometimes quotes Scripture, refers to St. Paul and says, "None of these things move me."

O'Meara is rich and aristocratic. His associates are men who have nothing in common with the department that O'Meara is supposed to manage, and no word or suggestion has ever been made against his intergrity or his loyalty.

Suppression of "Easiest Way."

His suppression of "The Easiest Way" last week also impressed Governor Foss with Mr. O'Meara's sincerity.

These are the arguments advanced by the politicians, and in addition they point out that the Governor's Council which will have to confirm the appointment, is friendly to O'Meara and might refuse to confirm any other candidate.

At any rate, wise politicians at the present time seem to think that O'Meara has a better chance to secure the prize than any other man whose name has been mentioned.

15 WOMEN TO 1 MAN IN BOSTON CHURCHES

[illegible]

One to Four Ratio at Arlington Street; Big Tremont Temple Congregations.

FROM twelve to fifteen women to one man attend the Protestant churches in Boston.

Interesting figures [illegible] attendance in Boston were secured by Herbert F. Price, of No. 30 Winter street, who, with the aid of clergymen, has made a study of thirty-five different Protestant churches in this city.

One of the facts that he learned was that on a recent Sunday, when the weather was fine for [illegible], 807 members of the thirty-five churches investigated remained away from the services.

Here is the relative attendance of men and women in [illegible] churches:

Figures for Leading Churches.

Fifteen women to one man at St. Paul's.

Thirteen women to one man at Trinity.

Twelve women to one man at Tremont Temple.

Ten women to one man at the Park street church.

Five women to one man at the Old South Church.

Four women to one man at the Arlington street church.

The Unitarians have the largest attendance of men and the Episcopal and Baptists the greatest attendance of women.

Tremont Temple is the banner church for congregations. More than 2,000 are found in this place on a Sunday morning. The evening congregations often number more than 3,000. It has been noticed that the churches that are well advertised in the newspapers, or whose pastors through their sermons get into public print, have larger congregations than those who seldom use this agency.

Park Street Church, with a membership of 608 and seating capacity of 1,500, has an average congregation of 750. The Old South Church, having a membership of 915 has an attendance of 897 on the average.

546 at Shawmut Services.

The Shawmut Congregational Church on Tremont street, with a membership of 729 had an attendance of 540 at one of its services. The Phillips Congregational Church of South Boston, with a membership of 7[illegible] has an average attendance of [illegible]. The [illegible] Church of Dorchester with a membership of 1,094, has an average congregation of 456.

The Dudley Street Baptist Church, with a membership of 1436, had 870 present. The Methodist churches have no very large churches in this city outside of People's Temple on Columbus avenue. This church has a membership of 416 and has an average attendance of 301. This denomination has larger churches in Malden and Somerville than in Boston proper. The Bromfield Street Church, with a membership of 165, has an attendance of 218.

856 Average at Trinity.

The First Presbyterian Church on Columbus avenue has an average attendance of 917. Trinity Episcopal Church on Copley square, with a communicant list of 1,610, has an average attendance of 856. St. Paul's Church on Tremont street, with 600 communicants, has an average attendance of 432.

The Church of the Advent on Brimmer street numbering 1,073 communicants, has an average attendance of [illegible].

The Arlington Street Church has the largest number present of any Unitarian Church in Boston, with [illegible] Congregational Church on Exeter street [illegible]. A count showed 546 present on a recent Sunday at Arlington street and 456 at the South Congregational.

JANONIS, WANTED AS SLAYER, IS CAPTURED

Prisoner Attacked by Driver as Police Land Accused Man at Northampton.

NORTHAMPTON, March 25.—Felix Janonis, wanted for the murder of Frank Fomelon on March 17, was locked up in the Hampshire County jail here this afternoon. Janonis reached this city at noon, in charge of the State police who captured him to-day at Baldwinsville, in Worcester County. As the prisoner stepped from the train he was struck a severe blow in the mouth by Jeremiah Maloney, a driver of a grocery wagon.

The assault was committed in full view of about 200 persons who thronged the railroad station. Though the crowd made no show of violence and Maloney was quickly subdued, Major James McKay of the State police telephoned to police headquarters for assistance. A short time later Janonis walked out of the depot, handcuffed and surrounded by patrolmen. What prompted Maloney to attack the prisoner is a puzzle to the police.

Janonis was arrested shortly before 8 a. m. as he was opening his mail box [illegible] [illegible] Major M[illegible] and [illegible] of the State police [illegible] had been directed to the postoffice through a registered letter sent him yesterday.

Janonis secured a job in a chair factory at Baldwinsville, giving his own name. He also hired a mail box at the postoffice, again using his right name. Yet he escaped detection until the postmaster at New Bedford noticed a postcard addressed to Miss Janonis, sister of the prisoner in that city. It was signed "Felix." The two names aroused the postmaster's suspicion. He communicated with Sheriff Buckner of Hampshire County. The sheriff telegraphed Major McKay, who was in New York watching all outgoing ocean liners.

Despite the secrecy with which the police to-day guarded their movements, the news of Janonis's capture got noised about and a crowd gathered at the station.

MANY ARE DEAD IN DIXIE FLIER WRECK

Fast Train on Atlantic Sea Coast Line Drops From Bridge Into River.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 25.—The Dixie Flier on the Atlantic Seacoast line was wrecked near Ocilla, Ga., at 5 o'clock to-day, with heavy loss of life. Five hours after the disaster occurred ten [illegible] had been removed from the [illegible]. At that time it was believed that at least thirty persons had been hurt.

The wreck occurred where the railroad crosses the Alapaha River several miles south of Ocilla, and some of the cars plunged through the bridge and were covered by the water. It is stated that many have been drowned in these cars.

The bodies which have thus far been taken out were from the cars which were derailed and smashed. Among the known dead are Conductor Parnell and the fireman of the train.

Nine coaches left the rails, five of them being badly smashed, the other four plunging into the stream.

The [illegible] dead [illegible]

[illegible]

The scene of the wreck is one of the most desolate points of the road. The train after leaving Tifton was running at the regular schedule time, which is fast for this train. The trestle over the Alapaha River had always been regarded as one of the safest on the road.

Any accident that may have occurred to the trestle could hardly have been detected by Engineer Green as the big searchlight of his engine was plunged into the shadows from the moss covered trees at the approaches of the river.

Immediately following the news of the disaster relief trains were rushed forward. From Tifton and Savannah doctors, nurses and medical supplies were rushed to the scene.

The Dixie flyer was en route from Chicago to Jacksonville, Fla.

The scene of the wreck is fifteen miles east of Tifton and there the first news of the accident was discovered. Engineer Green and eight others taken from the wreck are believed to be fatally injured. Ten more are seriously injured. The body of the conductor has not been found.

The coaches in the river are under ten feet of [illegible].

The loss of life was largely in the forward cars [illegible]. The locomotive plunged through the bridge, carrying the foremost cars with it.

The Dixie Flier is one of the crack trains of the Atlantic Coast Line and is used by tourists between Chicago and Southern points. At this season of the year it usually carries a large number of passengers.

Nothing in Dickens [illegible] more horrible than the conditions that prevail if these charges be true—even in part.

United Clergy Demand Action.

Even if abuses and inhuman cruelties do exist, even if old fathers and mothers, whom somebody loves are being fed on rotten food, kept [illegible] with insufficient clothing or bedding, during our bitter New England days and nights—how is it to be proved?

Certainly the attendants charged with these infamies will not convict themselves. Who is to distinguish between the insane ravings of the maniac and the just complaint of some unhappy patient, perhaps [illegible] on the safe side of the line of sanity as not?

Whatever the truth, whether there be a deep searching into the conditions complained of, a pitiless probing into the administration of the hospitals and analysis of the system, enough has already been established and admitted by [illegible] officials to show that Massachusetts is twenty years behind most of the other States in methods and hopelessly in the rear on this question when compared with Europe.

The facts already in hand cannot be idly dismissed. They do not come from the insane. They are the testimony and written reports of the superintendents and physicians in charge of the insane asylums. It is of such a startling character, this disclosure, that it has moved Archbishop O'Connell and many of his clergy, the Rev. Dr. W. H. Van Allen, Dr. Samuel McComb, Dr. Vincent Y. Bowditch, Dr. L. Vernon Briggs and hundreds equally eminent to demand a change of method.

"I hope there will be an investigation. The citizens ought to demand that there be no limitation of this inquiry, as was indicated at the hearing before the committee on prisons Wednesday. Dr. Briggs is a splendid man; he has a great heart, he knows the abuses that exist. But he is wrong when he says an investigation would do more harm than good.

"I am a Republican. I am a close friend of the men high in Republican councils. It was this friendship which for years kept me silent. Too long did I listen to their plea that soiled Republican linen must be washed in private. It was my threat to Governor Draper to go on the stump and expose the rottenness of Danvers that caused him to drop Superintendent Page and the old Danvers board of trustees."

Mr. D'Arcy was asked to give specific instances of alleged "cruelty and graft."

"I could give you hundreds of them," he said, "but I will specify. Let the board of trustees of Danvers tell why they buy $35,000 worth of coal every year without weighing, without competitive bids?

DOCTOR PRESCRIBES CUTICURA REMEDIES

Says: 'I Have Great Faith in Cuticura Remedies Now that I am Convinced of their Wonderful Merits.'

"I wish to let you know of a couple of recent cases which I have beaten by the use of the Cuticura Remedies. Last August, Mr. ——— called on me and complained of trouble with a severe skin eruption. At first I could not understand the nature of the trouble, but had made a careful examination. I finally found it to be an occupation as he was a painter and decorator. It was especially in his woman form. It started with a slight eruption, and we did not attend to it, but it developed, shown small, hard and sunken—and the usual symptoms in this part were itching and burning with redness and the worst inflamed look. I prescribed Cuticura Remedies to be used freely. In a few days I got a report from him that he was receiving relief. I recommended him to always keep Cuticura Remedies on hand, and to use them at the first sign of any skin trouble. Mr. ——— has been using Cuticura Remedies ever since, and has not had any return of the trouble. Cuticura Remedies are the best I have ever used in my practice, and I have great faith in them now that I am convinced of their wonderful merits." (Signed) ——— M.D., Jan. 27, 1911.

GERMS TRAVEL IN AIRSHIPS

Millions of Microbes Ride on Golden Sunbeams

Dangers in House Dust and Street Filth—Scientific Objection To Kissing

The paragraphs quoted below are reprinted by permission from Hygienic Magazine, an article from Dr. Hinsdale of Ann Arbor, Mich.

"These soldiers of evil," the millions of disease germs constantly attacking the body, "are ahead of our armies in the way they are always travelling by airship. Everybody has seen and enjoyed the picturesque effect produced by a sunbeam falling askant into a darkened room, when, in the golden flood of light, tiny, airy dancing motes may be seen moving as though in some fantastic dance known only to the denizens of space. These motes are, however, globules and floating shreds of dust, and they contain, literally, billions of more or less deadly microbes. House dust is particularly dangerous. The housewife who shakes the rug from her window, or who has a carpet beaten on the housetop or in the back yard, contributes a swarming myriads of germs to the tremendous armies of our invisible enemies. House dust contains germs brought in from the street on shoes and on trailing skirts, germs from the droppings of horses (peculiarly dangerous microbes, some of these) and germs from the air (germs of putrefaction), and germs brought in by flies.

"Not only do we draw into our lungs with every breath billions of germs, but there are also microbes that live constantly in the saliva of our mouths, and these are often death dealers.

"Here is the scientist's real argument against the habit of kissing. Avoid the kissing of children upon the lips."

It must be remembered that while these germs are a terribly threatening our lives, there are defences provided by nature and by man.

One of the best of the latter is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is known the world over as the standard blood purifier and strong medicine.

If sarsaparilla is needed wherever disease lurks in the blood or in any part of the human system.

"The blood is really the power that builds up the body." Hood Sarsaparilla so fortifies the blood and strengthens the white corpuscles—"the little killers of the blood"—as to enable them to accomplish their great work of destroying the billions of disease germs and building up the body. It is the kind, in fact, of the one true blood purifier and spring medicine.

FRICK ACTS AS THE PATRON OF SWISS VILLAGE

Presents Its Church with Organ Because Children's Governess Was Christened There.

HIGH ART FOR A STABLE

Statue of W. K. Vanderbilt's Racer Seasick to Be Exhibited at Salon.

By VANCE THOMPSON.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, March 25.—Henry Frick of Pittsburg has given $3,600 for a village church organ in Switzerland. His timely gift came just as Maurice Barres had presented a petition signed by 200,000 to save the country churches of France.

The circumstances attending the gift are what puzzle our philosophers. The well known steel magnate sent the large check to the mayor and council of La Sarraz, an attractive but unimportant hamlet near Lausanne. He specified in the letter accompanying the gift that the money was for the purchase of an organ for the pretty village church whose rococo style caught the steel man's taste when motoring in Switzerland.

A Swiss governess from the village of La Sarraz is in the family of this man of steel, who, wishing to show his recognition of her faithful services to the younger members of his family, hit upon this method. The gift will make the young governess famous throughout the country around Lausanne.

Expect Frick to Attend.

Mr. Frick is expected to attend the inauguration of the organ next Summer.

J. Pierpont Morgan widened the boulevard of Aix les Baines because he walks there in April; Rodman Wanamaker built a communal school because the mother of his first wife lived in that commune, and now Henry Frick gives an organ to a village church because the governess of his children was [illegible] [illegible] in Americans.

Marble Glory for Racehorse.

Prince Troubetskoy has a rival in Herbert Hazeltine, whose parrot, panther and bluebird welcome the visitor to his studio. Troubetskoy's wolves and Hazeltine's panther are the talk of Paris. Hazeltine will exhibit sculpture at this year's Salon in a statue of William K. Vanderbilt's famous racehorse, Seasick.

Son of a Painter.

Herbert Hazeltine is from New York and Paris, and a son of the late William Stanley Hazeltine, the landscape painter. Young Hazeltine was born in Rome twenty-six years ago, and having completed his studies at Harvard, he put himself under the direction of Morot at Paris. He had made a specialty of racehorses. The young man is wealthy and he kept steeplechase horses in order the better to advance his studies.

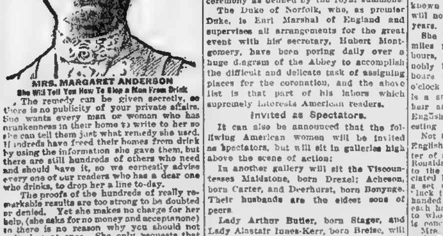
He has also sculptured Maintenon, another great winner of William K. Vanderbilt's. Maintenon has won altogether over $300,000. Among other important works to Hazeltine's credit are the favorite horse of Queen Alexandra and two polo groups. Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, formerly Miss Vanderbilt, has her studio near Hazeltine's at Auteuil. Hazeltine has also just finished a polo pony belonging to Harry Payne Whitney.

WRITE TO THIS WOMAN

IF YOU WANT TO STOP A MAN FROM DRINK

She Saved Her Husband, Her Brother and Several of Her Neighbors and Prompted by Her Restored Happiness, she Generously Offers to Tell You of the Simple, Inexpensive Remedy that she so Successfully Used.

For over 20 years the husband of Mrs. Margaret Anderson was a hard drinker, but nine years ago, by using a simple remedy, she stopped his drinking entirely. He has not touched a drop since.



MRS. MARGARET ANDERSON
She Will Tell You How To Stop a Man From Drink

The remedy can be given secretly, so there is no publicity of your private affairs. She wants every man or woman who has drunkenness in their home to write to her so she can tell them just what remedy she used. Hundreds have freed their homes from drink by using the information she gave them, but there are still hundreds of others who need and should have it, so we earnestly advise every one of our readers who has a dear one who drinks, to drop her a line to-day.

The proofs of the hundreds of really remarkable results are too strong to be doubted or denied. Yet she makes no charge for her help, (she asks for no money and accepts none) so there is no reason why you should not write her at once. She only requests that you are personally interested in saving one who drinks. Send your letter with confidence to her home. Here is her address:

Mrs. Margaret Anderson,
[illegible] Oak Street, Hillburn, New York.
(Write your full name and address plainly—do not delay.)

Official List of the Favored Few Participants in the Crowning

Some American Peeresses to appear at Coronation

Duchess of Marlborough's Name Does Not Appear Among Those in Abbey's Inner Circle.

By CHESTER T. OVERTON.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, March 25.—The AMERICAN is in a position to announce for the first time, the special list of "Peeresses from America" who will wear their robes and coronets at the crowning of their Majesties King George and Queen Mary at Westminster Abbey, on June 22. The list is as follows:

THE HONORED SIXTEEN.

Duchess of Roxburghe, who was Miss May Goelet.

Duchess of Manchester, who was Miss Helen Zimmerman.

Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava, who was Miss Florence Davis.

Countess of Suffolk, who was Miss Marguerite Leiter.

Countess of Essex, who was Miss Adela Grant.

Countess of Granard, who was Miss Beatrice Mills.

Countess of Craven, who was Miss Cornelia Martin.

Countess of Donoughmore, who was Miss Elena Maria Grawe.

Lady Greville, who was Miss Grace.

Lady Monson, who was Miss Stone.

Lady Decies, who was Miss Vivien Gould.

Lady Bateman, who was Miss Graham.

Lady Newborough, who was Miss Grace Carr.

Lady Cheylesmore, who was Miss Elisabeth French.

Lady Leith of Fyvie, who was Miss Marie Louise January.

Lady Willoughby de Eresby, mother to the infant Earl of Ancaster, who was Miss Eloise Breese.

The above are the only Americans who will participate actually in the imposing ceremony as defined by the royal summons.

The Duke of Norfolk, who, as premier Duke, is Earl Marshal of England and supervises all arrangements for the great event with his secretary, Hubert Montgomery, have been poring daily over a huge diagram of the Abbey to accomplish the difficult and delicate task of assigning places for the coronation, and the above list is that part of his labors which supremely interests American readers.

Invited as Spectators.

It can also be announced that the following American women will be invited as spectators, but will sit in galleries high above the scene of action:

In another gallery will sit the Viscountesses Maldstone, born Drexel; Acheson, born Carter, and Deerhurst, born Bonynge. Their husbands are the eldest sons of peers.

Lady Arthur Butler, born Stager, and Lady Alastair Innes-Kerr, born Breese, will also sit in this gallery, as Lords Arthur Butler and Innes-Kerr are the heirs apparent respectively to the Marquisate of Ormonde and the dukedom of Roxburghe.

Mrs. Lewis Harcourt, formerly Marie Burns, will have a prominent spectator's seat in the Abbey as the wife of a cabinet minister.

It is known definitely that the Duchess of Marlborough has received no summons to appear. As the legally separated wife of a peer she has lost her official place. Speculation has been rife for some time whether the rule debarring divorcees would be made to apply to her case, she being merely separated from the Duke. The present king and queen, however, decided to uphold Queen Victoria's strict exclusion from the court of all persons involved in domestic scandal, even innocently.

The same regulation against divorcees debars the wife of Waldorf Astor from an invitation to be a spectator as she divorced her first husband, Robert Shaw. She is otherwise eligible to a place in the parliament gallery as the wife of a member of parliament.

It has not been decided whether Lady Paget or Mrs. Cecil Bingham, as the wives of high military officers will be present.

Their Majesties have a royal box for their personal friends, but no Americans are expected as the guests owing to a certain court attitude against them. Mrs. John Ward, Ambassador Reid's daughter, will however, be an exception.

Deserts Society.

Lady Sybil Grimston, daughter of the Earl of Verulam, has deserted society for all time and is now "Number Two" in the Tredegar House Training School for nurses, whose ambition is realized by service in the London Hospitals. Lady Sybil, or Nurse Grimston, as she must be known henceforth, is a probationer, and will not be a full-fledged nurse for three years.

She lives now in a slum district, five miles from Mayfair, and observes rigid hours, rising at 7 o'clock with the less nobly born students. She has only two hours for recreation, between 2 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Nurse Grimston is a small, sweet-faced girl, with brown hair and fine coloring. There are few English families more ancient or interesting than Lord Verulam's.

Not to be outdone in good works by the English aristocracy, Mrs. Ritchie, daughter of the popular American hostess, Mrs. Ronalds, has invented a useful addition to the bridge box, which will be appreciated by all card players. It consists of a set of stars on which are the words "luck to the dealer." The lucky stars are handed to the dealer at the beginning of each hand, so there can be no dispute as to who is the last dealer when the game is concluded.

Mrs. Ritchie has patented several games and puzzles, all of which have been very successful. Her mother, Mrs. Ronalds, has once more opened her house in Cadogan place for her famous Sunday musical afternoons. Her house is the rendezvous of all the smart Americans in town. No formal invitations are ever issued for these "At home's."

KAISER HAS TO BUY LAST STRAUSS OPERA

Hates the Music of Extreme Modern [illegible]

By COUNT VON ELPHBERG.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

B[illegible] Strauss's latest opera, "Der Rosen Kavalier" [illegible] This opera house is the Kaiser's private property, and since it is run at a loss it costs him a large subvention yearly out of his own [illegible].

The Kaiser has conceived an intense dislike to the work of Strauss and declares he abhors "Salome," [illegible] "Der Rosen Kavalier" [illegible] antipathy to the Strauss music [illegible] should not be produced at the Royal Opera House in Berlin.

But the biggest department store in Berlin began to run special trains from Berlin to Dresden to [illegible] Berliners to witness "Der Rosen Kavalier." This raised [illegible] that the Kaiser's [illegible] National Theatre, ought to be the very place for Germany's foremost contemporary composer, instead [illegible] were compelled to go to Dresden to see the piece.

These bitter complaints reached the Emperor's eyes through the newspapers, and his ear through the various go-betweens, and bowing to public opinion, he has now ordered Der Rosen Kavalier to be purchased for the Royal Opera House in Berlin and the production will take place in the capital early in September. Now the grumblers are blaming the Kaiser because Berlin will be about the last of German cities to see this wonderful opera instead of being the first as it ought to be.

The Kaiser's approaching departure for Corfu, where he will stay two or three weeks, has again brought the question of his condition of health prominently before the public. It has become known that the Kaiser is under strict orders of his medical advisers never to spend the early Spring in Berlin, because the [illegible] one is equipped with the soundest constitution.

The Kaiser of recent years has developed a marked delicacy of throat and lungs, dating from the Fall of 1903, when he underwent a throat operation. His annual trip southwards has thus become a necessity to his health. On leaving Corfu he will not come to Berlin, but proceed to Wiesbaden, where he will take the cure extending it to the month of May.

This again indicates a delicacy of health and all these unfavorable symptoms are attracting considerable attention in court circles, where everything centres about the imperial person, and also in diplomatic and political circles, where the state of the Emperor's health is a matter of international importance.

PET JERSEY CALVES.

Paris Ultra-Fashionable Adopt a Juvenile Bovine Fad.

PARIS, March 25.—The newest of the new fashions in Paris is to be accompanied by a Jersey calf, when one goes out for airing—or, at least, so some of the more eccentric women of fashion have decreed, and dutiful husbands and admirers are compelled to send to the Isle of Jersey for calves.

The calves look pretty but stupid, and they have the attraction of being cheaper than pet dogs. The Jersey calf may do very well for women who wish to play the part of dairy maids, as Marie Antoinette and her ladies at Versailles, but a calf in the Salon would be a good deal like a bull in a china shop.

Rogues' Gallery in Films.

PRAGUE, March 25.—The police of the city have decided that henceforth portraits of criminals for whom the authorities are searching shall be exhibited at all cinemetograph theatres in Prague and that the public on leaving shall be requested to assist the police in their investigations.

IRELAND'S ENEMY IS HARD UP FOR CASH

Lord Lansdowne Now Forced to Sell Paintings from the [illegible] Walls

By AUSTIN F. MAGUIRE

Special Cable to Sunday American

D[illegible] as a member of the upper House, as a [illegible] Lansdowne is ever the same, cold, narrow, autocratic, unrelenting in his hate of a whole [illegible] dying days of unlimited veto of the peerage, the worst determined fighter in [illegible] Rule.

[illegible] Lansdowne is clever and alert as a politician, he also sleeps "with one eye open" to a business deal. Just now [illegible] to the trustees of the National Gallery [illegible] Rembrandt, "The Mill," [illegible] is one of the treasures of the Lansdowne collection.

The deal was brought out into the daylight of publicity by a paragraph in the [illegible] Holroyd, director of the National [illegible] had announced that £95,000 ($475,000) was needed for the purchase of the famous [illegible].

Owner of the Painting.

Then it came out that the owner of the painting is Lord Lansdowne who had given the refusal of it to the trustees of the National Gallery. His price for the picture is $500,000.

The [illegible] Press says of the transaction:

"Lord Lansdowne's bill is £100,000 with five per cent discount for cash. At least one scalling member of our old nobility understands good business. It is much to be regretted that the nation should be forced to retain art treasures by owners' [illegible] up-to-date company promoter."

Whether it be in oil paintings or broad acres [illegible] Lansdowne [illegible] the [illegible] of property.

The Lansdowne [illegible] until feudalism had its fangs drawn by the Land League and the Irish party, was notorious for the harsh treatment of its tenants. A set of [illegible] was once sent out to the tenant farmers on his Irish estates by Lord Lansdowne's agent—not the present lord, but his father—in which every move in the [illegible] of the Lansdowne tenants was provided for in the most drastic way.

Even Regulated Marriage.

No [illegible] tenant could have a [illegible] a stranger in his house overnight without the consent of "the office."

[illegible] was once [illegible] married [illegible] to remain [illegible] night when the storm made it unsafe for her to travel to her own home.

This infringement of the rules was followed by an eviction of the entire family just as quickly as the Lansdowne sheriff and the Lansdowne bench of magistrates could put the legal machinery in motion.

For a man with such a family history as this behind him the Lord Lansdowne of today must find it quite an ordinary amusement to dicker with the trustees of the National Gallery and get them to give him half a million dollars of the nation's money for one of his family pictures "with five per cent discount for cash."

The fact is, Lansdowne is not the only one of his coroneted class that is hard put [illegible] to raise the [illegible] dwelling in an atmosphere of enforced negotiation.

Everything went well with them under the old regime. The swirl of London, the [illegible] Tyrol were easily within their grasp while [illegible]

Now [illegible] the [illegible] no longer [illegible] to their Irish rent offices for more cash. Instead, they must ruefully take valuable heirlooms down from their castle walls and offer them for sale "with five per cent discount for cash."

MRS. A. C. BARNEY DENIES

Is Not Engaged to Ronald Hemmick or Anybody Else.

PARIS, March 25.—Mrs. Alfred Clifford Barney denies vigorously that she is engaged to be married to Ronald Hemmick or to anybody else. So far from thinking of marriage, Mrs. Barney is busily engaged preparing an exhibition of fifty pictures to be held in June.

Referring to the report of her engagement with Mr. Hemmick, Mrs. Barney's exact words are:

"I was married at the age of seventeen, and I am just eighteen years older than my daughter, so that we are more like sisters. For this I am glad, but according to some newspapers, marriage again is my ceaseless ambition. I wish they would turn their attention to something more interesting to the public."

WASH DISHES UNDER TABLE.

Doctor's Wife Describes Experiences With a Strange People.

LONDON, March 25.—There was a large gathering at Burlington House when Mme. Gabrielle M. Vassal, the wife of a French doctor, who was attached to the Pasteur Institute of Nha-Trang, a little village on the coast of Annam, gave her experiences in that little-known land.

When Mme. Vassal and her husband arrived they were received by the native servants, who salaamed and squatted on the floor for a long period, this being their courteous method of greeting Europeans. Servants had the curious habit of washing dishes under the table, never on its top. Men and women dressed alike, wearing trousers and tunics, and women on their way to market with their baskets always walked behind each other, but even with a party of eight they never found any difficulty in carrying on an animated conversation.

AID GIVEN NEEDIEST FAMILY IN BOSTON

Six Youngsters Left Fatherless by Accident After Bitter Fight with Poverty.

Seldom has the attention of the charitable people of Boston been called to a more pathetic case than that of the family of Michael McSweeney, who was run down and killed by a train in Dorchester last Thursday.

Out of work for a long time and fighting poverty that had been [illegible] the man had at last found [illegible] and was on his way [illegible] day when he was killed.

"You [illegible] the first money I ever [illegible] before he left the house."

There were six children [illegible] and the oldest [illegible] in rags and a [illegible] hoped to be able to earn [illegible] care of them.

Money Sent to Family

Some money has been sent to the AMERICAN for the family. This has been paid to them. Any other contributions that may be sent to the newspaper will be turned over to the family.

A reporter of the AMERICAN called on the widow on the second floor of a [illegible] tenement [illegible] three rooms at No. [illegible] She was found.

"I thank [illegible] very much," said Mrs. McSweeney as the [illegible] handed to her. "I do not know what I would have done without the help given me. My husband was so willing [illegible] to work after being idle so long. He [illegible] at first. Then he got something down on the wharf and the morning he left me to go to work and was killed he told me that with the first money earned he would let me to buy some [illegible] I have needed [illegible] was born.

It is a [illegible] to have these fatherless children. My oldest is [illegible] eleven [illegible] weeks [illegible] got work. [illegible] he should be brought home to me dead."

Hard Struggle to Live.

"I do not know what I am to do with the children. We have been poor so long. But we are worse off than ever without him. He loved his family. He tried hard to do what he could for them. But he only got a [illegible] wages and everything is so high [illegible]

"I [illegible] to do the best [illegible] and [illegible] them to [illegible] I have [illegible]

[illegible] AMERICAN readers for what [illegible] They are always kind [illegible]

[illegible] of six [illegible] Mrs. McSweeney was [illegible] in a [illegible] had a [illegible] to her [illegible] sent [illegible]

Dennis [illegible] youngster was happy [illegible] sent [illegible] shoes and clothing [illegible] a half, [illegible] years and the [illegible] six years old, all need shoes and clothing.

The sleeping rooms are bare of any furniture. Everything indicated that the family had been fighting poverty during the long illness of the father, and his death has [illegible] the [illegible] for food [illegible] been sent in and was stocked on the rickety kitchen table.

Important Prescription For Stomach Troubles

This comes from reliable medical authority as being one of the most remarkable prescriptions of recent years, as demonstrated in the results shown by its widespread use in hospital work and private practice. It is said to give immediate relief for distress after eating, belching, sour stomach, dizziness and headaches, and if used for sufficient time will eradicate the worst dyspepsia. "Two ounces essence of Pepsin, three ounces syrup of Ginger, one ounce Catandir compound. Mix and use one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bed time." Catandir always comes put up in one ounce sealed packages. Any druggist should have it in stock by this time or he will quickly get it from his wholesale house. For best results mix the Pepsin and the Ginger, then let stand about an hour before adding the Catandir. It will be more convenient to get the ingredients from the druggist and mix them at home. Those who have tried this are enthusiastic over its prompt and effective action.

MARY GARDEN TELLS BOSTON TO PAINT CITY WHITE AND SUBSTITUTE MILK FOR BEER

MARY GARDEN SAYS:

Boston ought to paint all the houses white and serve nothing but milk in the saloons.

There's an atmosphere of sanctity around this town.

If these politicians could understand French and Italian you would have to move your opera house over to Cambridge.

Morality is the same the world over, but in the United States the people are more hypocritical.

Life isn't a Sunday school book.

Rheumatism! Sounds strange, but it's sadly true.

No American can ever write an opera, because it isn't in them. The American girl is a great success as a singer, but the American man is no good.

By FREDERICK JOHNS

LISTEN to Mary Garden.

"My goodness, it's a wonder they don't suppress me. How do you suppose I ever reached this hotel? Really you know, they ought to paint all the houses white and serve nothing but milk in the saloons. There's an atmosphere of sanctity around this town. I have no doubt, but it doesn't look any more like heaven than New York and Philadelphia. If I could get arrested a foot anywhere else I wouldn't dare come here."

Mary Garden was having supper in her room at the [illegible] and a Boston newspaper on her lap and was reading an article by Mayor Fitzgerald about how he [illegible] public morals and [illegible] things that are not proper. Miss Garden was interested at once [illegible] had been suppressed herself, several times and in several places. Her beautiful upper lip curled in scorn.

"So they have suppressed 'The Easiest Way.' I suppose if these politicians could understand French and Italian you would have to move your opera across over to Cambridge. There wasn't anything wrong with 'The Easiest Way.' I saw it myself in New York. It didn't cause a blush of shame to mantle my fair cheek."

"Perhaps you are more broad minded than others."

"Nothing to Offend."

"There wasn't anything in it to offend the most fastidious. The trouble with it was that it wasn't interesting and was badly acted."

"You must admit it is a little daring."

"Bah. It is a gray spineless thing, and the heroine had no spunk. Nobody need be alarmed about her. She said she was going to Rector's when she left the room in the last act, but she would have no success at Rector's.

"It's awful funny this habit they have of suppressing what they call bad shows in this country. They make a lot of noise and give the show plenty of free advertising and it goes to another city. The people there says, 'Why, that's the play that was so bad it was driven out of Boston. Let's all go and see it.' If they act [illegible] they would [illegible] a lot of people who otherwise would never have [illegible] of them.

"Come to think of it, they wouldn't let me sing Salome in Boston. They didn't suppress it, they just wouldn't let me give it. Ha, Boston is certainly a respectable city."

"Do you think it is more moral than any other American city?"

"Of course not. Morality is the same the world over, but in the United States people are more hypocritical. Americans and Englishmen like to interfere with the privileges of others more than other nations. People who want to see things that they know are immoral or immodest are not going to be injured by seeing such things, and others don't have to attend. I don't favor immorality or indecency, but on the stage and in literature writers should be allowed to depict life truthfully. Life isn't a Sunday school book, and how can you prevent a man from doing wrong if you are ashamed to tell him what he is doing, to speak plainly. Bah. It's all so ridiculous. Wait until my book comes out."

Writing a Book.

"Are you writing another book?"

"No, the same one."

"Have you started it?"

"I've got a whole batch of manuscript."

"What is it about?"

"I am writing about the modern French school of opera, but I shall state the true conditions of musical study abroad and advise American girls who intend to study opera what to do and what to avoid."

"Then it will be a regular school text book?"

Mary smiled. "No, I don't think so, but it will be in every hotel library."

Miss Garden now emptied a white powder into a glass of water. Although the room was warm she had a fur wrap around her neck, over her house gown.

"You will excuse me, but I have to take this medicine for my rheumatism."

"Mary Garden with rheumatism?"

She made a grimace. "Sounds strange, doesn't it, but it's sadly true. I don't know how I ever got it. I never did anything to catch rheumatism."

"Why—er—how about Salome and Thais?"

"Not a bit of it. I am always careful to avoid draughts. I take excellent care of myself. I never even drink."

"Not wine even?"

"Not a drop. Nothing but water or tea now and then."

"Did rheumatism ever trouble you on [illegible] ago?"

"[illegible] giving a performance of 'Louise,' [illegible] singing and [illegible] with pain. I don't know how I ever got through that performance. Oh, [illegible]" Mary rubbed the [illegible] "Ain't it just the limit? [illegible] there is any danger of [illegible] collecting with 'Manon'? You know Manon was the same kind of a girl [illegible] 'Easiest Way,' only I think she was a [illegible] the worse. I'm going to pray for me a [illegible] and proper [illegible] because I would like to get arrested."

"How do you like to play 'Natoma' in English?"

"Americans Can't Write Opera."

"Don't talk to me about opera in English. No American can ever write an opera."

"Why not?"

"Because it isn't in them, that's why. It's [illegible] in Anglo-Saxon blood."

"But most Americans are a mixture of Irish, English, German and Latin."

"Well, the Germans may turn out opera, or the [illegible] the Irish never and the English not even then.

"Why, England has been rubbing shoulders with the continent of Europe since time began, but did it ever absorb any of the continental love of music? Did it ever [illegible] anything [illegible] music? Not a thing. I [illegible] very [illegible] am I?"

"[illegible] We have an English opera [illegible] Boston [illegible] 'Natoma.'"

"Yes, I have heard about it," said Miss Garden [illegible] "It's like 'Natoma,' not [illegible] of an opera. Not that 'Natoma' is [illegible] a meritorious attempt," she added, thinking of poor Victor Herbert's feelings.

If Americans have no operatic ability how do you account for the success of the American girl in opera, yourself, for example?"

"Different thing. The American girl is a great success as a singer, but the American man is no good."

"Why?"

"Carusos Carrying Hods."

"It isn't in him. An American man would do almost anything else rather than sing in opera. He even hates to go on the dramatic stage, which is why we have to import so many actors. A man with paint on his face is odious to the male American. His talents lie in other directions. But I have no doubt that many a Caruso or Manuel is carrying the hod or keeping books in this country. Only nobody goes around encouraging them to sing in this country."

Miss Garden pushed a hand out from under her fur wrap and shoved back a heavy gold bang which was getting into her left eye.

"Say," she demanded, "What is [illegible]"

"It is a fish which swims in these waters. Why?"

"It's delicious and this is the only place in the world where you can get it. In New York they don't know what you mean when you ask for a scrod. It's why I come to Boston."

"Really?"

"Of course not really. I come because I like to sing here when the censors are kind enough to let me. I like your opera house and your audiences. The discipline at the Boston Opera is wonderful. I discovered that last time I sang here?"

"Did they discipline you?"

"Not so you could notice it," said Mary. "I am always on my good behavior in Boston."

THIS FISH A PUZZLE.

Has Horns Like an Owl and Looks Like a Wasp.

BUZZARDS BAY, March 25.—There is a great deal of curiosity as to the identity of a small fish that some Portuguese fishermen brought into port the other day from the Woods Hole side of the bay. Not more than two inches in length, the fish resembles a wasp more than anything else. The body is surmounted by a little bulbous head, and tapers down to a point at the tail. Where an insect's wings would be, this curiosity is fitted with a tiny pair of flippers, which propels itself around more like a bird than a fish. The head has a tiny pair of protuberances which resemble the horns on an owl, and apparently the little creature is without eyes. The curious feature is that the body is even more transparent than a jelly fish. With the exceptions of the portions which are tinged with light red, it is colorless, and the organs show completely from the outside.

TO ENTERTAIN MILITIA.

Providence Light Infantry Will Be Guests of Foot Guards.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., March 25.—The First Light Infantry of Providence, R. I., will come here this Spring when it celebrates the twenty-third anniversary of its organization. The Rhode Island organization fraternised with the Second Company of the Governor's Foot Guard of Connecticut on a trip to Richmond, Va., where both commands were entertained by the Richmond Blues, and it was proposed then to have the local militia entertain their Rhode Island comrades here.

GRAND TRUNK TO BUILD.

New Lines Will Add 140 Stations the Map.

MONTREAL, March 25.—Grand Trunk Pacific plans for this season announced by E. J. Chamberlain, vice-president, include 645 miles of branch lines, 265 miles main line, 200 miles grading, while 140 new names will be added to the map in stations. Important branches will be those of Melville and Regina, one from Bickerdime on the main line to open the Pacific Pass coal fields, and those of Yellow Head Pass, to be known as the Alberta Coal Branch. Three large bridges will be built.

HERE'S POTATO TRUST.

Maine Farmers Even Going to Distill Spirits from Tubers.

PRESQUE ISLE, Me., March 25.—Potato growers of Aroostook County are talking of forming a combine to govern the production of tubers and the distillation of spirits from them. Fires in potato storehouses have caused several insurance companies to cancel policies, and the combine will take up the insurance question, too.

TAX BACHELORS TO PAY MOTHERS BONUS

Two New Bills Proposed to Increase Population of the State.

Killed for the time being by the committee which refused to report the bill for the taxing of bachelors in this State, those who backed the measure declare that they will bring the matter up again next year in another form.

They purpose not only to follow up the bill with another, but to offer a twin bill, which provides for a bounty for the birth of children. Both bills will follow closely two measures that have been introduced in the Illinois Legislature.

One bill provides for the payment of $100 to the mother of each child born within two years after her marriage, and for each additional child born every two years. The premium on twins is fixed at $200 and on triplets $300.

Bachelors to Pay Bill.

The other bill places a tax of $10 a year on bachelors over 35 years of age, the amount to be set aside for the payment of premiums to mothers.

"Both of these bills," said Senator Beall, discussing the Illinois bills which are to be followed here, "were drawn at my request by Myer J. Stein, our Senate law clerk. The preamble to the proposed anti-race suicide act, in my judgment, is a masterful piece of literary ability on the part of Mr. Stein."

The preamble of the anti-race suicide bill follows:

"Whereas, according to the census of the juvenile population made public by the census director, it appears that race suicide is prevalent in the larger cities of Illinois; and

"Whereas, it appears from such census of the juvenile population that an average of only 30 per cent of the total population is composed of boys and girls under twenty-one years of age, and

"Whereas, great pride has been taken in the high standard of civilization, the care of the child, which has been made so prominent a part of humanitarian or philanthropic endeavor in our present era; and Rich Shirk Duty.

"Whereas, national, state, community, and private institutions vie with one another to secure to every child, rich or poor, its full rights and all the opportunities which society can establish by law, and

"Whereas, maternity hospitals for children abound where experienced attendants give to the young that care which mothers, tired of their housework, cannot bestow upon them, and

"Whereas, even those who are criminally inclined are given consideration by the juvenile court, the probation officer, and the [illegible]; and

"Whereas societies exist to see to it that parents do not maltreat their offspring and child labor is regulated by law and prohibited up to a certain age, and

"Whereas, when many burdens are lifted from the shoulders of parents and obtain in the community, there should be sufficient incentive for large families for an increase in the population and for severe penalties for the prohibition of race suicide, and Maternity Out of Fashion.

"Whereas, it appears from authentic sources and reports, especially amongst those who are designated as the higher classes and with whom livelihood and luxury is more easily obtained and possessed, that paternity and maternity on a large scale have gone out of fashion, and

"Whereas, according to authentic sources, during all the period of our recent history no year has produced so few children as the last in the State of Illinois, not only in its cities, but in its towns and villages as well, and

"Whereas, it appears from official sources that increase in population obtains in larger numbers in England, France and Germany and some sister States of the United States, and Families of the Poor Are Large.

"Whereas, in the history of this country and the State of Illinois it appears that never was there better prosperity, which prosperity is upon so firm a foundation, and,

"Whereas, it appears from official sources that in the rich wards of the cities the birth rate is invariably lower than in the poorer districts, and,

"Whereas, if present conditions are allowed to continue it can be shown with mathematical certainty that the families of the present, upper classes, with their share of the good qualities of our race, will simply cease to exist, and,

"Whereas, in order that the nation shall maintain its numbers unaltered an average of about four children should be born to each marriage which produces children at all, and

"Whereas, good qualities tend to be inherited, and,

"Whereas, legislation should be properly enacted, which will encourage the increase of population in this State and should severely penalize persons who use means to destroy progeny, therefore the bill is proposed."

Section 1 provides for creating "The Increase Population Fund" to encourage motherhood. Section 2 fixes the compensation for mothers. Section 3 provides that an appropriation for the maintenance of this fund shall be made biennially out of funds not otherwise appropriated. Section 4 provides that all funds collected under the 'Act to Provide for the Taxation of Bachelors' shall be placed to the credit of the 'Increase Population Fund.'

The bill which taxes bachelors provides exemption for any man more than thirty-five years of age in this State who is unmarried and can prove to the satisfaction of the assessors of such city, town, or village, in which he resides that there are reasons which would render him unfit for matrimony."

The following facts show how the bill would affect [illegible].

In 1909 there were 20,636 births in Chicago. In nine months of last year there were 18,147. Twins, the statistics show, come most frequently during the Summer months. Fifteen pairs were born last June and fifteen during July—$3,000 worth of twins in two months.

Twins also "happen" in the springtime with considerable frequency. The other months of the year average about a dozen a month.

LEADING DRAMATIC CRITICS OF COUNTRY OPPOSE IDEA OF ONE MAN AS PLAY CENSOR

Declare a Free Press Is Competent and Sufficient to Govern and Correct a Free Stage.

THE leading dramatic critics of Boston newspapers and newspapers in other large cities give their views to-day on play censorship.

Boston is the first city in the United States to establish a real censorship of plays. The Boston public, until it reads the facts in the AMERICAN, could never even have dreamed of the extent and power of this censorship. Playwrights, managers and producers hardly realized it until, almost without warning, Eugene Walter's play "The Easiest Way" was suppressed.

John H. Casey, city license clerk, and Leo Rogers, secretary of Police Commissioner O'Meara, under the law which permits the mayor and police commissioner to delegate to any person they may select the duty of preserving public morals, have autocratic powers over the theatres. They are censors of plays.

There is no appeal from their decision. They compelled the management of the "Follies of 1910" to cut out many so-called objectionable features. They made the managers tear out whole scenes from "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge." They eliminated many things from "The Girl From Rector's."

Then Suppressed the Play.

License Clerk Casey saw "The Easiest Way" in New York. He did not like it. Mayor's secretary, Richard Field, saw it last Monday night and thought it was improper. Leo Rogers disapproved of it. Therefore it was suppressed.

The AMERICAN yesterday asked the dramatic critics of all the Boston newspapers for their ideas of a proper censorship of plays in Boston. It has also obtained the opinion of many critics on great newspapers in other cities.

These men are experts on the drama. Their profession is reading and reviewing plays. They see every important production made in this country. They know what is good and what is bad in a play because it is their business to know. They are qualified to speak with authority upon all things pertaining to the drama.

Boston's play censors—Casey, Rogers, Fields—have no qualifications whatever for the tremendously important duties imposed upon them. They are not students of the drama; they are just ordinary every day office holders, as well equipped for conversing with the inhabitants of the planet Mars or conducting a laboratory operation on a dying man as they are to act as censors of the drama.

TRANSCRIPT CRITIC SAYS "COMMON SENSE" WOULDN'T STOP PLAY

By H. T. PARKER.

Dramatic Critic, Boston Transcript.

This town has had its moral sensibilities and its artistic standards measured by the clerks of City Hall and of Pemberton square. It has seen a play driven from our stage that treats certain conditions of evil life gravely, truthfully, morally, while nearly every play that sentimentalizes them or makes a joke, a spectacle, an innuendo of them has long flourished here unscathed, unhampered. It has seen a censorship over the theatre exercised by those little qualified by intelligence, experience, breadth of mind, taste and disinterestedness for such functions.

What Boston needs is a society for the application of common sense, and such a society it is safe to say would not have suppressed "The Easiest Way."

PHILIP HALE SAYS BOSTON HAS BEEN MADE RIDICULOUS

By PHILIP HALE.

Dramatic Critic, Boston Herald.

To say that "The Easiest Way" teaches any moral lesson would be absurd. To say that it is immoral and should be interdicted is equally foolish. It is true that the play deals with a seamy side of life, that its characters are a shabby lot and lead greasy lives, but the immorality of the play lies in the treatment of the subject itself, and Mr. Walter's presentation of his them is neither flippant nor salacious.

In this drama vice is presented as hideous and unprofitable. The drama is a tragedy. It is in strong contrast with revues and many flimsy pieces that have been played in Boston this season without rebuke and to crowded houses, pieces in which women have exposed their bodies without artistic purposes, pieces in which vice has been made attractive and virtue foolish. Here is a plain case of the Mayor exercising censorship for the sake of political capital and the city of Boston is made ridiculous.

SEES NO NEED OF A CENSORSHIP FOR STAGE IN BOSTON

By EDWARD H. CROSBY,

Dramatic Critic of the Boston Post.

I do not see any need of a censorship of plays. The common sense of the public is quite sufficient for most occasions. We have had but two instances of the suppression of plays in the history of the Boston stage, which shows that conditions have never been very bad.

Of course there are many people who crowd to see an immoral play, but I don't think that sort of people suffer much harm from such a play, and it is only the honest folk who get in by mistake who deserve consideration.

If a manager presents a play so immoral that it is offensive to people of decent instincts, the authorities should suppress it, and if in this case the Mayor and Police Commissioner are sincere in their opinion of the play there was nothing else for them to do under their oath of office.

"The Easiest Way" gives an episode of metropolitan life which unquestionably exists to a greater or lesser extent. It is of a nature that makes it difficult to contend with for its fundamental principle lies in human selfishness and love of ease, and these are the strongest of human traits. But the wisdom of exploiting such a pitiful tragedy as Mr. Walter's play presents is open to question.

AMEND THE LAW AND TAKE WORK FROM THE MAYOR

By CHARLES HOWARD.

Dramatic Critic of the Boston Globe.

The suppression of a play is a very serious thing. It means a money loss of many thousand dollars to the theatre owners, the producers, loss of employment to the actors and revenue to the author. If we are to have a censorship of our plays it should be in the hands of someone who has made a study of the drama and whose judgment would be unassailable.

The present law, which permits the Mayor or Police Commissioner to delegate this important duty to a subordinate should be amended. It should provide for a broader and more professional investigation of the merits of plays, and not thrust upon the Mayor and Police Commissioner an authority and responsibility they cannot intelligently and fairly discharge.

As for "The Easiest Way," those who went to it looking for salaciousness were disappointed, and so were those who expected logical ethics. Teach a lesson the play may, perhaps, but it is not a new lesson, merely the fact that the average human can stand just so much pressure and that the play after having demonstrated this to you, expects you to be surprised and shocked and grieved.

In a city which permits so many other plays in which vice is made attractive it was strange that this should have been made an example of.

ADVERTISER CRITIC FINDS CENSORSHIP OF MAYOR ABSURD

By S. C. WILLIAMS.

Dramatic Critic, Daily Advertiser.

"The Easiest Way" has been ejected from Boston, and Mayor Fitzgerald is greatly relieved by removal of a menace to the "fine bloom of youthful innocence." Upon the joint report of two of his clerical employes, he concluded that "corruption was interwoven with the very texture" of Mr. Walter's play. The absurdity of such censorship, if there is to be any censorship save that of public opinion, is obvious to ordinary intelligence.

As to the character of "The Easiest Way," the opinion of Bostonians fortunate enough to have seen one of the few performances permitted by their sensitive Mayor is substantially the opinion of playgoers of other cities in which it was performed without hindrance. Let alone, it would doubtless have prospered in Boston, not because, as Mayor Fitzgerald asserts, it "depicts low life in a great city," but because it is a powerful and admirably acted way. It is an unflinching study of a woman of affectionate disposition and weak character, not vicious but luxury loving. There is nothing prurient about it, nothing that glorifies vice and mocks virtue. Even a hard-shelled Baptist could ask no more impressive illustration of the scriptural proclamation, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."

Mayor Fitzgerald says that "The Easiest Way" is an improper play because it is unsuitable for the entertainment of school-girls. If that is the measure of dramatic decency, then the New Theatre, which professedly exists to nourish the native drama, should be a children's theatre, for a nation of Peter Pans, of boys that never grow up.

CRITIC FOUND NO SALACIOUS SCENES IN "THE EASIEST WAY"

By EDWARD F. HARKINS.

I do not care to express an opinion in regard to censorship of plays in Boston. I do not consider that one of my functions, nor do I wish to comment upon the action of the authorities in suppressing "The Easiest Way."

I will say this about the play. There were no salacious scenes, there was no indecency on view, there were no lines of double meaning to make the gilded young men guffaw. There were four scenes of sordid seamy life, relieved now and then by flashy comedy. There was nothing attractive about the kind of vice shown in "The Easiest Way."

BOSTON A BUTT FOR SARCASM OF THE WHOLE COUNTRY

By EARL DERR BIGGERS.

Dramatic Critic Boston Traveler.

"The Easiest Way" was performed in practically every city in this country and has everywhere been acclaimed and approved. At one little crossroads in Virginia it was prohibited by the authorities. One may expect such narrow mindedness from the crossroads, but by preventing its playing here Boston once more proves itself a unique city, and once more, no doubt, stands meekly, the butt of a country's mirth and sarcasm.

When a playwright deliberately sets out to be indecent he deserves censure, and it is best for the stage that his work be prohibited. When on the other hand he paints a striking picture of real life and points a moral, that is sound and decent, it should not be held against him that the life he has pictured is that of a certain type whose morals and methods of life are questionable.

DOZEN ATTRACTIONS MORE OBJECTIONABLE TO SCIENCE MONITOR

By ERNEST SHERBURNE,

Dramatic Critic of the Christian Science Monitor.

The Christian Science Monitor is naturally interested in the action of Mayor John F. Fitzgerald in banning a drama considered by him morally obnoxious.

During three theatrical seasons it has been the policy of this newspaper to ignore dramas or musical plays which could not with propriety be described in its columns. Perhaps a dozen attractions at the first-class theaters of Boston each season have been regarded as objectionable under this policy.

It is to be noted that the test is applied on moral, not artistic grounds. As it is the privilege of the individual to distinguish between the wholesome and the unwholesome, so the Monitor has attempted to distinguish along broad and decidedly liberal lines the quality of the reading matter that should be admitted to its columns.

To describe plays of wholesome or hopeful tendency and entertainments considered generally harmless, rather than to attack the questionable—this has been the endeavor.

This policy was adopted, not without due consideration of the fact that some dramas would have to be classed as debatable in content which were highly artistic considered exclusively as drama.

In other words, when in the opinion of the Monitor there is a clash between art and morality the vote is always for morality.

In view of this, any tendency toward a stricter consideration of the many violations of good taste now current on the American stage the Monitor considers a move in the right direction.

"EDUCATED WOMEN, NO MEN, SHOULD CENSOR PLAYS," DALE THINKS

By ALAN DALE,

Dramatic Critic of the New York American.

NEW YORK, March 25.—After all this is a tolerably right-minded public, one that is not all likely to suffer dictation on the subject of either art or morals. It has been proved time and again that the public decides and decides very emphatically.

This was instanced in the case of "Mrs. Warren's Profession." When this play was stopped it had played to one enormous audience, attracted by the talk of its impropriety. As soon as the courts decided that the play could not be legally restricted it was presented again. This time it did not draw a corporal's guard. The public did decide it was an unpleasant play.

Certainly city officials should never be allowed to monkey with what they cannot possibly understand. A censorship, if it must be, should be composed of educated women. Never men. Women know women, have a keen sense of the proprieties and women are unassailable.

Let there be a committee of non-cranky and educated women, not anxious to advertise themselves. It is principally women who patronize the theatre, anyway—why leave it to men?

The censor in London has made a perfect ass of himself. His judgments have been "to laugh." He has done things that appear to be rhymeless and reasonless. He is an institution, a ludicrous and olden institution. He has barred the artistic and permitted the salacious, according to many minds.

Let us beware of such a power. Let us hesitate before we vest such authority in any one man or men.

Personally, I believe in the verdict of the people—the unprejudiced people. The people are not all craving for the salacious. This is a world in which the right predominates. But if precautions must be taken let us trust to the enlightened woman who knows a thing or two and who has "temperament."

FREE PRESS ABLE TO TAKE CARE OF FREE STAGE, SAYS STEVENS

By ASHTON STEVENS.

Dramatic Critic of the Chicago Examiner.

CHICAGO, March 25.—The good taste as it is reflected to the public by the critics of the daily press strikes me as being the only dramatic censor that this country wants.

A real censorship of the drama is a dangerous thing for the drama, for it strikes at the playwrights that do things seriously, and with art rather than at those who deal lightly and musiccalically with the so-called "problems."

In London, where there is a King's [illegible] of plays, the Shaws have been gagged and the Pineros baited while most cal entertainments at George Edwardes's Gaiety Theatre have been permitted to riot joyously in the seven deadly sins.

Censorship is a bad business. It is [illegible] ... the power of public taste; but, if Boston must have a censor, I hope it gets one whose intelligence is beyond doubt.

If it is a committee, rather than an individual that committee should in fairness be composed of habitual playgoers, real lovers of the theatre and its best interests, and not of sedentary professions who get their play ... from books and their [illegible] under a student lamp. One true playgoer is worth a hundred cloistered theorists.

And ... [illegible] have women as well ... for you ... have the committee for the average woman has more "theatre sense" than the average man, and her sense of sportsmanship usually is fair and high.

But the best censor I know is none at all save the good sense of the people as it is—sometimes—displayed by the people's critics.

A free press is able to take care of a free stage.

CENSOR COMMISSION IS CALLED HOPELESS AS WELL AS UNSAFE

By JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Dramatic Critic Chicago Record-Herald.

CHICAGO, March 25.—To me it seems a scandalous thing that a grave and truthful work of morals, fraught with pungent satire and poignant warning, like "The Easiest Way," should be forbidden representation, while cheap and nasty burlesques, so-called, should be performed before audiences comprising impressionable unformed boys. The fact that such conditions exist in scores of American cities proves that municipal authorities are not to be trusted with the office of censorship.

In New Orleans "La Samaritaine" is suppressed, though Catholic priests living near Rostand's estate in France pronounced it a beautiful and inspiring work when the author had it enacted for their edification.

The present hit or miss operations of censorship in this country are perilous because they may easily become a means to the suppression of plays of large political significance. Casual exhibitions in leg shows ought to be forbidden by the police.

Dramas dealing with moral questions and questions of government in a serious way ought to be left to the verdict of the people. Farces and burlesques that occasionally are booked in presumably standard theatres, and that make vice alluring, are the danger.

"The Easiest Way," in every line and situation makes loose living and lax thinking hateful. "La Samaritaine" makes goodness and service beautiful. Yet the attitude of some presumably intelligent adults toward the dramas of Mr. Walter and Mr. Rostand indicates how hopeless and how unsafe would be a commission of men and women supposed to be competent.

POLITICS SHOULD BE SEPARATED FROM THE CENSORSHIP OF PLAY

By RUTH HALE.

Dramatic Critic Philadelphia Ledger.

PHILADELPHIA, March [illegible].—If the first manifestation [illegible] your present censorship has been to disbar the "Easiest Way," there can be two minds upon the need for a rearrangement of the system. Philadelphia's recent experience with the dramatic and a little inhibition of municipal authorities has shown the futility of striving for sound opinion on the theatre in these quarters.

Here "La Samaritaine" was prohibited by a city "Boss." Not at the instance of the clergy, but at that of the controlling [illegible] ... the major part of the artistic world ... [illegible]

"Sentiment against this form of unenlightened censorship cannot be too vigorously upheld. A committee of educated men and women should suffice if such committee were assembled by popular vote, or by any means not susceptible of the pressure of political preference. A single official, selected by a caucus of local [illegible] tre managers, or by a [illegible] ... probably achieve creditable ... terms of office included ... [illegible]

"There can be no protection to the public comparable to that of an uncommercialized dramatic department of an upright newspaper flanked by the great [illegible] ... outbreak of [illegible] last season, ... the prosperity of the clean comedies of the current season, should carry to the [illegible] ... percent of their [illegible].

CENSORSHIP HISTORY RECORD OF ABSURDITY, SAYS PERCY HAMMOND

By PERCY HAMMOND.

Dramatic Critic of the Chicago Tribune.

CHICAGO, March 25.—The history of play censorship is one of amazing absurdities.

[illegible] ... of intelligence and inspiration in the matter, but it never has been done elsewhere.

The invariable practice is to forbid plays like the "Easiest Way" and sanction those like the "Fascinating Widow." Of course the public is not to be trusted to avoid harmful plays, but the remedies suggested always have been proved worse than the ailment.

However, if there must be a censoring body it should be composed of intelligent and educated men and women rather than the irresponsible persons who constitute the fantastic anomaly active in Boston.

CASEY A DRUMMER, ROGERS A LAWYER; THAT'S THE BOARD

A State law provides that when the Mayor and Police Commissioner both agree that a theatrical performance is objectionable they can suppress it and there is no appeal. Both officials are accustomed to deputize this duty.

License Clerk John Casey, who is the official censor of plays for Mayor Fitzgerald, thinks he is qualified for such a post by twenty-one years in the theatrical business.

In this time Mr. Casey saw many hundreds of plays of all descriptions from the orchestra pit, for he played the drum. For many years he was in the orchestra of the old Globe Theatre under the management of John Stetson, and later he played in the Castle Square orchestra.

Casey was a splendid drummer and was finally selected to manage the drums in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, being one of the very few Americans in that famous organization. About ten years ago he lost his right arm in a railroad accident, and his days as a drummer were over. He came into the service of the city under Mayor Collins and has acted as license clerk ever since.

"I have a good education," he said yesterday, "and my long theatrical experience entitles me to think I am something of an expert in regard to plays, especially as [illegible] ... require me only to prevent [illegible]

[illegible] "The Easiest Way" in New York and after reporting to Mayor Hibbard he [illegible] being brought here two years ago. "These shows ... played in Boston, were [illegible] the same as when they played [illegible] ... if it had been possible to ... "The Easiest Way" we would have been glad to compromise, but the trouble with that play was not its lines or its incidents, but its atmosphere and entire character. It's a thankless job, this censoring of plays."

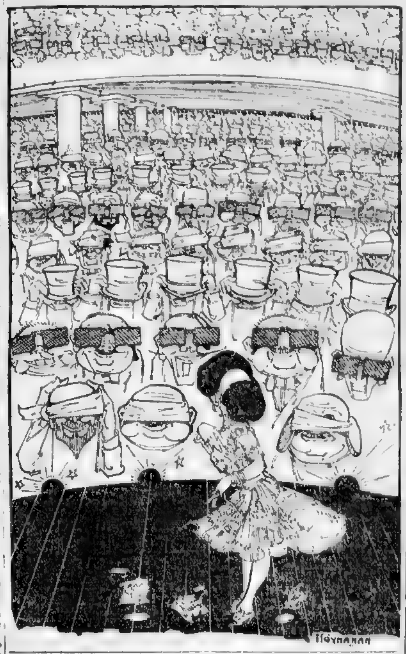
Mr. Rogers graduated ... [illegible] 1902 and from Harvard Law in 1904. It has been with O'Meara ... [illegible] ment as Police Commissioner.

"What are your qualifications as a censor of plays?" he was asked.

"Why, er, I don't know. I have a good education and I am familiar with the English language for the purposes [illegible] ... the Commissioner occasionally ... me to the theatre I think that is sufficient. I of course have seen a great many plays in my time and it doesn't require an expert to know when indecency or immorality are being flaunted on the stage."

THE EASIEST WAY



STORK LIGHTS MOST IN WARD 6 SECTION

"Dearo" Holds Its Record for Adding to the City's Population.

[illegible] ... busier doing a parcel express business in Ward 6 than anywhere else in town.

Ward 6, otherwise known as the "Dearo" ward, has for years been the banner district in the way of births. Ward 8 sometimes is close behind and sometimes gives 6's a close race, but the North End ward still maintains its supremacy.

Figures for last year are not available, as the registry department is having the annual supplementary canvass made so that no babies may be overlooked. But it is semi-officially announced that Ward 6 was again in the lead for 1910. In 1909 it headed the baby parade with a proud record of 1,700 births.

Ward 8, Martin Lomasney's bailiwick, was next with 1,113. Ward 20, out in Roxbury way, takes third place with 1,0[illegible]. Ward 19 used to lead Ward 20 until a few years ago, but nowadays it trails along several laps behind. Its 1909 record was only 8[illegible].

East Boston Coming On.

East Boston is looming up as a dangerous competitor to the North and West End wards. Year before last it had [illegible] ... [illegible] stated that it did even better last year and that this year it is setting a pace that may land it in second or third place.

Over in South Boston the last record for Ward 14 was 749 and for Ward 15 505. Ward 2 isn't very far behind Ward 1 when it comes to perpetuating the race. It was credited with [illegible] the year [illegible].

[illegible] ... only 411 new babies appeared in Ward 3 in 1909, 357 in Ward 4 and 273 in Ward 5.

It is no surprise that Mr. Stork isn't over popular in the Back Bay wards. Wards 10 and 11 are next to the bottom of the list. Ward 10 with 302 births and Ward 11 with 282.

First thing you know, though, the stork is going to be crowded out of Ward 6. It sounds absurd, of course, in view of official statistics, but there's a reason [illegible] ... account of new manufacturing establishments and business places are being erected.

In 1900 there were 1,100 births among this element, while ten years afterward the number had decreased to 828. Births among English [illegible] residents ... from 280 in 1900 to 204 in 1910, while the decrease among the German born was even greater, there being 177 in 1900 and [illegible].

JORDAN GIVES LAND TO CONSERVATORY

Tract on Huntington Avenue Assessed at $31,200 Turned Over to Music Trustees.

The New England Conservatory of Music through the generosity of Eben D. Jordan has just received title to a lot of 11,350 feet of land fronting on Huntington avenue, and adjoining the Conservatory building. It is expected that an appeal will be made to the many friends of the institution to provide the requisite funds for an extension of the present building to be [illegible] on this land. Although the present three-story structure of Grecian style of architecture has been occupied less than ten years the school has outgrown its accommodations. It greatly needs additional class rooms as well as new dormitory facilities. The former need can be supplied on the site now made available. The insufficiency of the three Conservatory residences in Hemenway street involves still another problem.

The land conveyed to the Conservatory by Mr. Jordan is assessed for $31,200. It has a frontage of forty feet on Huntington avenue. It supplements Mr. Jordan's munificent contribution of Jordan Hall in the Conservatory building and numerous other benefactions which are assisting to make Boston the music centre of North America.

Departments Crowded.

When the trustees and management of the Conservatory decided to move from Franklin square ten years ago plans were drawn for a building believed to be large enough for many years to come. The attendance at the Conservatory has increased, however, from less than 1,500 students to about 2,800 this season.

The present structure occupies 132,000 square feet. It contains sixty recitation rooms, besides the two commodious concert halls and the various administration offices. There are now about 100 teachers, the excess of instructors over the recitation room making some difficult problems of adjustment of hours. Other departments are also cramped. The musical library has about reached the limit of its accommodation.

When the entire choral library of the Boylston Club and its successor, the Boston Singers, was received by the Conservatory, this collection had to be assigned to a special room on the third floor.

Helps Needy Students.

The institution is not commercial, for by its charter any profits made in the operation must be used to defray the cost of musical training for needy but meritorious students. It is not heavily endowed, but it is at present not only self-supporting but is gradually paying up debts contracted in former years.

Reciprocal relations have also been undertaken with Harvard University whereby [illegible] now exchanged between the two institutions. A beginning has been made of providing free scholarships for poor students and a campaign for additional scholarship funds is now in progress.

The New England Conservatory was the pioneer of the local educational institutions and museums occupying a site in the Fenway district. Mr. Jordan's gift will enable the music school to be the first in undertaking an extension of its original plan.

DRUG "CURE" BLAMED FOR PATIENT'S DEATH

Physician Charges [illegible] Made Hopeless "Fiend" of East Boston Man.

FAKE CONCERN EXPOSED

Prosecution May Follow Demise of George Coffin, Habitual User of Morphine.

Deadly doses of morphine prescribed by a [illegible] killed George Coffin of [illegible] street, East Boston, according to Dr. Joseph J. Cody, who attended him.

The treatment prescribed for Coffin who wished to be cured of the habit, it is declared, resulted in his taking as much as 25 grains of the drug a day. When it is realized that sometimes a grain and a half of morphine will kill, the atrocity of the fake cure concern [illegible] realized.

Medical Examiner George B. Magrath performed an autopsy on Coffin's body. He reported his findings to the office of the district [illegible] name of the drug [illegible] may follow.

Had to Delay Embalming.

Coffin was thought to be dead several weeks ago, but when an undertaker called to embalm him he discovered that he was still alive. [illegible] he declared.

The patient was revived and sent to the City Hospital. It was found that the patient was suffering from pneumonia. After treatment he was discharged as cured of pneumonia. [illegible] informed [illegible] history of the man that he was a morphine [illegible] self-administered morphine in [illegible] amounts.

But upon curing himself of the drug habit Coffin consulted a "cure" concern. He fell ill and before a doctor could be called he was dead. In discussing the case yesterday Dr. [illegible] said:

"I have known of a man taking over eight or ten grains of morphine a day, which is the maximum amount supplied to the most habitual user of the drug. In this case the man was being treated for the habit, and was supposed to be receiving a treatment that would cure him, but instead was receiving an amount of the dope that would increase the habit instead of curing it.

"Coffin was receiving an average of 200 grains a week in bottles numbered from 1 to 7. The first bottle was intended for Monday, and the last numbered bottle was supposed to be taken on the following Sunday.

Three Doses a Day.

"Each bottle contained an ounce, and the drug was ordered to be taken in three doses a day, which meant that he was taking into his system a little over eight grains per dose.

"It has been known where one and a half grains killed a person, so you can see that this so-called 'cure,' instead of improving patients, made fiends out of them.

"Morphine sold in powder form is not as [illegible] to the public as that sold in a liquid form.

"Coffin was an habitual user of the drug and was desirous of stopping the use of it. He sought the aid of the anti-morphine company, who gave him a larger amount than he was in the custom of having and in the course of the treatment was forced to increase the amount.

"He was taking the treatment for about eight months when they advertised to cure [illegible] six months [illegible] had been a [illegible] user for 10 or 12 years and after soliciting the aid of the cure company, they guaranteed to cure him. They refused to send the cure by mail, however, but sent it by an express company that carries baggage to East Boston and also carries expressage to all parts of the United States.

"Instead of having the effect of stopping fiends it is developing them every day.

"I am at a loss to understand why the authorities allow the anti-morphine cure to do business while a firm selling a smaller amount is prosecuted and yet not doing the amount of damage of the former company. The cure company is doing more damage than the druggists or any other person selling the drug.

This company puts it out in the form of a liquid, which, analyzed, shows a solution of 25 per cent of morphine, and which is creating more users of the deadly drug than any other method known to the medical profession."

GLOVER CHARGES CONSPIRACY BY CHRISTIAN SCIENCE BOARD TO DECEIVE MARY BAKER EDDY

The Christian Science Board of Directors is charged with conspiring to deceive Mary Baker Eddy so that she left to them nearly her entire estate, approximately $2,000,000, in an amended bill in equity filed at Concord yesterday by George W. Glover, Mrs. Eddy's son.

The bill declares that [illegible] was illegal, and that they withheld this fact from Mrs. Eddy.

[illegible] agreement not to contest his mother's will, in ignorance of the fact that an illegal disposition of the property was being contemplated.

Filed by Ex-Senator Chandler.

The bill was filed by William E. Chandler, attorney for Glover. The plaintiff declares that the directors knew that he would not have consented to any illegal disposition of the property, and that as such has been done, it is asked that the bequest be declared void.

In the amended bill the law regarding bequest to any church is given in full. In Massachusetts it provides that the income from any gift to a church shall not exceed $2,000. In New Hampshire it states that the limit is placed at $5,000.

The bill then quotes at length from the Christian Science Church Tenets and its Laws to show that the Board of Directors of the Mother Church constitutes the governing body of the church and is therefore under the laws of Massachusetts a corporate body for the purpose of holding church property.

These quotations are made for the purpose of bringing the Board of Directors under the law governing the amount of income that a church shall derive from any bequest. According to the bill, the directors are the church.

Charge of Conspiracy.

The bill then refers to the Board of Directors from the time of its inception up to the present time, dealing with the changes in the personnel of the board. It was founded in 1892. The bill then says:

"During all this period, from 1892 to 1910, the directors were planning to obtain from Mrs. Eddy, either by deed or will, the gift of substantially all her property and keep from any control of the same all all members of the church, so that at Mrs. Eddy's death they would be its sole and unlimited owners in perpetuity; and knowing all the time the limitations as to holding property imposed by the statutes of New Hampshire and Massachusetts they kept them from the knowledge of Mrs. Eddy, continued their conspiracy against the statute; on March 6, 1907, the defendants McLellan and Dickey, with the defendant Fernald, took possession under her deed of that date of all her personal estate, and on her death on December 3, 1910, the five directors were in possession of all her real estate in Massachusetts through its occupancy by the church or the defendant Dickey.

Mrs. Eddy's Will.

"The plaintiff further says that the said directors during the period between September 13, 1901 (when they had secured the making by Mrs. Eddy of the will which gave unconditionally to them almost the whole of her growing estate), and the summer of 1907 (when the gift of the [illegible] had [illegible]) [illegible] that the amount of her estate instead of being about $40,000 had become over $1,000,000 and was rapidly increasing, and they had on the 6th of March, by the deed of trust, taken the [illegible] out of any actual possession by Mrs. Eddy and into their own custody), found themselves confronted by three conditions, first, the bequest [illegible] held violation of well settled and just recognized laws of Massachusetts and New Hampshire against large donations in perpetuity to a church; second, the certainty that there could be no hope of obtaining legislation from Massachusetts where the church was located and from New Hampshire where the property and the testatrix and the executor were located, allowing consent to the increase of the donations to the extent of millions to one church like that of the First Church of Christ Scientist in Boston; and third, the certainty that if they endeavored to improve their chances of holding the whole of the property by making an arrangement with Mrs. Eddy's sons so they could keep these heirs out of court in case of any proceedings to enforce the laws against large donations to any one church, their negotiations would prove a failure provided they informed the sons of the intended effort to give two millions to the Boston church which, upon false charges, had expelled one of them from its membership, had made Mrs. Eddy, among her delusions, believe that Malicious Animal Magnetism had taken possession of them both and made them hostile to her, and had made her drive them both from her presence in order that the directors might the better continue their plans of control and enrichment.

"In this emergency the directors reached two conclusions; first, that they would not give up any of their millions by directing the making, in the name of Mrs. Eddy, of a new will, possibly influenced by Mrs. Eddy's growing delusions, excitable manifestations and mental and physical weakness which made her at times unmanageable, but that they would run extreme risks of losing the property in the effort to hold it all; and second, that they would endeavor to increase the [illegible] of [illegible] by making a family arrangement with the sons such as they finally succeeded in making, beginning negotiations in December, 1907, and bringing them to a conclusion in November, 1909."

Glover further declares that he was estranged from his mother through the "machinations" of the directors of the church, who, he declares, poisoned her mind by telling her that he was under the influence of "malicious animal magnetism."

Cite Scientists' Beliefs.

The Christian Science beliefs in this regard are quoted, and it is declared that the Christian Science practitioners are allowed to use the same methods in combating those who are addicted to the "evil practice."

That portion of the bill is as follows:

"The plaintiff further says that one of the beliefs of the church is that there are enemies of the religion of Christian Science called mental malpractitioners, who, by what is called treatment or argument, try to defeat the Christian Scientists in their efforts for the relief and overcoming of disease. This belief has been stated by Mrs. Eddy in these words:

The mental malpractitioners or mesmerists employ the argument of poison to kill people. They cause you or your patients to suffer from arsenical poison in the blood or stomach, mercurial poison, morphine, or any form of mineral, vegetable or animal poison which they may name in their arguments.

"And it has been a carefully guarded tenet of the church that in extreme cases the Christian Science practitioners should [illegible] back upon the malpractitioners the poison and make them sick and put them to death [illegible]

Treatment of the Sick.

"The plaintiff further says that Mrs. Eddy instructed her practitioners, when they were engaged in attempting to relieve [illegible] and disease [illegible] arguments and the [illegible] to attribute their failure to the effects of the malicious arguments of the aforesaid malpractitioners and to proceed to ward off those effects by the process above set forth.

"The plaintiff further says that the peculiar healing process of the Christian Science Church of treatment as described in the plaintiff's bill has been relied upon a large scale and in many cases has prevented sick persons and young children from being properly treated by regular physicians; and also that the acts here described have been tried upon Mrs. Eddy herself and upon the plaintiff; who asks leave to prove the facts, especially certain happenings known to Mr. Hermann S. Hering and Mr. Irving Tomlinson, for the purpose of showing that the church, which is alleged to be a religion, cannot be deemed a charity.

RAISE "GAG LAW" FUND.

Springfield Mail Clerks Active in Behalf of Measure.

SPRINGFIELD, March 25.—Railway mail clerks in New England are subscribing to a fund to be used in promoting the effort to get Congress to repeal "the gag law" at the special session to be held soon. Although the official explanation given for the removal of Clerk Harry E. Slocum of No. 19 Ringgold street, this city, is "conduct prejudicial to the service," it is suspected that if he is given a hearing the "gag law" might be offered as a specific reason. The "gag law" prohibits any mail clerk from giving any information regarding the postoffice department. The bill seeks to have him and three others reinstated.

TECH GIFT TO WOMAN.

Miss E. E. Schroeter Honored for Research Work.

For faithful service and valuable research work in the chemical department of the Institute of Technology, Miss Elsie E. Schroeter, Commonwealth avenue, was presented a gold watch and a $10 gold piece by members of the Technology chemical staff. Members of the Cleofan Society, Technology's woman's club, were present at the donation, after which tea and refreshments were served by Mrs. Henry P. Talbot, Miss Elizabeth E. Babcock and Miss F. H. Thomas.

TO RALLY DEMOCRATS

Somerville Meeting To-morrow Opens Campaign for Unity.

There will be a meeting of Democrats in Somerville, under the auspices of the City Committee, at 8 o'clock to-morrow evening in Bacon Hall, Union square, to promote unity and start a vigorous campaign of naturalization and registration. Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, State Committee Chairman John F. McDonald, Mayor-elect Barry and Frederick J. McLeod of Cambridge and M. F. Phelan of Lynn will be among the speakers.

55 YEARS OF STREET CARS.

Anniversary To-day of Tandem Horse Vehicles in Boston.

Fifty-five years ago to-day the people of Boston got their first glimpse of a street car. The car, drawn by two horses hitched tandem fashion, started at the corner of Pearl street and Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, proceeded up the avenue, across the old West Boston bridge and up Cambridge street as far as West Cedar street. The first car was run by the Union Railroad Company, which had taken a lease of the Cambridge Railroad.

FIRST YORK BEACH TRAIN.

Longest in History of the Line Opens Busy Season.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., March 25.—The first train of the season has passed over the rusted rails of the railroad between this city and York Beach, Me., and it was the longest in the history of the line. The amount of goods shipped at this season to the points along its route indicate that there will be a big Summer population to cater to and summer inhabitants of the shore resorts are happy over the prospect.

WILL INSPECT BOY SOLDIERS

Army Officers Detailed to Schools Where Drill Is Taught.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Four army officers have been detailed to make the annual inspection of all the educational institutions in the United States where military instruction is given. Captain Benjamin Simmons will inspect in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Vermont, Maine and New Hampshire.

Day-Old Transfers Useless.

Eight-cent checks must be used within the time limit punched, or they are worthless. The test case against Rufus Holman, heard yesterday in the Chelsea Police Court, has settled the matter. Holman was found guilty of evading his fare by offering a day old eight-cent check on a Boston & Northern car.

GERALDINE FARRAR PROUD OF NEW ROLE

American Prima Donna Sees in "Ariane" the Woman Serene Regardless of Fate.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Geraldine Farrar is glad that for once Maeterlinck has created a positive woman whom she can portray with full sympathy.

Miss Farrar thus indorsed Maeterlinck after a rehearsal of "Ariane et Barbe-bleue," Maeterlinck's version of "Bluebeard," which, set to music by Paul Dukas, will be produced [illegible] American prima donna [illegible] role.

Ariane is the one striking character of the [illegible] Maeterlinck has created [illegible] a positive woman, the protagonist of her sex, and that is why Miss Farrar is so pleased with the part.

"Maeterlinck, for once," said Miss Farrar, "has created a positive woman, one who knows her own mind, but [illegible] great truths of humanity. Her eyes are wide open when she consents to be the sixth wife of Bluebeard. The appearance of his previous five wives has no terrors for her. She has no illusions. She is not in love with him. FIRST POLL OF TOWNS IS TAKEN BY AMERICAN ON GREATER BOSTON IDEA

THE SUNDAY AMERICAN has completed the first poll of the cities and towns embraced in the Boston Metropolitan District, and the result shows a strong majority against annexation.

Nineteen of the cities and towns in the Metropolitan District are heartily in favor of the "Real Boston" proposed by the Chamber of Commerce—federation without annexation.

Eighteen other cities and towns are as heartily opposed to the plan.

Two are non-committal.

The great bogie in the path of the big liberal and broad-gauge business men of the Chamber is the word "annexation." Practically all the thirty-nine towns and cities which, with Boston, make up the district, are afraid Boston has matrimonial intentions.

Even the nineteen communities which confess to a sentiment in favor of the "Real Boston" take pains to say that it positively means "federation without annexation."

How the Communities Stand.

These are the nineteen towns and cities whose mayors or selectmen tell the Sunday AMERICAN that there is a local feeling in favor of giving "Real Boston" a trial:

Arlington	Lexington	Wellesley
Cambridge	Lynn	Weston
Chelsea	Malden	Weymouth
Cohasset	Quincy	Winchester
Dedham	Revere	Winthrop
Everett	Saugus
Hyde Park	Wakefield

And these eighteen towns and cities whose official spokesmen say, in effect, that they want no closer union with Boston than they have to-day, call it "Real Boston," call it "federation," or call it anything else:

Belmont	Hull	Somerville
Braintree	Medford	Stoneham
Brookline	Melrose	Swampscott
Canton	Milton	Waltham
Dover	Nahant	Watertown
Hingham	Newton	Woburn

Reports that can only be described as non-committal come from Needham and Westwood.

The people of Hyde Park have voted in favor of annexation. The city government of Newton has unanimously turned down even the suggestion of Real Boston, "federation without annexation." Just as sharply are the lines drawn by other communities. The keynote of the opposition, however, is a fear that federation without annexation in 1911 may mean something closer in 1921.

These are the opinions of representative town and city officials throughout the Metropolitan District:

Favors Co-operation Plan.

ARLINGTON—Selectman Herbert W. Rawson—It seems to me the Chamber of Commerce has always carefully studied all weighty problems that serve to help in the betterment of conditions, and in this case have laid out a plan by which the governing of the district will meet with the hearty co-operation of the people involved. I am opposed to annexation.

Selectman Jacob Bitzer—I am in favor of the Chamber of Commerce plan for a Metropolitan committee. While some towns are in favor of annexation, I feel pretty sure that the people of Arlington are against it.

CAMBRIDGE—Mayor-elect J. Edward Barry—I am strongly in favor of Metropolitan Council plan, which to my mind would bring about a really Greater Boston. When I was in the Legislature I favored a Metropolitan Council, and I talked for it, and I have never seen any reason yet to make me change my mind.

Alderman Marshal F. Blanchard—I am not in favor of the close federation or Greater Boston idea, but I think that the close federation idea is a grand, good idea. The Metropolitan Council idea is a fine thing.

Irving L. Linnell, president of the Common Council—I believe that we should not jump the whole way at once in the matter of a Greater Boston. I do, however, favor a loose union like the Metropolitan Council.

Keep Identity of Towns.

CHELSEA—William E. McClintock, chairman of the Board of Control—I am decidedly in favor of the council. At present large expenditures are made by State commissions and the municipalities are called on to pay an assessment for improvements when they were not aware of the cost. We have no means of knowing what the cost will be until the assessment is made according to valuation.

George H. Dunham of the Board of Control—The Greater Boston plan is a good one. I would not favor annexation.

City Clerk Charles H. Reed—I should favor the council, as in that manner the municipalities now taxed for the Metropolitan improvements have those taxes for improvements thrust on them without a voice in the matter.

COHASSET—William O. Souther, Jr., Selectman—I am not familiar with the "Real Boston" movement, but if it embodies a plan whereby the cities and towns will not lose their identity and Boston's commercial interests will get the benefit of the increased population, I believe the people of Cohasset would favor it.

DEDHAM—Lester A. Newcomb, chairman of the Board of selectmen—I do not favor a Greater Boston in any way that will take away from the town the right to control its own affairs. I don't object to a Metropolitan Council if it does not mean a step toward driving us into Boston.

John E. Fisher, member of Board of Selectmen—I am very much opposed to a Greater Boston. I think that it would be of no benefit to the town. As to the Metropolitan Council, I do not care to be quoted.

Richard A. Manderville, clerk of the Board of Selectmen—While I am not in favor of Dedham becoming a part of Boston, I am willing to help make Boston the city it should be through the proposed Metropolitan Council.

Opposed to Annexation.

EVERETT—Mayor Herbert P. Wasgatt—I am not opposed to the project as outlined by the Chamber of Commerce, provided it is carried no further. While I do not want to appear to regard with suspicion any plans of the nature of those outlined by the Chamber of Commerce, still I believe the sponsors will want it distinctly understood that a Greater Boston council will mean in no sense annexation or ultimate annexation to Boston.

HYDE PARK—Statement by Board of Selectmen—In view of the fact that the citizens have voted to instruct its Board of Selectmen to present a proper bill to the Legislature, favoring annexation, this board does not deem it wise to express an opinion upon the question propounded.

LEXINGTON—Selectman Frank D. Pierce—I think the plan of the Chamber of Commerce an admirable idea. The Metropolitan Council would give every representative a voice in the various questions. I am strongly against annexation of any kind.

LYNN—Former Mayor Charles N. Barney—It would be a great mistake to have Lynn annexed to Boston. I am heartily in favor of the plan adopted by the Chamber of Commerce.

Mayor William P. Connery—In years to come I have no doubt that Lynn and the surrounding cities and towns will constitute Greater Boston. The suburban districts are really dovetailed in form and are coming together. At present I do not think it is time to unite these to Boston. The Chamber of Commerce idea is a good one. Give it a trial.

MALDEN—Mayor George Howard Fall—I am in favor of the formation of a plan for a Greater Boston which will not in any way mean annexation to Boston. Malden people have not held public discussions of any importance one side or the other on the question but I am quite sure that they do not desire anything in the form of annexation.

President Edwin Trelard of the Malden Board of Trade—Most of the plans which I have read regarding a Greater Boston have seemed to have the ultimate end in view of annexation. I am quite sure that Malden has no intention of being annexed to Boston.

Sees Commercial Gain.

QUINCY—W. G. Shaw, prominent business man—I favor a "Real Boston." The commercial interests of Boston and Quincy are identical. Anything that would tend to better the commerce of Boston would also benefit Quincy. I would oppose, however, any plan which would destroy Quincy's identity or politically unite the two cities.

John R. Richard, Councilman—I do not believe in annexation. I am not strongly in favor of the "Real Boston" plan at present. I have not made any great study into either plan, but I believe that a loose federation, if carried out properly, would benefit Boston and all the suburbs.

REVERE—Judge Samuel R. Cutler, town solicitor and chairman of the Republican Town Committee—I favor the proposed Metropolitan Council, as we already have in substance a Greater Boston. It is inevitable that this district must be unified, but it does not seem, according to New England ideas, that local governments should be abolished.

Ernest Acker, chairman of the Board of Selectmen—I favor the co-operation of the various cities and towns. Their representatives should meet for local benefits, especially for public service corporations and economy in local administration. We do not, however, want annexation.

Frank H. Farrell, vice-president of the Board of Trade—It will benefit all municipalities in Greater Boston. Boston does not get its proper rating in the business and mercantile world. The real Boston is much larger than the political Boston.

Assessor William H. Colcord—The trouble will be that the Mayor of Boston will want a majority vote centred in him, and the present Mayor of Boston is on record as having made this request. Little good can come from such a council.

Would Aid Suburbs.

SAUGUS—Representative H. M. Forristall, also a member of the Board of Selectmen—I would oppose at present annexation of this town to Boston. Certain federated plans which have been made public in Boston would undoubtedly aid some of the suburban districts. I am a firm believer in co-operation of town and city officials on metropolitan affairs, but it is early yet to even think of having Saugus as a part of Greater Boston.

WAKEFIELD—Selectman Nathaniel E. Cutler—I favor the Boston Chamber of Commerce proposition over and above the Metropolitan Council plan. I favor the movement because of the pride I have in Boston and I sincerely believe it will put Boston where it properly belongs.

WELLESLEY—George A. Sweetser, retiring chairman of the Board of Selectmen—I am strongly opposed to annexation or any form of union that means the loss of local control over affairs of local interest. However, I favor the Metropolitan Council of representatives from each of the cities and towns of the Metropolitan District, to discuss and obtain data of affairs that are to go before the Legislature.

WESTON—Nathan S. Fiske, Selectman—I am in favor of the "Real Boston" plan if it is carried no farther than the forming of a municipal council. Weston does not desire a political federation of any kind with the other cities and towns of Greater Boston.

WEYMOUTH—Selectman E. W. Hunt—What will benefit Boston commercially will benefit every city and town within a radius of twenty miles of Boston. I can't understand why the city of Newton should object to the Metropolitan Council plan. They are interested in the expenses of the Metropolitan District and ought to fall right in line.

WINCHESTER—Selectman George R. Nugent—I am a member of the Chamber of Commerce and therefore knowing that the commission authorized by the Chamber of Commerce to investigate the Greater Boston plan has made a careful study of the matter, it has interested me, and I can frankly say that I hope that the metropolitan committee will have full power to decide on the many and serious problems that may and undoubtedly will come up in the course of events. I am positive that Winchester is against annexation of any kind.

James P. Boutwell, chairman of the Board of Selectmen—Federation as far as it goes is all right, but no annexation. We don't want to become a part of Boston.

Town Treasurer A. William Rooney—Federation but no annexation.

WINTHROP—Brendan J. Keenan, Selectman—I believe it is a step towards annexation and I am opposed to annexing Winthrop to Boston at this time. I do not see any harm in the proposed Council, but I cannot see where the cities or towns are to be benefited. If any good can come to Winthrop through the proposed Metropolitan Council I am heartily in favor of it.

BELMONT—Selectman George C. Flett—I do not believe in any form of annexation, as I think it would ultimately hurt the small towns like Belmont, which have always enjoyed privileges that they would not have under the Real Boston Plan. I hope if the plans are carried out that the Chamber of Commerce idea for a committee of men to govern the affairs will be speedily put to test.

Sees No Advantage.

BRAINTREE—B. Herbert Woodsum, Selectman—The people of Braintree are opposed to annexation to Boston. I have studied the "Real Boston" movement but little, but I fear that any movement that would tend to bring the cities and towns of the Metropolitan District closer together would be but an entering wedge for an annexation plan.

BROOKLINE—Philip S. Parker, chairman of the Board of Selectmen—I do not approve of a Greater Boston or Metropolitan Council. There are advantages in the latter as proposed. I think that it would possibly lead to annexation. I do believe in co-operation, but without any political unit.

CANTON—Abner Morse, chairman of the Board of Selectmen—I don't approve of either the Greater Boston or the Metropolitan Council plan for the closer uniting of the cities and towns in the Greater Boston district entirely. I do believe, however, that a closer relationship between the cities and towns could be worked out. The plans thus far offered do not meet with my approval, though there are good points in them.

DOVER—J. H. Chickering, chairman of the Board of Selectmen—I am absolutely opposed to both the Greater Boston and the Metropolitan Council propositions. I have yet to be shown how either of them could in any possible way advance the interests of Dover.

HINGHAM—Walter P. Hersey—Hingham is a residential town. What benefits Boston does not benefit Hingham. Hingham would prefer to keep its own government. The "Real Boston" movement does not interest Hingham.

HULL—John Smith, Selectman—The people in Hull are vigorously opposed to annexation. They are not in favor of the "Real Boston" movement. The plan is apparently harmless, but we fear that it might develop so that it would eventually end in annexation to Boston.

MEDFORD—Mayor Charles S. Taylor—Medford, I believe, does not want annexation to Boston. There may be some parts of the Greater Boston plans which have been proposed that would meet with approval, but as a whole I believe Medford is satisfied to remain as it is and have no union with the Hub.

MELROSE—Mayor Eugene H. Moore—I am not in favor of annexation, of a Greater Boston council, or of any other plan to more closely affiliate this city with Boston.

Ex-Mayor John Larrabee—I am opposed to annexation in any form. I think we are better off than we would be under any plan which has yet been put forward.

No Fault to Find.

MILTON—Maurice Duffy, chairman of Board of Selectmen—We are getting along very well. In regard to the Metropolitan Council, our own little government, without any strings, is the best.

Henry H. Barnes, Selectman—I am thoroughly opposed to annexation to Boston, or a Metropolitan Council form of government.

Philip S. Dalton, Selectman—The Metropolitan Council problem needs considerable thought, but at the present time I am opposed to it.

NAHANT—Charles T. Varr, Selectman—I am opposed to annexation. Our present form of government satisfies me. I have studied the plan sent out by the Boston Chamber of Commerce, but it has not changed my attitude.

NEWTON—Mayor Charles E. Hatfield—I am strongly opposed to annexation and, in fact, the Chamber of Commerce scheme. The bill in itself, I admit, is an innocent looking proposition, but I believe it to be but an entering wedge for annexation. Newton doesn't want annexation or any of the provisions of the measure. I favor being let alone and my sentiments are the same as those of the committee from our Board of Aldermen, which recently issued an adverse printed report on the "Real Boston" project after careful investigation.

Unity of Interests.

SOMERVILLE—Ex-Mayor Charles A. Grimmons—The Greater Boston idea does not appeal to me. Any move that would cause Somerville to lose its identity is out of the question. Yet I was an advocate of the Metropolitan Council idea when I was Mayor of Somerville. The city of Somerville would gain nothing by annexation. A Metropolitan Council would only mean the unity of interests to appear before the Legislature.

STONEHAM—Selectman George H. Barnstead—The Metropolitan Council sounds good, and no doubt would be of some benefit, but I don't think Stoneham is ready to take any step in this direction as yet.

SWAMPSCOTT—James F. Caton, Selectman—Without giving the matter much thought I would say off-handed that I am opposed to annexation of the town of Swampscott to Boston. Of course certain federated plans might aid considerably on certain Metropolitan projects, but further than that you can put me down as a member of the opposition.

WALTHAM—Mayor Edward A. Walker—I am greatly opposed to any federation of the cities with Boston. The scheme appears to be an entering wedge for an undesired political federation.

John M. Gibbs, president of the Board of Aldermen—The result of a confederation with Boston would mean loss of individuality.

WATERTOWN—P. S. Cunniff, ex-Chairman of the Board of Selectmen—I am against annexation and it appears to me the Chamber of Commerce bill is but the first step toward annexation. Co-operation along certain Metropolitan lines I believe to be a good thing. Annexation we do not want.

Satisfied With Present Plan.

WOBURN—Mayor Hugh D. Murray—I think as a whole Woburn is better off as it is. I have been glancing over the report of the Special Committee of the Newton Board of Aldermen of the "Real Boston" project and think that the views set forth by that committee are well worth considering, as they have weighed the question from every standpoint.

President William H. Henchey of the Board of Aldermen—I have not studied the questions much, as I did not think very favorably of either for Woburn.

NEEDHAM—H. T. Childs, chairman of the Board of Selectmen—Neither the Greater Boston nor the Metropolitan Council plans met with any great enthusiasm when a desultory discussion of them was brought out at a recent board meeting.

WESTWOOD—Henry E. Weatherbee, chairman of Selectmen—Of course, I would not be in favor of the town becoming a part of Boston, but nevertheless if the town would benefit by having a representative to co-operate with the Mayors of cities and the selectmen of the towns I would not object.

MISS KATE WILLIAMS WHO IS BRIDE OF JAMES M. BUCHANAN

MISS KATE WILLIAMS

NEW BEDFORD, March 25.—Miss Kate Williams, daughter of City Engineer William F. Williams of this city, became the bride this evening of James M. Buchanan, who is an electrical engineer connected with the New York & New Jersey Telephone Company. He is a graduate of Princeton University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His father is State Librarian Henry C. Buchanan of Trenton, N. J.

Young Mrs. Buchanan is one of the prettiest girls in New Bedford and a leader in the younger society set. Although the wedding was a private ceremony, the young couple were showered with congratulations.

The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, No. 34 Court street, and the officiating clergyman was the Rev. Matthew C. Julien, pastor of the Trinitarian Church. The bridal couple were unattended at the altar and only their immediate relatives attended. Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan will reside, after a wedding journey, near Riverside Drive in New York.

China Borrows From Japan.

PEKIN, March 25.—The government has accepted a loan of $5,000,000 from the Yokohama Specie Bank in Yokohama, Japan, and will give in security 5 per cent railway bonds. The loan, which will be used to meet a deficit of the railway board, is without political significance.

"VOTES FOR WOMEN" HAS A FUNNY SIDE

Mrs. Birdsall, Boston Suffrage Worker, Writes of the Humors of Canvass Work.

Ringing doorbells for "Votes for Women" requires courage and perseverance, but the young women who are doing the ward and precinct work for the new Woman's Suffrage party find it interesting and even amusing.

Mrs. C. F. Birdsall, the well known Boston suffrage worker, in an interview tells the AMERICAN some of her experiences as a house to house canvasser.

By MRS. C. E. BIRDSALL.

You'd think that in the fifty years that suffrage has been talked about, agitated, laughed at, cartooned, derided upon, jeered at, voted upon, given leave to withdraw, quarreled over, fought over, lectured and written about, that every man, woman and child in the universe would know about it, and know whether they are for or against it. But they don't. Some even do not know what the term means.

And you might also think that the task of the courageous workers who undertake to do ward and precinct work for the new woman's suffrage party and endeavor to classify people into the No, Yes and Non-committal columns, might be rather a gigantic one without agreeable features. But there again you're mistaken. It is the most interesting the most sublimely funny employment that ever happened.

Not only do we increase our knowledge of human nature fourfold, but we catch remarkable snapshot pictures of domestic life and of the peculiar workings of certain minds. We are alternately roasted and frozen, confided in and told the family history, and made to feel we are the dust of the earth. A day of ward and precinct work is as full of "thrillers" as a trip in a biplane, and packed full of human interest.

Old Gentleman at the Door.

We ring at a certain door on N—— street, in a certain suburb. A mild mannered, benevolent looking gentleman appears at the door.

"Are you in favor of woman suffrage?" we ask. He peers at us over his glasses a moment before replying. "Why, certainly, if the ladies want to vote, let them do so."

"Good," we answer. "Now please give us your name and address." He does so. "How about your wife?" we ask.

"Oh, I'm sure I don't know," he says hastily. "Martha," shouting to the regions above, "are you in favor of woman suffrage?"

"Most assuredly not," flings down the lady of the house in biting tones. "I am an anti."

"Oh, well," begins the mild mannered man, "perhaps on the whole you'd better not put my name down."

"But its already down," we protest, "And it wouldn't look well to cross out the first name on the list." So it remains.

Our order somewhat dampened, we ring the bell next door. A sweet, motherly woman admits us, sails majestically across the room and sinks into a chair, motioning us to be seated.

"Do you believe in Woman Suffrage?" we ask in a subdued tone. "Believe in Woman Suffrage?" she exclaims. "Of course we do, every one of us. Who in their senses wouldn't? My husband is a member of the Men's League, and my son is an ardent supporter."

How About the Neighbors?

"Well, some of your neighbors do not," we remark, as we write down her name and address and that of her husband and son.

"Oh, next door." She nods significantly. "Well whatever they may say, there's only one vote over there, and that is the Madame's."

We sally up to the next door. A thin elderly lady looks us over suspiciously and rather gingerly asks us in sitting meantime on the edge of her chair.

"Do you believe in Woman Suffrage?" we ask ingratiatingly.

"No, yes that is, I signed a NO paper last year, but I'm thinking of changing my mind."

"Well, why not change it now?" we ask. "Shall we put you down 'Yes'?"

"No, better not put down anything, for whatever you put down I might decide differently. Just now I can't decide." So we put her in the "non-com" column, which sounds suspicious, but which really only means non-committal.

The Scholarly Man.

"Do you believe in woman suffrage?" we ask a scholarly looking man who answers our ring.

"Well, dear me, how sudden," he replies. "I guess so."

"How about your wife?" we ask.

"I don't know," he rejoins. "Florence (calling above) do you want to vote?"

"I don't know," floated down in silvery tones.

"Well, hurry up and decide. Lady here wants to know," her spouse continued.

"I guess so," came the answer. So we added two names, suffragists made while you wait.

We were now descending the hill and coming upon a slightly more modest neighborhood. An auburn haired school teacher whom we asked, "Do you believe in woman suffrage?" responded devoutly, but very unexpectedly, "Thank the Lord I am not a suffragist," to which we replied, "That is what the Pharisee said in the Bible, Miss D——."

NO MOLLYCODDLE AT 101.

Waterbury Man Smokes, Drinks and Eats Like a Farm Hand.

WATERBURY, March 25.—Orson W. Wayward of No. 547 West Main street is no mollycoddle, for at the age of 101 years he drinks, smokes and chews tobacco, eats as if he had a boiler-plated stomach and derides the people who want him to take "soft stuff."

He has done no active work since 1868. Each day this centenarian arises about 6 o'clock, eats a hearty breakfast, then spends the remainder of his morning on a couch until noon, when he eats a big dinner. His afternoon program is about the same as that of the morning, then at supper he does another big feat with the knife and fork. He retires for the night soon after supper.

OLD ELMS TO GO.

Famous New Haven Green Trees Dying; Will Be Cut Down.

NEW HAVEN, March 25.—President Henry F. Blake of the Park Board, is going to have every one of the big elms on Central Green cut down, because it has been found that all chance of saving them is gone. Old age, poor soil and insects are blamed for the death of the elms which made the green one of the most picturesque spots in New England, when they were alive and vigorous.

BIG BETS ON WOODCHUCK.

LEE, March 25.—A big amount of Berkshire county money has been wagered on the whereabouts of a mysterious woodchuck which went into his hole at Quigley's Corner in the heart of the town on August 26, 1910, and has not been seen since.

Even money is offered that the woodchuck will come out in due time.

The odds that he is not in the hole are ten to eight, and there are lots of bets being made ten to six that the animal is dead in his underground retreat. Nothing like it has happened in Lee in the betting line since Jim Jeffries failed to "come back" at Reno.

GREAT FINANCIAL HOUSE OF ROTHSCHILD IS NO LONGER MONEY POWER OF EUROPE

By BOERSIANER.

There was a financial stringency in Vienna. [illegible] the leading bankers in the Austrian capital were in conference. An American was present. Suggestions for relief were made. A remedial plan was at length adopted.

At the adjournment the American asked why Albert von Rothschild had not attended the meeting. The conferees looked at one another and smiled. It was a very suggestive smile, which the American soon understood.

Baron Salomon Albert von Rothschild—who died the other day—had not been consulted, because his influence on the money market was nominal and his opinion in [illegible] he was admired in his views on everything save finance. Strong headed, determined in all ways—excepting financial. The fortune left by his father had increased. But the enhancement had been due to a natural increment and not to the ability of the late baron.

What has just been written of the younger Rothschild is descriptive in varying degrees, of all the Rothschilds. This reads like a strong statement. But it is stated after thorough investigation and mature reflection. The financial power of the Rothschilds has been on the wane for some time.

Houses Fall to Stay Compact.

The reasons are several; social, conservative, patriotic. The ancestor, Meyer Amschel Nathan Rothschild, had abjured the family never to separate. The present generation has ignored the injunction. The houses in different parts of Europe have ceased to act in concert. Frequently they are antagonistic. Family feeling has vanished. They are French or English or Austrian in thought and sentiment, according to birth and breeding.

Meyer Amschel Nathan had counseled a policy of making money. His descendants are conservative, not to say cautious—investors and not promoters. Meyer Amschel Nathan had ordered intermarriage. The order had been highly honored in the breach. The Rothschilds are aristocrats. They are connected directly and indirectly with the aristocracy of all the cultured nations of Europe which, of course, excludes Russia. There are Austrian, French, German and English titles in the family, including Lord Rosebery's, whose wife is a Rothschild.

There is a constant struggle for social supremacy in the family. They intrigue and push and jostle for admission to the houses of such royalties and high aristocrats as are by chance or by might above and beyond the control of the Rothschilds. One by one, members of the families have dropped out of active business, have taken up society, or have led the life of a "gentleman." The cloaks for snobbery are more or less presentable and deceptive. Adoption of the ornamental as a vocation has been a confession of weakness, a sign of fatal inroads of the snob notion that the directly useful is somehow not so gentlemanly as the useless or the supplementary.

In fact, society of the European sort has proved to be the tomb of the financial genius of the Rothschilds. Since the death of Nathan, the audacious, there has arisen no heir to the courage that was his and his father's. Though Europe has been even more turbulent, in ways as full of opportunity for the financier; though America's immeasurable opportunities for financial powers and profit have been obvious for a generation or more, the Rothschilds have acted upon the policy of keeping what they had, a policy that inevitably leads to the heaviest of losses, the loss of might.

Their Force Now a Passive One.

Year by year, the family wealth has grown. In mere possession it is many times greater to-day than half a century ago, when the Rothschild wealth was larger than that of all the other financiers of the world combined. But the power of the family has been changed from a vast, active, aggressive force of construction, felt in every enterprise throughout the world, to a vast passive force, exerting itself merely to maintain itself. The Rothschilds are paying the inevitable price of receiving no blow—they deal none.

The difference between Nathan and his present-day successor in England, Nathaniel, is vast. Nathaniel is far more of a sportsman and society man than a financier. An all around "English gentleman," the power that should have been his has gone to others.

In France the check to influence was society politics. Baron Alphonse Rothschild espoused the Bourbon cause early in life—the dead political cause of Louis Philippe. His salon was the rendezvous of the Legitimists. He opposed Louis Napoleon. He was politically unfriendly to the republic. In Austria it was the other extreme with the male members, none of which may marry a Gentile, though the women of the house may do as they please.

German Descent Is Rapid.

In Germany, from a financial viewpoint, the descent from power was swifter. There, in Frankfort, the dynasty was founded.

When Heinrich Heine visited Ludwig Boerne in Frankfort, the essayist and Republican, Boerne pointed out to the poet in the Judengasse, the number 152, a house that had three stories with an attic, and above this a large gable peak bursting from the roof. There were two small dormer windows at the side of this peak, and the whole frame of the house was well windowed for the benefit of a multitude of families, of which the Rothschilds were but one.

This was the first Rothschild "bank." From this house Boerne explained, there would issue a little red headed man, who went about the streets of Frankfort in a rusty gabardine and old gaiters, a blue kerchief around his neck and an old umbrella in his hand. This was the custodian of the Landgrave of the Hesse Cassel for a time during the Napoleonic war, thus the financier who originated what is now known as the government loan system.

Frankfort Banking House Gone.

Boerne told Heine that Meyer Amschel had patted him on the head one day and since that benediction Boerne, though a German author, had never been in want of money. Heine, thereupon, frantically demanded an introduction to Amschel's heir in Frankfort that he might enjoy a similar blessing. He saw the then Rothschild, but the touch failed of efficiency. The son's hand could not turn everything to gold. But it must be said in his favor that nothing, indeed, could heal Heine of his chronic improvidence.

To-day the Frankfort banking house is no more. It was closed comparatively recently for lack of initiative, as the Italian branch had been shut up for a similar reason. The offspring of Charles—in Italy—and of the second Amschel in Frankfort had less of the first Rothschild's genius and tenacity than the heirs of Nathan, Jacob and Solomon, who went to London, Paris and Vienna respectively, although the trouble of the Naples and Frankfort families was want of financial courage, rather than the insidious poison of social ease and ambition.

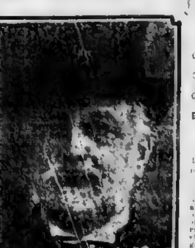
By the process of auto-accumulation, the Rothschild fortune is of staggering size. The French branch is an illustration. This family's wealth is estimated at two thousand millions of dollars. But, as noted, the enormous augmentation is due to the natural increase of the wealth of nations, minus the increase of the debts of the nations. The aggressive, inventive and venturesome spirit of Nathan—who landed in England with less than $200,000, and died worth about $200,000,000—has vanished from the family.

The Rothschilds of to-day are investors. They are seldom promoters. If their name appears on a bond offering, it is second to that of the real floater. Government loans, which in former times were the monopoly of the house, are no longer made exclusively if they are made at all. Once the railway builders of Europe and Asia, they are now merely railway bond coupon clippers. They will buy a gold or copper mine occasionally if the mine has been mined successfully by others. But they lean almost entirely upon the judgment of hired experts in all matters.

From time to time they have tried out their college graduated scions. The latest test was made with the two sons of Baron Albert. They were sent to New York to be trained by August Belmont & Co. They were soon taught how not to do it. They witnessed the thrilling, but unprofitable spectacle of Mr. Gates catching August Belmont short of Louisville & Nashville, witnessed also the loss by the Rothschilds of control of that property, thanks to Mr. Belmont's socio-financial mentality, with the social predominating.

The Belmonts have been the American correspondents of the Rothschilds for forty-five years. De facto, they are no longer the Rothschild correspondents, for the reason that the latter day Belmonts are afflicted with the same ailment from which the Rothschilds suffer—an enlargement of the social vein.

A Hebrew word symbolizes the position of the Rothschilds in finance. It is Ichabod—vanished splendor.



Lord Rothschild, who did much to place the family at the head of the world's financiers.

FRENCH VISCOUNT HERE.

Noted Archæologist in Boston in Search of Exhibits.

Viscount Duranceau de la Jarrie of Paris, the noted archeologist and editor, has arrived in Boston on a tour of the country in search of archeological exhibits. It is the contention of the noted student that ancient monuments have been discovered in Maine similar to those unearthed in eastern Europe. He is a member of the French Academy and formerly was editor of Le Matin. The results of his investigation will be made into a big work on American archeology. He is accompanied by his wife, formerly Miss Litchfield of Boston.

CO-EDS BEST WIVES, SAYS DR. WHEELER

University of California President Approves Coeducation and Mutual Marriages.

Coeducation will diminish the number of divorces.

Educated women make the best wives.

College marriages have proved happier than those made elsewhere.

Education of the sexes together insures respect and self-respect.

BENJAMIN IDE WHEELER.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 25.—[illegible] marriages are happier [illegible] husband and wife should [illegible] and affection in common; [illegible] that the sweet girl graduate should make the choice of a husband as essential as the choice of a career, is the opinion of Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president of the University of California. Dr. Wheeler [illegible] a lifetime in the study of education and its effects. He gives his verdict [illegible] that coeducation [illegible] advisable and [illegible].

Dr. Wheeler's views are in direct contrast to the views of many sociologists who have maintained that the higher education makes women much more efficient to compete [illegible] that it [illegible] the world with a disdain for [illegible].

College Marriages.

"Marriages made in college have proved happier than those made elsewhere," says Dr. Wheeler. "The value of coeducation is steadily becoming more apparent. The education of the sexes together insures mutual respect and self-respect.

"Men are said to be avoiding colleges in the East where there are women students," said Dr. Wheeler. "This is not true in the West."

"Men are going into technological departments, not out to get away from the women, while women are devoting themselves to preparation for teaching.

"In the University of California 68 per cent of the women students rarely find themselves in classes with women.

"Coeducation is undoubtedly the prevailing usage in the United States. The colleges adopted coeducation from the usages of the public schools, which had originally adopted it without theoretical basis.

Civil War Brought Change.

"The polite female seminary has left the horizon.

"The sparsely settled school districts could not set up two schools, so the sexes went to school together. After the Civil War there was a scarcity of men teachers. No women came to the front. Eighty-one per cent of the teachers now are women.

"The first coeducational college in the United States was Antioch. Then followed Oberlin in 1850.

"There are to-day eight separate colleges for women. Radcliffe is an annex to Harvard and Barnard is an annex to Columbia.

"Seventy graduate courses at Harvard are open to women, and the tendency is toward the blending of the two universities in graduate work. The separation was broken down because of economic waste.

"Many think that coeducation is unnecessary and unwise.

"Shall women have higher education? Shall it be co-education?

"The first question has been settled. It is generally conceded that women should have higher education. The second, even in America, is still open, and opinions fluctuate."

"I think it is true that coeducational marriages are the most happy," said Mrs. Mary L. Cheney, appointment secretary at the university.

Business Success Through Publicity

No. 90

How Advertising Marketed Concrete

The educational force of advertising in enlarging a demand for goods is well known to all advertisers. Many a need not felt before has been created by this kind of publicity.

A remarkable illustration is that of concrete. Some years ago concrete was an uncertain material of limited use. The great building materials were either brick or wood. One of the producers of Portland cement was convinced of the value of publicity for a commodity even so remote from the consumer as cement.

Cement is sold to the contractor, who uses it in construction. The plan of the advertising was to induce the consumer to call for specifications in which cement would be the constructing material, and to suggest new ways of using cement for all sorts of heavy and light construction.

The entire production of cement in 1880 in the United States amounted to about 2,000,000 barrels; the output was doubled by 1886, and in 1900 had reached a consumption of 17,000,000 barrels. In 1910 the output was 73,000,000 barrels, and the producer that began the advertising did 18,000,000 barrels of this business, or 25% of the total sales of the country.

All of which goes to show not only the educational force of the advertising, but the value that advertising has for the initial advertiser in any field.

Newspapers have been very useful in educational campaigns of advertising. Their great value is the constant education of the various ideas that will induce people to buy goods. The frequency of insertion has much to do with the value of newspaper advertising, as well as the fact that more people are readers of newspapers in any given locality than of magazines.

No field is so intelligent as the New England field. No section has a greater purchasing possibility and no paper is so strong in the New England field as is the Boston American. It not only has the greatest circulation within Boston, but its Sunday circulation reaches the outlying towns to a larger degree than any other Boston paper. Its daily circulation is almost 400,000.

SHAW ESTATE'S TAX DODGING PLOT HINTS AT CONSPIRACY BY EXECUTORS

Lawyer's Probe Into Whitewash Result From Bar Association Inquiry.

MEN wanted to know from one another yesterday, in this town, but what is going to be done now that the cases of Francis C. Welch, of No. 7 Deerfield st, Roxbury, Dentist, Herbert C. Herrick, of No. 31 Marlboro st, Mason, and Quincy A. Shaw, of Lincoln, who, under pressure from the Boston Finance Commission—the Finance Commission being under some pressure from the Mayor—recovered $82,000 as the penalty of Boston the other day as a "moral obligation"? This could only have happened in Boston.

Welch and Herrick and Shaw are executors of the estate of Shaw's father, who died in his home in Lincoln Plain in the summer of 1909, leaving an estate valued now at $3,000,000.

Welch and Herrick and Shaw filed an inventory of the Q. A. Shaw estate, valuing it to be worth $750,000. They "waived" a hearing on it in such a way that Section 5, Chapter 486, Acts of 1909, they have good it to be filed with interest.

Talk of "Conspiracy."

There was a good deal of talk yesterday of conspiracy in connection with the concealment practiced and admitted by Welch and Herrick and Shaw, and Mr. Storey, president of the Massachusetts Bar Association, has called the attention of the grievance committee. Lawyers say that, in connection with the fact that Welch and Herrick are "going to be reached," that the public may "get more for its money from Whitewash" and more to that effect.

The Massachusetts Bar Association may be forced to act. If it does, the secret will be told when sentence is passed on the executors.

Quincy A. Shaw, who was eighty-three years old when he died, was one of the richest men in the United States. He owned a large percentage of the capital stock of the Calumet & Hecla Mining Company.

In the inventory filed six months after Shaw's death the holdings of Welch, Herrick and the eminent Mr. Herrick and the eminent Q. A. Shaw are made up largely of the personal property of the estate there were 2,500 shares of Calumet & Hecla at $600 a share—it was set down as worth $1,500,000.

There were nearly 15,000 shares of Calumet & Hecla in the Shaw estate. Welch, Herrick and the younger Shaw valued it at being worth $1,500,000. It was worth $3,000,000. The executors Mr. Welch and the eminent Mr. Herrick knew that, also. They concealed it.

Welch, Herrick and Shaw have been free executors for this enrichment. All of them may be considered rich. One of them is interesting as a man who gives so quote from the charitable and merciful finding of Holy Writ, "Let not your left hand know what your right hand doeth."

"THIS ALSO DESIRED TO FURNISH THE ASSESSORS NO MORE INFORMATION THAN THEY WERE OBLIGED BY LAW TO GIVE."

Why Boston Rents are High.

Quincy A. Shaw had been a tax dodger in his native city practically all his life and the cases of Welch, Herrick and Shaw, Jr., affect and will affect every man in Boston. Just rent a little shop or owns a little home in the city of Boston, you pay taxes on it, and, in the case of more successful attempts to get away with it by executors and trustees, Welch and Herrick and young Shaw were caught at, you are called upon to pay the tax on small shops and little houses in Boston.

In the Fall of 1908 Welch and Herrick made a deal with the Shaw executors. Inventory of the Shaw estate at the Registry of Probate they say, as per the nine items in the estate, and then they wrote this most unusual explanatory clause:

"Also, other personal estate to be hereafter inventoried as discovered by us."

Two years and six months have passed, and no further returns in records in Register Bailey's office. Just what is "hereafter" to be and is counted for THE PEOPLE IN THE CASE ARE FINALLY IN WAY OF THE STATE HOUSE Massachusetts has a Republican commissioner named William D. T. Trefry. He comes from Maine and has been there since he was growing more and more unpopular with such people of wealth as have vast fortunes to seek and trade for. He is believe in paying taxes upon them. He is kind of property to called investment and may have won the word. You probably have heard of the Long Island Railroad. Interest you. You want to get over it.

Final Accounting Due.

Welch and Herrick and Shaw filed the same kind of inventory in the Suffolk County Probate Court. They had to file it with the Court House Commissioner. Here attention seems to have been attracted at once to the unusual phrase within the inventory. For instance:

Welch, Herrick and Shaw made oath that this is true and perfect inventory of all the estate of said deceased which has come to their knowledge.

Then the solemn oath was written the words "as herein explained." The "explanation" was, "Also other personal estate to be hereafter inventoried as discovered by us."

The novel terms were not filed with the State House. They said nothing. They held a room card in the office of the Treasurer and Receiver General, and got back waited.

At the end of two years, under the law on inheritances, Welch and Herrick and Shaw were due for a final accounting with the Commonwealth. There was a printed blank to be filled in at several points.

The very last question on this blank form was: "Are there any other assets not yet to be sold? Don't you think of anything? If so, are assessing them for taxation? Now, look in this all of this estate! On your oath!"

This is the interesting answer of Mr Trefry's final question, his trump card, but this is what it amounted to in other words, tell the truth or be a perjurer.

Executors Confess Everything.

And so, at the State House, Welch and Herrick and Shaw, three eminent gentlemen, three of our best people, told all. They owned up to the 15,000 shares of Calumet & Hecla. They admitted that the Shaw holdings in Calumet & Hecla were $250,000, instead of $50,000. They declared an estate of $1,500,000. They had known it all along. They paid the Commonwealth an inheritance tax on that basis.

Gradually the facts leaked out. People began to talk. Mayor Fitzgerald referred to the case in his inaugural. He wrote to the Boston Finance Commission about it. The Shaw case aroused public comment, but he appeared to take the attitude that Mr. Dibble's job was to see to it after the "big fishes" as keenly as it has gone after the little fishes in the past. This is not to say, and in no way new to the Finance Commission or any of its civil and criminal servants and lovers, the Finance Commission has shaken down the fortunes of Francis C. Welch, the highly respectable Mr. Robert Franch Herrick and the eminent Mr. Herrick and Shaw, for $492,020.

In 1903, the Quincy A. Shaw estate was assessed on $5,000,000. It now appears that it should have been assessed on $15,000,000. The estate saved upwards of $226,000.

Then Mr. Henri Payer, you, Mr. Small, Commissioner Cross, Attorney-General Herbert Parker, Governor Guild, Mayor Fitzgerald, Commissioner Hall, Commissioner Dibble, assessors in Welch, Robert F. Herrick and Quincy A. Shaw were holding out.

How do you like it?

What are you going to do about it?

The Welch and Herrick an big that they can't be dealt with by the People may say.

If there is any comfort in the news, it great wealth, and who have been quick to

FINANCE COMMISSION DECLARED GUILTY IN TAKING SHAW MONEY

If the statement made by the Finance Commission is true, to the effect that one of the Shaw executors said he knew before the inventory was filed that there was in the estate property to the amount of $1,000,000 that escaped taxation, the public of Boston may be guilty of a felony.

If Mr. Sullivan and his brown members of the Finance Commission returned the "swag" to the city as guilty of the men guilty of a felony in order to prevent criminal proceedings, they are guilty of compounding a felony and it is the duty of the district attorney to act in both cases—From statement by the Sunday AMERICAN by Ex-Councilman Frank A. Goodwin.

No Legal Responsibility.

The grievance committee of the Bar Association is made up of Edward W. Hutchins, Charles T. Gallagher, Thompson H. Proctor, Frank Lowell, Robert B. Mantor and Charles F. Choate, Jr. Not true, however, of the commissioners are Harvard men.

If it has been asked a good many times why there was no "legal" responsibility on the part of the Shaws to pay the tax they escaped by this ingenious arrangement. The law provides that taxes shall be assessed in the April of each year, but later on, the assessors find taxable estate they are given seven months, until December. At that time comes the "supplementary assessment." But the executors got to both sides on it legally by the simple device of this inventory. This is not in Massachusetts but practically everywhere.

The Shaws admitted a "moral" responsibility. The three executors have at all times, during the district attorney's investigation, they gave to the Finance Commission. These documents are interesting.

Welch and Herrick, and Shaw the young one, say they concealed the truth because they did not want the matter spread upon the public records; because they wished to save the widow and daughter from charity seekers; because a full disclosure might have had effect in receiving litigation; because they desired to furnish the assessors no information than they were obliged by law to give; and, finally the fear of a depressing effect on Calumet & Hecla stock.

Splendid reasons to be carefully considered by the grievance committee of the Massachusetts Bar Association.

Splendid reasons, to be left in mind by a body of upright citizens only ten are called upon to settle the question of the disbarment of Welch and Herrick if and when the Bar Association acts.

Splendid reasons, offering food for thought for the office of the district attorney!

What's the matter with Boston? Why are taxes so high? Tax dodging

MAYOR AFTER $82,000 COPLEY SQUARE TAXES

Mayor Fitzgerald announced last night that he would call upon the Finance Commission to investigate the taxation of the old Art Museum property in connection with a new lot and with a view to having the Copley Square Trust realize a "moral obligation" to pay the city of Boston $82,000 in back taxes.

The Quincy A. Shaw executors, after being quizzed by the Finance Commission, recognized a "moral obligation" to pay $82,000 in taxes. The taxes due will be promptly turned over a certified check for that amount.

This opinion of the Mayor, and many who are familiar with the facts in the sale of the old Art Museum property, an equally strong "moral obligation" developed upon the trustees of the Copley Square Trust to "make good" to the city.

The facts in the case are plenty, that the old Art Museum property was sold for $1,800,000 to the Copley Square Trust by the Boston Art Museum trustees. Instead of the land being held in escrow for seven years, as the law requires, and the taxes on the property during that time, because the Boston Art Museum trustees, the land was leased to the Boston Art Museum trustees. The property is not taxable. Had the assessors known all of these facts they would have, on the evidence recorded, there is no doubt that they would have been enabled to tax the property.

The city law department said at the time of the sale that the property was not taxable. "The city of Boston has no power to tax property," the opinion read, because of the manner in which the sale of the old Art Museum property to Copley Square Trust was consummated.

The trustees of the Copley Square Trust are Moses Williams, John F. Reynolds, Jr., and J. Morris Meredith. Trustee Reynolds held at the time of the sale that "it seems to me a technical matter and was passed upon by the aldermen in the city at the time of the transfer. If some of the city officials take a different view of the matter they will have to be passed upon by some competent authority."

The Mayor believes that if the matter is referred to the Finance Commission that the Copley Square trustees may emulate the example of the Quincy A. Shaw executors and enrich the city treasury by the $82,000 in question voluntarily.

Astonishing upon the Quincy A. Shaw case, the larger bands of taxable investments in those Bostonians who for the purpose of escaping taxation in the city of their legal residence, in other states, cities and towns where they can make agreements with his assessors in his remarks upon the subject the Mayor said:

"The wealthy men of Boston are not going to pay taxes in some other community. Yet at the same time, wealth is entitled to a share of the protection of taxes to the government. Boston has the finest real estate in the twenty-five years become of the residence of wealthy men who have grown rich here. Real estate and personal property that outside of the business district, property has not yet developed in value. While citizens of millions have been made by a few people in the city of Boston, a decade of millions have been lost by thousands of others. The men that made people are the ones whose real their wealth is shown by the values of the property that they have left behind in being assessed for $4,000,000, while it is now worth $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 and $20,000,000 worth of taxable property existed. While this case cannot be duplicated in any other city, yet similar conditions of instances could be cited. I cannot remember a case where an individual has appealed from the taxes I cannot remember a case where an individual has appealed from the taxes Court in recent years which has not disclosed property that existed the same twenty times the amount of wealth taxed by the assessors. This is a condition which is a source of the conscientious of individuals who pride themselves upon their honorable conduct as citizens of the community."

SHAW CASE DECLARED ONE FOR PELLETIER

Charging that the Finance Commission in connection with the Quincy A. Shaw executors may have been guilty of compounding a felony, ex-Councilman Frank A. Goodwin yesterday declared that nothing warranted the investigation of the District Attorney.

Mr. Goodwin is now a member of the Tufts College corporation, but he was as a member of the old Common Council that he originated the plan of going after the executors for taxes. His revelations concerning the Art Museum property and the abatements go-

Discussing the Shaw case of the dodging, Mr. Goodwin said:

"The Quincy A. Shaw case is a striking illustration of the manner in which our 'best citizens' and reformers are uplift. They are the one hand and robbing it with the other.

Years of Tax-Dodging.

The $492,000 just returned to the city by the Shaw executors represents many years' taxes, but the fact seems to be lost sight of that for years Quincy A. Shaw has been assessed for only a small part of his personal property when, in fact, he should have paid taxes on from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000.

"The city has been losing about $250,000 upon the Shaw estate, because of the failure of the assessors to exercise the power which they have to make assessment until Mr. Shaw was compelled to come in and make oath as to the exact amount of personality he possessed.

"Practically all of the large contributors to the good Government Association, Municipal League and other public movements in Boston are today paying taxes on but a small portion of their wealth, simply because the assessors will not do their duty and because the Mayor will not compel them to do their duty.

"As a rule, tax-dodging is negative. The owner of personal property feels under no obligation to inform the assessors of his holdings, and this is the reason that the real fault lies with the assessors. Square Trust case is the tax-dodging was the result of every day acts which deceived the assessors.

The action of the Finance Commission in the Quincy A. Shaw estate is a most convincing fact.

HELEN LONGYEAR, BROOKLINE BELLE NOW MRS. PAUL

HELEN LONGYEAR HEIRESS, IS A BRIDE

Youngest Daughter of Millionaire Weds Lieut. Carroll Paul at Brookline.

MISS HELEN McGRAW LONGYEAR, youngest of the three daughters of Mr and Mrs John M Longyear, and like them a prospective heiress to tremendous wealth, was married yesterday to Carroll Paul, civic engineer in the navy, with the rank of lieutenant.

The wedding took place at The Terrace, the Longyear home at Fisher Hill, Brookline. The ceremony was performed at 10 o'clock in the morning by the Rev. O. P. Gifford, pastor of Brookline Baptist Church. Both bride and groom were unattended. Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast at which fifty guests were present.

Mr. Paul and his bride soon left after on a journey to the orient on the first leg of which he has been ordered to the Philippines They go to the Pacific coast and there embark for Manila. Mr. Paul was born in Japan and is familiar with eastern affairs. He had been in the naval engineering corps four years.

Mrs. Paul, the latest bride in the Longyear family, is a girl of unusual personality. Though daughter of a multi millionaire, she is tremendously energetic. She was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and has been considered by the secretaries Committee of the Massachusetts Bar Association.

Splendid reasons, to be left in mind by a body of upright citizens only ten are called upon to settle the question of the courts for the disbarment of Welch and Herrick if and when the Bar Association acts.

Splendid reasons, offering food for thought for the office of the district attorney!

What's the matter with Boston? Why are taxes so high? Tax dodging

Bride Tech Graduate.

The latest bride in the Longyear family, is a girl of unusual personality. Though daughter of a multi millionaire, she is tremendously energetic. She was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and has been considered by the secretaries Committee of the Massachusetts Bar Association. She was very popular with her fellow students and was active in many of the sophomore class and was an editor of "Technique," the Technology publication. This is one of the highest honors a Tech girl can receive.

The eldest of the Longyear girls is Mrs. Abbie Roberts. Miss Judith Longyear, the second daughter, was married on February 14 to John R Lyeth of New York. The second daughter was given a costly home in New York by her father. It is presumed that said proxation was urged by Mr. Longyear when the youngest daughter left the parental roof.

"The Terrace" the mansion which was graced by yesterday's bridal, is a unique residence. It is the structure which was practically all transported from Marquette, Mich., piece by piece on freight cars, a few years ago, when Mr. Longyear decided to move to Massachusetts.

Moved House from Michigan.

One story told at the time was that Mr. Longyear was angered because after he had built a magnificent home in Marquette a railroad was given right of way through his property. Rather than sell the home and see it demolished, he had it torn down and moved, stone by stone, and timber by timber, and shipped across the Eastern part of the country, to Fisher Hill in Brookline. There the house was rebuilt, forming one of the most luxurious homes in Brookline, a town of costly residences.

Mr. Longyear can well afford expensive fads of the kind, for he is reputed to be worth more than $20,000,000. His wealth is estimated at $30,000,000 by some. He made his fortune a millionaire through his vast timber and ore properties in Michigan and Wisconsin. The ore properties, a formula of the Michigan man who had won such vast wealth through the forests of the North.

After moving to Boston the Longyears quickly entered into society. They have a box at the opera.

TRACED GIRL TO HOBOKEN.

Chelsea Policeman Brings Her Back for Trial.

Patrolman James Dolan of the Chelsea police is back from Hoboken, N. J., where he arrested Rosie Greenberg on a charge of larceny from Mrs. Mazie Goldburg of No. 122 Beacon street, Chelsea. It is alleged that the girl was a boarder at the Goldburg home for two weeks with Mrs. Goldburg, and left, taking with her jewelry and money valued at $283. Officer Dolan went to Hoboken and discovered that the girl was living at No. 612 Grand, street there. He arrested her and found Mrs. Goldburg's house was found in the girl's room.

PLANS TO ATTACK CAMORRA BETRAYER

Lawyers for Defence Expect to Impeach Testimony of Prisoner Abatemaggio.

VITERBO, March 25.—There was a conference of lawyers for the defence of Enrico Alfano and his Camorrist associates in the monastery prison today, where plans were mapped out for a vigorous attack upon the testimony of Abatemaggio, the betrayer, when the trial is resumed on Tuesday in the Assize Court.

Although the defendants have promised to refrain from demonstrations in the court room during the recital of Abatemaggio, the authorities are taking steps for further precautions when the trial is resumed next week, the belief prevailing that the Camorrists will be unable to restrain themselves when they come to hear revelations of the secrets of the "Beautiful Society" by the informer.

HOLLIS TO STAY DARK.

No Attraction Found to Take "The Easiest Way" Time.

The Hollis will be dark this week, owing to the inability of the house managers to find a suitable attraction to fill in the time of "The Easiest Way." Eugene Walter's play, which was turned from the stage in Boston by Miss Fitzgerald. The new started in last Monday night for a three weeks' stay at the Hollis, but the present time is next looming for the Hollis to open its doors for a short time before the next season.

A booking for next week is made announcement will be made of it fact through the newspapers. It was said yesterday that in all the days of the city would be open to an engagement of the week. As a result of Mr. Morris' action in booking out the Walter play, the box office force is having little to do at the Hollis, and received much in these days. It purchased tickets for "The Easiest Way."

$25,000 FOR LIFE-SAVERS.

Mrs. Bradstreet Remembered Coast Heroes.

The life-savers of the South Shore were not forgotten by Mrs. Charlotte Augusta Bradstreet of the Back Bay, who died Feb ruary 4, leaving an estate valued at between $250,000 and $300,000. In the will filed yesterday is included a trust fund of $25,000, the income to be paid to the widow of the life-savers of all life-saving stations on the coast of Massachusetts, both stations lost their lives in the fine line of duty. The will names Charles Hamilton and Benjamin L. M. Tower of Cohasset, trustees, and brings Bradstreet of No. 1793 Beacon street.

BRILLIANT CLOSING OF OPERA SEASON

Artists, Director and Mr. Jordan Bow Farewell to Applauding Audience.

The second season of the Boston Opera Company closed yesterday. Brilliantly crowned audiences at two performances with an abundance of flowers and a generous amount of enthusiasm marked the finish of a most successful season. In the afternoon, Miss Mary Garden appeared in the title role in Massenet's "Manon." The final performance last night was with The Girl of the Golden West." Constantino, Mells and Galeffi taking part.

After the final curtain last night the artists of the company, the conductor, Director Russell and Eben D. Jordan, stood amid a bower of flowers on the stage and bowed their gratitude to an audience that applauded again and again. Farewell diadems were given to the artists later in the evening.

Society in large number attended both performances, during which appeared, with straw hats, and trim walking suits, Mrs. Flora M. Draper wore a stunning hat of violets, and gown of violet velvet. Miss Mary Jordan, Miss Agnes Jordan and Miss Dorothy Jordan wore a green of dark blue cloth, with small black hat trimmed with black wings.

PICKED WRONG TOOTSIES.

Westboro Grangers Couldn't Identify Wives' Feet.

WESTBORO, March 25.—Some men in Westboro Grange are trying to explain to their wives that they didn't know their wives' feet when they saw them. Some of the unmarried chaps are in the same boat, explaining to their best girls.

The foot problem was the feature of a dance given last night by the local grange in Grange Hall. The husking bee was the evening's success. Red ears were plentiful and every child and grandmother was kissed with intention.

Then came the dance. All the girls and women were lined up behind a curtain and their feet only were shown to their fellow men. The buttons and swains picked their own. Others guessed wrong—or picked some other man's wife or best girl at any rate. Then what brought explanations today. Some of the girls claim that they were insulted when the husbands picked the wrong "tootsies" and caused the men of delay so deliberately

By E. V. B. PARKE.

THE big professional match for the championship of the hockey world was won last evening at the Arena before a house which was packed to the doors by the Ottawa champions, the Wanderers from Montreal going down to defeat 8 to 4 in a game which was undoubtedly the fastest and best exhibition of hockey ever witnessed in this city.

As the Wanderers won the game with Ottawa last Wednesday evening in the Arena by the score of 7 to 6, and the total points in both games decide the championship, the winners of last evening's struggle are also the winners of the title and purse of $2,500 offered by the Arena management with a total rating of 15 to 11.

The game was from every standpoint a wonderful exposition of how the great Canadian sport should be played. After watching the professionals battle last evening the best of the Boston teams appeared as mere pigmies, and but a sickly imitation of hockey sevens, so skillful were the contestants in every department of the game.

Greatest Crowd Ever in Arena.

Possibly never before has such an enthusiastic audience gathered in the Arena to witness a hockey match. They were not enthusiastic because of any particular allegiance, but they were roused to a high pitch of excitement by the remarkable exhibitions by all of the players, none excepted.

The speculators incidentally did a great business before the big show began, and tickets were at a big premium, even little standing room being available.

Although the winners managed to run a pretty big total against their opponents, the game was anything but one sided. Every point was bitterly contested and came only after the most skillful maneuvres and even then many a drive for the basket which seemed certain of becoming a tally, was deftly cast aside by the watchful goal tends, who did themselves proud.

Taylor and Ross the Stars.

Undoubtedly the key to the ability and high ranking of the two "pro" teams which clashed in the battle royal last night, was their wonderful stick handling and quick swerving turns which they made without turning a hair.

In addition they had more tricks than one could imagine they might find in the hockey players' text book and the springing of these continually kept the spectators on the ragged edge.

The two big stars of the game were Taylor, otherwise known as "Jeffries" Taylor, because of his resemblance to the pugilist, playing at rover for the winners, and Ross, the wonderful point for the losers.

The former is the sort of player who skates to the gallery, while the other is the steady, certain kind who makes good in the end. These men were the features, and whenever they took the puck and started for a dash down the ice, as they were continually doing, for the playing seemed to centre about them, a great shout rose from the throng.

The goal tends should not be slighted, however, for their work was stellar or even better.

Kerr, the left wing for Ottawa, also put up a clever game, scoring five of the points for the winners. In fact he was easily as good as Taylor and more effective in the end, for he kept his head and played for the sake of the game and not for the spectators.

One of the most persistent practices of the players and the one which seems to be the most effective at times in breaking up a dash, was the throwing of sticks before the man with the puck.

This is allowed in the Canadian game, and it must be confessed it detracts some what from the science of the game.

The checking of the men was also very hard and effective and gave the contest the appearance of exceeding roughness, but only three men were put out for violations of the rules, and it might be said that the referees gave a most satisfactory interpretation of the rules.

It became very evident shortly after the beginning of the game that the Wanderers attack did not possess the vim it should have, and throughout the game to remedy this and instill more life into the men, frequent changes were made.

It did little good, however, for Ottawa

Boston Managers Analyze the Teams

How Red Sox and Rustlers Shape Up

Donovan Declares the Red Sox Are in Better Shape Than Ever, and That Nothing but First Place Will Do Them

By PATRICK A. DONOVAN.

Telegraphed expressly to the Sunday AMERICAN by the manager of the Boston American League Baseball Club at Los Angeles.

PATSY DONOVAN.

LOS ANGELES, March 25.—We have been on California soil for a month and three days. To-day the members of the team are in better physical baseball form than they ever were in their lives. That's the answer as to whether this 9,000-mile trip from coast to coast and back has been a success.

Will we win the pennant? Well, that's what we are playing ball for; isn't it? We work at the game to win. One team will get the pennant trophy and seven will fail to get it. Eight team managers, I presume, think they can win. Seven are wrong and one is right. It's long odds, and I make it a rule not to make rash predictions.

We are going after the pennant, that's all there is to that, and I think every man on the roster is determined that the flag shall fly in Boston. That's what Mr. Taylor had in view when he sent his boys out here to be trained and to develop.

ALL PULLING FOR THE FLAG

We're all pulling for that end. When we came out here I had a whole trainload of players to look over. To give each one a fair tryout meant a good deal of careful work.

As a result I have half a dozen good players to draw from. The others include several good ball players, but we don't need them. We will dispose of several advantageously.

A manager cannot tell what he thinks of each player's work. That would never do. If I were to say that such a player is a star and ought to have been in the big league long ago he causes the financial department a lot of bother. If I say a player is no good and should be replaced, he refuses to work his best for me any longer. When a man doesn't do his best, I stir him up by trying another man in his place occasionally. That usually does the business. Silence is golden on this job.

There are some things, however, that I always feel safe in saying. I never have any fears of giving Wagner a swelled head. I consider him the best shortstop in the world. Wagner would play whether sick or well, and play his hardest under all conditions. I have known him to insist on getting into the game when he ought to have been in bed. He has fighting blood. I place great confidence, too, in Bill Carrigan. He has done wonders managing the colts this season on the coast.

Our outfield is the best in the country, bar none. Tris Speaker likes to have a little fun on the job, but he is a demon when sharp work is needed. Lewis and Hooper are in excellent physical shape.

The infield I have been working hard with the exception of Purtell, whose arm has been sore from cold.

PITCHERS BETTER THAN EVER

The pitchers are in much better condition than ever before at the opening of a season, and if none of them get hurt or injure their arms will pitch a better game than they did last year. Wood is in the finest shape he ever was in. Both the Smiths are trained down to mid-season form. The others are in as good shape.

I suppose I ought to mention some of the new men. We have dug up some good ones. Riggert and Perry in the outfield are big league men. Yerkes is a crackerjack shortstop. Little Nebinger is a whirlwind as a third baseman.

I have worked out Killalay as the most promising of the pitchers. He has an easy delivery and the same motions for all his throws.

Mahoney is a strong outfielder. He is a heavy hitter. Harold Janvrin, whom I have had on third, is a fine youngster and I have said will make the greatest third baseman in the business. I shall keep him under my eye all the time and give him every opportunity for development.

Tenney Declares That His Team Is a Hundred Per Cent. Better Than Last Year—Has Faith in His Pitchers

By FRED TENNEY.

Telegraphed expressly to the Sunday AMERICAN by the Manager of the Boston National Baseball Club at Augusta, Ga.

FRED TENNEY

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 25.—When I undertook the management of the Boston club, several friends of mine, interested in baseball and anxious to help me, informed me that I would have to secure a new pitching staff if I expected to have my team finish anywhere above last place. They told me weak pitching was the chief trouble with last year's club.

I differed from them. I know the capabilities of Boston's pitchers pretty well, and I couldn't see wherein they were weak. I figured that the pitchers would win games if the seven regulars, used every day, would only play baseball behind them.

Then I set about to figure what could be done regarding those seven regulars. It was my opinion that the weakest spot in last year's team was at the second base. I always thought Bill Sweeney was a natural second baseman, and I decided to use him there. Furthermore, I was positive that Charley Herzog's proper position was shortstop, where he could use his great speed to advantage.

INFIELD IS STRENGTHENED

In moving Sweeny and Herzog, I was making two positions stronger than they formerly were and leaving third base open, in the hope that I could find somebody to fill that hole.

I thought I had a capable man in Butler, but I was not so sure of it that I hesitated about making the deal with Chicago for Ingerton. I think I have two efficient third basemen now and an infield strong all through.

I can't tell who will be the regular third baseman, but I think one of the two will make good. If not, I will have to find somebody else.

But I have insured strength at second base and short stop. When I looked over our outfield material, I came to the conclusion that Miller and Goode were the best men procurable for right and centre. So I made up my mind to stand pat on those two and leave left field open just as I had left third base.

I am more than satisfied with my scheme. Clarke is a finished outfielder, and with him and Collins fighting for that job, I think I can safely say left field will be well cared for.

I know we are strong at second, short and right and centre fields. If I am right in thinking we are also strong at third and in left, we are one hundred per cent. stronger than the team was last season.

In Graham and Rariden we have two good catchers, and Neal isn't such a bad one either.

It remains to be seen whether I was right or my friends were. I believe our pitchers will win games with those seven regulars behind them and those catchers to help them. I believe a good ball club can win games with fair pitching, and I don't believe great pitchers can win ball games consistently with a poor team.

PITCHERS BETTER THAN FAIR

As for the pitchers, I believe they are better than fair. In Burke, McTigue and Tyler, I think I have three of the best young left handers I ever looked at. There is no need to comment on Mattern and the veteran right handers of the staff.

I have said it was my opinion that we should prove one hundred per cent. stronger than last year. I will stand pat on that.

I won't say we will win the pennant, but I will say we won't finish last and that we will have a ball club that will be out there fighting every day to win and give its opponents arguments that they won't forget in a hurry.

RUN IN NINTH GIVES GAME TO RED SOX

Los Angeles Team Gives Boston Boys Hardest Battle of Trip; Bradley Injured, but Williams Proves Star Substitute at First

By MERTON E. BURKE.

Sunday American Correspondent With the Red Sox.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 25.—The snappiest, cleanest game of baseball the Red Sox have put up since arrival on the coast was won by the Bostonians from the Los Angeles team to-day by a score of 4 to 3.

An injury sustained by Hugh Bradley while making a double steal gave Alva Williams a chance at first base. And believe me, it was a different looking team with him on the sack.

Williams has a way of coaching up the men and stirring things up generally. He fills the bill in every particular and lends confidence to the others.

Whether Donovan will play him there is a question, but I am inclined to think he will. Bradley has improved greatly in the past few days, but several shrewd critics do not think he is the man for the position.

To-night the exodus eastward begins. Hugh McBreen on arrival at Oakland, where the Carrigan colts are quartered, decided to stir up that aggregation of consistent losers and wired to Manager Donovan has sent [illegible] encouragement, a dozen new [illegible] Karger and Hall.

Turn Towards Home

Secretary Cooper has provided a special car for the Regulars to board to-morrow night and has arranged the schedule homeward.

Sunday's games here and at Frisco will conclude the California stay of the Bostonians.

In to-day's game Frank Smith tried to limber up a stiff arm. It cracked with every throw, but he held the local boys down to three runs and three hits.

The Los Angeles boys got to him only in the second, when they made all their scores.

Two base on balls, two hits and a fly to centre netted them their three tallies.

The score:

TOO MUCH CHASE BEATS RUSTLERS IN HOT GAME

New York Yankees Nose Out Victory in Eleventh; Chase Ties Game, Wins It and Keeps Boston From Tying It Again

By R. W. LARDNER.

Sunday American Correspondent With the Rustlers.

[illegible] was made by either team [illegible] record for a game of that length at this time of year. Herzog, Ingerton and [illegible] pulled off remarkable plays in the field, and the crowd was kept busy applauding.

After a chilly morning the sun began [illegible] down and [illegible] beating until it [illegible] the [illegible]. The afternoon was a "peach" but despite that fact and Friday's nice exhibition the attendance was smaller than at the first game.

Southpaws in Battle Line.

The opposing pitchers at the start were southpaws. One of them, Jim Vaughan, [illegible]. The other, George Tyler, still has one to make, and he is going to make it, take it from us. George was in a tight place in Round 1. He had no trouble with the first two gents who faced him, but Chase singled, Knight doubled and Johnson walked. With the bases full George got in a hole to Bert Daniels, but Bert finally perished on a line drive to Goode.

Charley Herzog foiled New York's full [illegible] in the second by making the prettiest kind of a stop and throw of Roy Hartzell's near single over second. Ingerton walked with one down in the Rustlers' half, but Sweeney and Tenney left him [illegible].

Mr. Vaughan had more smoke than the [illegible]. The left handed hitters [illegible] lineup looked silly against [illegible] first time they faced him, but Josh Clarke broke the [illegible] later with a clean single to left after two were out. Mr. Blair had been forced to quit with a wounded finger, and Josh took advantage of the dearth of Catcher Williams and promptly stole second and third. His energy did not help the cause, for [illegible] struck out.

Daniels walked and stole second after one out in the New York fourth. Graham dropped Hartzell's third strike and had to throw to first for the out, and during the proceedings the fleet Daniels helped himself to third. Williams's fly to Goode wound up the inning.

Harry Ables, Chase's new left-hander from the Texas League, entered the ring in the fifth, and at the opening of the sixth Al Mattern succeeded Tyler.

Ingerton Distinguishes Himself.

Ingerton distinguished himself in that chapter with nice plays of the fast grounders off Chase and Knight.

Mattern started the Rustlers' half with a clean shot to right. Clarke popped to Knight. Goode walked, but Herzog lined to Hemphill, whose quick peg to Chase doubled up Goode.

Miller fanned in the seventh. Ingerton pulled a long double to the left field fence and Sweeney walked. Tenney popped to Hartzell, but "Peaches" Graham was there with a solid wallop to centre which went for two bases, scored Ingerton and sent Sweeney to third. Mattern fouled to Williams and left two on.

It was in the ninth that Manager Chase arose to the occasion and made a tie score

How Boston Will Open Big League Baseball Season

BIG league baseball in Boston took a running start for the 1911 season yesterday, when the program was issued for the [illegible] National League [illegible].

The first game will be [illegible] Walpole street grounds less than three weeks hence.

[illegible] of our national flag in centre [illegible] during the contest.

[illegible] grandstand to the centre field flag [illegible].

Mayor Fitzgerald has been invited to throw out the first ball.

President Thomas J. Lynch of the National League will be the official guest of President William Hepburn [illegible] and Vice President [illegible].

[illegible] and prominent [illegible] will be invited.

The Boston team will arrive home the night before the game, as the Baltimore game of April 11 has been cancelled.

The pitchers will probably be "Al" Mattern against Nat Rucker, the two leading "southpaws" of the [illegible].

The old South End grounds have been renovated. New fences have been built in left and right fields. Tom Fields, ground keeper, has been busy for three weeks putting the place in shape.

AMHERST SHUT OUT BY TRINITY 4 TO 0

DURHAM, N. C., March 25.—The Amherst nine played the second game of its trip here to-day and lost, 4 to 0. It was nip and tuck until the sixth inning, when bad [illegible] and Pennock put Amherst [illegible] of the running.

Gans for Trinity pitched a steady game all through, fanning several men and only walking one. His terrific speed and cross fire had the Amherst batters bewildered. He also hit the ball hard, getting a double and single.

Quaintance, for Amherst, pitched his first college game, and gave promise of making a good pitcher. By his steadiness and coolness he pitched himself out of bad holes in the first, third and seventh, and with any kind of support should not have been scored on.

Amherst made a peculiar double play in the seventh. After Thompson and Cooper were on second and third, West hit a pop-fly which Pennock dropped and West kept on running to second, but the other runners had not moved. Pennock picked the [illegible] and forced Cooper off [illegible]. Then he caught [illegible].

HIGH SCHOOLS BEGIN BASEBALL YEAR IN TEN DAYS

Rindge and Roxbury Latin Play the First Game of Season on April 5.

LIVELY RACE FOR PENNANT

English High Must Hustle to Repeat Great Record of 1910.

THE baseball candidates for the high school teams around Boston have had their first outdoor practice. Warm weather brought the [illegible] out from nearly all the schools.

The first school game of the year will be played in ten days, April 5, when Rindge Manual Training school meets Roxbury Latin. Rindge has a lot of splendid material out for the team this season, and with "Skip" Sherlock at the helm as coach, a first class team should be turned out. Six veterans are out, and with a large squad of new men have been practicing for the past month. The veterans are: Captain Daly first base; John Fritz catcher; Daly pitcher and S[illegible] strong and Kelliher, outfielders. [illegible] be hard to replace [illegible] third and short but [illegible] material, and he is confident that he can bring out the available [illegible].

Boston English High w[illegible] lot of hustling in order to [illegible] position in baseball that the [illegible] season established. That team won twenty-three out of twenty four games played and had such stars in the line up that several of them have been signed up for big league ball this season. Jimmy Trainor the only veteran on the team and only man eligible for the captaincy is down in studies and will not be available till the first of May. There are a lot of new men out, but they will not play the game of Janvrin, Kenney, O'Connor and the rest of last season's nine.

Coach Fred O'Brien has a lot of material in practice for the team at Boston Latin, and with several veterans he should develope a good team. Pendergast and Boles will be on the mound, and Fish Keady and Patrickson will do the work behind the bat. All these are from last year's team and much will be expected from them on the diamond this season. Captain Nolan will play the second bag, Heyer will play shortstop and McDonald will play third. Although this is his first season, Ewing is expected to play the first bag.

Latin will open its season April 12, with the Cambridge Latin team and will continue playing a hard schedule till June 3. Games have been arranged with all the fastest high school teams in the eastern part of the State.

Dorchester Has a Good Team.

Dorchester High is conceded a good team. Coach O'Reilly has had the battery candidates working out for the past month while the men out for the other positions have been doing light work inside and were in line for good stiff workouts out of doors on the days when the weather was mild.

Bill Brennan, a pitcher, will captain the team and do the heavy work on the mound. He is a good twirler and with Bob Gill to alternate, Dorchester should be well taken care of in the delivering line. John F. Fitzgerald, Jr., son of the Mayor, is out for an outfield position and may make good.

The High School of Commerce will have a good team and will miss the Boston High School League, in which they captured the high honors last season. Joe Norton is captain of the squad. He is a good all round player and this season will play second base or a position in the outfield and will take a turn in the pitching department. James Donovan and Roy Lundin are the main candidates for the mound and Jessenu, a veteran, will hold down his regular position behind the bat. James Kennedy, Broders, Moran, Stockmer, Archdeacon and Ryan are doing a lot in practice and all are in line for regular positions.

The out-of-town schools are also busy in preparation for their banner season in baseball. Revere High expects one of the strongest teams that has ever represented that town. Allen, the crack pitcher of last season's team, will again [illegible] the mound, and he anticipates another fine season. Last year he twirled winning ball and defeated some of the strongest high school teams in the State and this season he is out to win the championship of the North Shore League.

Chelsea High expects to have a fast team, as five veterans are available and there seems to be an abundance of new material. Adelson, Cox, Carrier, Littinger and Goldband are the old men out and they will hold down the same positions as last year. Julius Goldband has been elected captain and will be the mainstay in the box. He made more than good on the mound last season and it is expected that he will have a much more successful season this year. Clifford Cox will again be behind the bat, Ettinger will play second and Curray will again play the left field. About twenty other candidates have been out for the other positions on the team and some good men should be turned out.

Newton Needs a Pitcher.

Coach Allie Dickerson of Newton High is working hard with his men trying to develop a championship [illegible]. The school is well supplied in everything but a good pitcher and much attention has been given the past month in developing one.

Twenty-five men have been in practice under Captain Bride Sullivan at Wellesley High and he is predicting a good season. The team has seven of last year's team, but they are minus a veteran pitcher.

Milton Academy, Browne and Nichols, Volkmann, Stone School and Roxbury Latin are ready for a good fight among the private schools. Nold and Greeley [illegible] has an abundance of infield and outfield candidates, but they are weak in the pitching box. Clafin, the heavy hitting third baseman, will be out, as will Stevens, captain and third base at Middlesex last year, who will go out for second base.

HERE'S THE FIRST REAL "KIDS'" GAME

St. Raphaels Triumph Over the Hyde Park Team in Hard, Close Battle.

They're off—just look here.

The Saint Raphael baseball team of Hyde Park triumphed over its ancient rival, the Business Street baseball club, by the score of 5 to 4 in the first game pulled off in Greater Boston this year.

The game was played at the Reservation grounds, Hyde Park, yesterday afternoon, and was witnessed by a large number, who braved the stiff wind that swept over the field, in order to witness the battle between the youthful diamond stars.

The game was a hummer from start to finish, with the result in doubt until the last man was called out.

The Business Street boys jumped into the lead in the first of the second inning, and scored two runs on some heavy hitting by Dooley, McCann and Seeney.

In their half of the second the Saint Raphael boys scored their first run of the game.

In the third inning the Business Street team scored another and again in the eighth.

When the Saint Raphael boys came to the bat in their half of the eighth the score was 4 to 1 in favor of Business Street and they went out determined to win. It was really said what their star "biff" artists did that inning. Six lusty wallops for four big runs, and just enough to win.

Score by innings:

										R	H	E

O'Connor Makes Good on Teams at Charlestown

JOHN O'CONNOR

JOHN O'CONNOR is a well-known amateur baseball player of Charlestown. He has played on several of the strong teams in the city, and has been successful. He caught for two seasons on the Boston English High baseball team and was chosen all-interscholastic catcher last season. He played on the English High team with Janvrin and Kenny, now playing league ball. He has been catching for John Fyfe, also a Charlestown boy, for the past five seasons, and they have always been a successful battery. They have been the mainstay for several of the strong teams in that district. O'Connor will be out again this season with a fast team and hopes to be with Fyfe.

Central A. C. of Medford would like to arrange games with any 16-year-old teams in the State. Ralph Coburn, No. 164 Park street, Medford.

Clapp Memorial Association intermediate baseball team wants games with strong 16-year-old uniformed teams. Half expenses given and taken for ten men. C. M. Gifford, East Weymouth.

The Crescents of Chelsea would like to arrange games with any 15-16-year-old uniformed teams for the season. J. Greenway, No. 429 Eastern avenue, Chelsea.

The Athletic Juniors of Roxbury would like to arrange games with 11-12-year-old teams at or away from home. Will give or take half fares. Paul F. Snyder, No. 434 Dudley street, Roxbury.

The Emerson Club would like to hear from the managers of Bedford C. C., Bemis, Corey, Ramblers, Medford and all the fastest amateur and semi-pro nines in the State. William D. Murphy, No. 147 Warren street, Roxbury.

The Ramblers of Cambridge would like to arrange games with the fastest teams in New England, Fitchburg, Plymouth, Leominster, Randolph and teams of like calibre. A. Richardson, No. 104 Clark street, Cambridge.

The Needham Y. M. C. A. would like to arrange games with strong amateur and semi-professional teams for the coming season at or away from home. William S. Rae, Needham Y. M. C. A., Needham Heights.

Eastern A. A., with strongest amateur and semi-professional teams in the State away from home. W. M. Trussell, No. 25 Fiske street, Revere. Telephone 118-L Revere.

The newly organized Quincy City nine has a few open dates and would like to hear from fast amateur and semi-pro teams. Reasonable guarantee given. J. L. Ford, No. 50 Chestnut street, Quincy.

The Company A, Eighth Regiment, M. V. M., team would like to book games with strong teams away from home for dates from April to June. George Rogers, No. 25 Sharply avenue, Medford.

The Cambridge Reds have reorganized and desire games with semi-professional teams out of town. Will listen to high school propositions. W. L. Whitney, No. 89 State street, city.

Thomas J. Donlin, on account of disagreement with players, has dropped the Dorchester White Sox and has organized his old team, the West Roxbury White Sox A. A., which will be one of the strongest teams that has been in West Roxbury for many years. The line-up will be as follows:

SEMI-PROFESSIONALS IN AN EARLY START

Pick of the School Graduates Play on the Strong New England Teams.

SCORES of semi-professional teams in this State are in line for a great season at the national game. Their men have come together early and have been holding practice, both indoors and out, for the past month. The players on these teams are the pick of those developed on the ball parks and at high schools and it is on these teams that many of the big league stars get their real start.

The demand for strong teams in the suburban towns that pay reasonable guarantees is great on the part of Boston teams, and towns like Hyannis, Plymouth, Middleboro, Norwood, Fisherville, Rockport and Brant Rock, which give strong Boston nines a good guarantee, draw good teams and the crowds. Teams like the Bay Views of South Boston, the Notre Dames, Ramblers, Hyde Park, Charlestown A. A., Romaf A. C., Roxbury Athletic, West End House and teams in that class generally fill up good dates Saturdays and holidays and they get a fair sum.

All these teams have an early start and are filling out their schedules. They use the AMERICAN as their headquarters. The AMERICAN will print all the news of all the teams this season.

Semi-Professional Diamond Notes

Captain H. S[illegible] will do the twirling. H. Jo[illegible], former catcher of the High School of Commerce and member of the All-Interscholastic team, will be at the receiving end. H. TENNEY SELECTS HIS TEAM OF RUSTLERS

Manager Has His Mind Made Up for Opening of the Season Mattern, Burke and Tyler the Most Likely Southpaws

PROBABLE BATTING ORDER OF RUSTLERS

Clarke or Collins, leftfield.
Goode, centrefield.
Herzog, shortstop.
Miller, rightfield.
Ingerton or Butler, third base.
Sweeney, second base.
Tenney or Pfeffer, first base.
Graham, Raridden and Neal, catchers.
Al Mattern, Burke, Tyler, Brown, Frock, Curtis, Evans and Parson, pitchers.
Flaherty, utility man.

By R. W. LARDNER,
American Correspondent with Rustlers on Augusta Tour.

R.W. LARDNER.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 2[illegible].—One week from to-morrow the Rustlers will be packing up, preparatory to breaking camp and starting on the journey northward. The departure from Augusta will occur a week from Monday morning.

With the opening of the regular season drawing nearer and nearer, one can guess more accurately regarding the make-up of the Boston team which will enter this year's race for the National League pennant. The dope of a week ago still holds good in most particulars.

Tenney will be at first base, Sweeney at second, Herzog at short, Ingerton et [illegible], and the regular outfield composed of Miller, Goode, Collins and Clarke.

The [illegible] staff is still something [illegible] and the catching department will remain a guess until something is done regarding the dissatisfaction of "Peaches" Graham.

It doesn't take an expert to see that the Rustlers will be up against it if "Peaches" and the powers both remain obstinate. Without him it will be weak with danger of its being worse, in case of an accident to Bill Rariden.

Rariden is a classy backstop, but he is far from being the best hitter in the league. As for Neal, he is showing to good advantage, but he lacks experience, a thing that is needed more in his position than anywhere else.

Fifteen Pitchers on Roster.

Not counting Cecil Ferguson, there are fifteen pitchers on the roster—Brown, Flaherty, A. Mattern, C. H. Mattern, Tyler, Perdue, Burke, Evans, Curtis, McTigue, Frock, Good, Pfeffer, Graveson and Parson. Of these five—A. Mattern, Burke, Tyler, McTigue and Flaherty—are left handers.

Now, left handed pitchers are an absolute necessity on a major league ball team, but it is ridiculous to suppose that any manager in his right [illegible] carry five of them. Boston is one of the eight National League clubs against which a southpaw is supposed to be effective. There are only two others, New York and Cincinnati.

Well, the question is, how many left handers will it be policy to carry for use practically against only two opponents? The answer is two, not including Al Mattern. You can't class Matty with the southpaw tribe. He is something more than a mere left handed pitcher. He has a good spitball, lots of common and some uncommon sense, and is effective against almost any club in the league. To be sure, he is especially good against New York and will be against Cincinnati, but he is the kind you send in in his regular turn and expect things from whether the foe is a conqueror of southpaws or not.

Flaherty a Pinch Hitter.

And you really can't count Pat Flaherty in, either. Pat is likely to be retained as sort of assistant manager, pinch hitter, occasional pitcher and occasional outfielder. So we'll pass up Pat and discuss the other three, Burke, McTigue and Tyler.

Billy Burke has the edge on the others because of his experience, in spite of his youth. If Billy can acquire real control, he is almost sure of a place. He has the stuff and it remains only for him to deliver it.

The race for position appears to be between him and McTigue, for Tyler really has shown more to date than any pitcher in the lot. It's a good bet that this Tyler will be used against the Giants and Reds as often as any of them. He is fast, he has a good curve ball and his aim is usually true. Unless he suffers a sudden relapse he will be kept and kept for regular duty.

It is Manager Tenney's business to choose between Burke and McTigue. The former is just our guess, and McTigue is likely to be let out for a year's seasoning; he has made an impression, however, and will not be sold without an optional agreement.

With Al Mattern, Tyler and Burke, or McTigue, there will be room for five right handers, exclusive of Pfeffer, who will have a job similar to Pat Flaherty's with a chance of going in at first base if anything happens to Manager Tenney.

"Buster" Brown, Sam Frock and Cliff Curtis are sure to stick, so two will be chosen from a list containing the names of Evans, Parson, Good, Carl Mattern, Perdue and Graveson.

As has been remarked before, Evans' lack of control is all that stands between him and a regular berth. If he can overcome his wildness, it's safe to say he will be one of the hardest men in the league to beat. His curve ball isn't much to boast of; as for that, Walter Johnson would continue to win ball games and make strike-out records if he forgot he had a curve. It is Walter's fast one that counts, and the same is true of Evans. He and Bill Parson are the pair likely to be in the money, with Hub Perdue next in line.

Young Mattern and Graveson have the making of good pitchers. Neither has ever pitched even in a [illegible] league ball, and for that reason neither has much chance of retention. Ray Good is still very much in the running and Evans, Parson and Perdue will have to outshine him to land a job.

'Play Off a Little Farther, Old Dog'

By Grantland Rice

A SON OF SWAT of great renown sat in a parlor dim;
And near him sat a Lady Bug—in person lithe and trim;
"Old girl, you've made a hit with me" —he opened for a lead—
"[illegible] got a winning way with you and all the curves and speed."
And then he started warming up—the demon pitcher's fad—
And tried to curve one round the neck with all the speed he had;
Whereat the maiden jumped at once upon the coacher's line,
And in an Arlie Latham voice this chorus did opine:

"PLAY off a little bit farther, old dog—
Don't hug the base too tight;
What you need is a bit of a lead,
Just a little bit more to the right;
Don't get to crowding the sack, old boy,
Beat it a few feet away—
And nix on the 'squeeze,' you collection of cheese,
For that ain't the game I play."

THE Son of Swat eased off at once when these words he did hear;
But in a few brief moments soon again he was quite near;
Once more he tried to crowd the base, unmindful of her toss,
And once again she ducked away and threw for a loss;
Just here the old man butted in and slammed him on the bun,
A very fine exampe of the famous "hit and run;"
For as the battered player hit the dirt that bitter day,
He wept to think he'd overlooked these words which she did say:

"Play off a little bit farther, old dog," etc.

25,000 SEE BROWNS AND CARDINALS PLAY

Nationals Show Superiority Over American League Rivals by 10-2 Score.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 25.—Ideal baseball weather and the opening of the local championship series was the means of drawing some 25,000 enthusiastic fans out to National League park to-day.

The Cardinals had no trouble solving the delivery of Lake, the Brown pitcher, and by taking advantage of his wildness and his mates' misplays they ran up a total of 10 runs while their opponents got but two.

The Cardinal players wore crepe on their arms and the clubhouse flag was at half mast out of respect to the late M. Stanley Robison, president of the team.

Though the Cardinals assumed the lead early in the game—in fact, in the very first inning—the Browns never quit, and fought up to the very last.

Manager Wallace, who was making his local debut as a pilot, was given a handsome reception by the immense assembly.

He showed a team of fast young players for the most part, which though it appeared nervous at times, bears promise of developing into a good team.

Bresnahan had his regular team in the field, and it showed its team play and the benefits of home training to advantage.

The teams will meet tomorrow at Sportsman Park.

The score:

NEWTON BOY PICKS WHITE SOX TO WIN

Boston Player Says Chicago Team Looks Like Sure Pennant Takers.

By JOHN F. COLLINS.

Newton Boy With Chicago White Sox

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, March 25.—I am very glad to comply with the request of the AMERICAN for a few lines as to our team.

In the first place, Mineral Wells, Texas, is the finest training ground for ball players I have seen in all my journeys from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

We have had grand weather from the start, and every one within our large fold of players was in superb shape after the first fortnight's work.

The country here affords every opportunity to the ball players desiring to get in the best of condition for a hard season, and the baths and drinking water have been a great aid to us.

The early practice has revealed one thing very clearly and unmistakably. We have a grand team. The way all hands are going, you can say for me, that the White Sox will be right up there as contenders for the pennant this year.

I am playing the first bag for the second team, and have been able to hit pretty well in all our practice games. I stand a splendid chance to land the regular berth with the Sox.

We have played at Waco, Fort Worth, Austin and here and so far have been unbeatable. Our second team has gone right well from the start, and while at Mineral Wells, defeated the Regulars in three straight games.

Texas weather is remarkable, and we have only seen rain once during our stay in the Lone Star State.

Will you kindly extend my best regards to many Boston friends, including our king of managers, Hugh Duffy.

NEW PARK NOT READY.

Yankees Must Play on Old Grounds One More Season.

NEW YORK, March 25.—The Yanks will fight out their entire schedule this season upon their old battlefield at One Hundred and Sixty-eighth street and Broadway.

It was at first the hope of Owner Farrell to have his new plant at Kingsbridge ready for July 4, but obstacles have arisen which make this impossible, so the complete program will be carried through at the same old stand.

The Kingsbridge arena will then be flashed to the local public for the first [illegible] at the start of 1912.

New York Manages to Capture Second Game After Eleven Innings.

possible. He led off with a three base smash between Clarke and Goode and had lots of time to score on Knight's long fly to Josh.

The next two were easy, and so were the first two in Boston's half. Sweeney singled through E. lot, but Tenney's grounder was gathered in by Hartzell.

Elliott cracked open the eleventh with a single to right. Hemphill sacrificed, and again it was up to Chase. Again Hal delivered. It was a single to right, and it scored [illegible].

[illegible] moved to second on Miller's late throw home. Chase came in on Knight's single to left. In the Boston part Herzog singled, with [illegible] dead. Butler was sent up to hit for Miller and Chase substituted [illegible] left handed pitcher for Ables. Butler walked, and he and Herzy pulled a double steal, while Ingerton was fanning.

Sweeney tried hard, but Chase made a beautiful one handed stop of his fast grounder and it was all over.

"Tex" Ables is certain, but enough to pitch. He has a great deal of speed, but is reputed to be weak at holding runners on first base. This is a strange fault in a left hander.

The Rustlers will have a rest to-morrow and probably will play another game with the Augusta team Monday afternoon. It will be a sort of anti-climax after the strenuous battles with New York.

[illegible] Washington to open the American League season two weeks from next Wednesday and the second squad in Boston, to play the Harvard team.

The Regulars will go East by way of Texas, and the second team will take the [illegible] route across Colorado, Kansas and [illegible] States. Both teams will play ball [illegible].

Team Is in Great Shape.

[illegible] declared to-day [illegible] was in better shape than it [illegible] ever been before at his time, and that [illegible] would expect nothing less than first [illegible] race. He assumed [illegible] men were out [illegible].

Donovan has about picked his opening [illegible] who play second base. [illegible] He will be [illegible] and Lewis [illegible] satisfied [illegible] are better [illegible] two very good [illegible] Perry and Riggert.

[illegible] about as follows, [illegible] first base, Wagner, shortstop, and Purtell, third base. As substitutes for Bradley, in case Hugh fails to make good, there are Engle and Williams. But Donovan thinks Bradley is [illegible] to make good. He is by no means [illegible] but he will start the season.

Purtell has been having a lay off to get in better physical shape, but Donovan expects him to go in at third base and thinks he will be better this year than last. If he doesn't come up to standard, Nebinger will be shot into his place, with the boy [illegible] always ready to supersede either of them. Donovan expects Janvrin to occupy the [illegible] the lad has [illegible] chances.

[illegible] Red Sox [illegible] satisfied with [illegible] Madden and Sheehan [illegible] his catching staff and he will probably hold onto nine or ten pitchers. He believes the two Smiths have improved [illegible] and has great faith in Killilay, his new find from the Coast.

Joe Wood in Great Form.

Joe Wood is better than ever and may turn out to be the star of the pitching corps if he keeps in trim. Karger is right there with the stick, his arm is in good condition and the same can be said of [illegible] Collins, Hall and Hunt.

[illegible] of the other youngsters [illegible] making of a good man. The pitchers, however, will [illegible] be weeded out until later.

Manager Donovan has been concentrating his energies on making the boys hit the [illegible] and apparently they are getting in [illegible].

[illegible] how good you play in the field [illegible] hitting that wins games," [illegible] It would seem that he has the [illegible] of the game summed up in a [illegible].

[illegible] part the Boston boys are very [illegible]. Last year some of them were not [illegible] as much as they should be [illegible] the limit. They are improving [illegible] Hooper [illegible] in this respect, [illegible] than they ever did before. [illegible] the young second baseman is also a comer.

THE FAMILY UPSTAIRS—THEY'VE GOT POOR MR. DINGBAT GUESSING By HERRIMAN

ALL HARVARD TEAMS BEGIN OUTSIDE TRAINING

Busiest Sport Season of the Year Starts This Week at Cambridge.

By E. V. B. PARKE.

THE next couple of weeks will be the busiest of the year in the sporting line at Harvard, for beginning to-morrow and lasting until the Spring recess, every line of sport known to the followers of the Crimson will be in full swing either on Soldiers' Field or on the Charles River, closely adjoining.

Spring football practice begins to-morrow, and it is expected that at least thirty-five men will be able to devote their spare hours in the afternoon to this all important preparation for the regular football work in the Fall.

The importance of the Spring practice, which this year will be under the direction of Percy Haughton [illegible] the fact that [illegible] gree [illegible] material [illegible] teach the men the fundamentals [illegible] they will have just so much more time in the Fall to develop the eleven.

Many football players who will be eligible next Fall for the team on account of their part in other Spring sports, will not be able to give any time to the gridiron practice.

Stars Out of the Game Now.

This is the case with Wigglesworth, Potter and Gardner, the three quarterbacks on the varsity last year, all of whom are playing baseball. It is also the case with Dick Lewis, the varsity end; while "Bud" Smith, the guardian of the other wing, is rowing on the varsity squad.

Happily, however, most of these are players who are so well grounded in the game that they will really not lose much by their absence.

Of course, Captain Fisher will be on hand daily, while a number of last year's substitutes and members of the second and freshmen eleven together with new material, will come out.

In addition to Coach Haughton and Bob Fisher to coach the men, the former will have back one of his most reliable assistants in the person of "Charley" Daly, the present fire commissioner of Boston. Lothrop Withington, last year's captain, will also be on the field every afternoon as long as he can afford to stay away from his rowing, while "Ham" Corbett, the brilliant halfback last year, will be in togs to [illegible] with the backfield candidates, who are especially plentiful this year.

A large gathering of men who intend to try for the eleven next Fall was held in the Union last Friday evening, when Coach Haughton and Captain Fisher spoke and explained the new changes in the rules and also the plans for the season.

The work of the next three weeks will consist of teaching the men the slight changes which have been made in the playing game, but the main thing will be the individual development of the men.

Last Spring Coach Haughton had to give his whole time to instruction in the new game, owing to the many changes in the rules. With all of these problems solved, however, the practice this Spring may be aimed directly toward the development of the player.

The work, on the whole, will probably be simple and will end with the formation of a couple of provisional teams, which will be taught several formations, and finish their work with a scrimmage or so. This training will last about three weeks and will give the coaches ample opportunity to size up their new material and shape their policy for next Fall.

Class Crews Out To-morrow.

In addition, the class crews are called out to-morrow. The two upper class crews will probably row from the Weld boat house, while as in past years the sophomore and freshmen crews will direct their efforts from the Newell boat house.

These crews will be composed of the candidates called out now and from time to time they will be strengthened by members of their classes who may be dropped from the varsity crew squad as the season advances.

The objective point of this training is the interclass crew race to be held in May over the mile and seven-eighths course from the Cottage Farm bridge to the end of the basin. The crew winning this regatta is awarded its class numerals unless the freshmen happen to win the event, in which case the upper class crew coming in second gets the award.

Work will also probably start to-morrow for the track men on the cinder path in the Stadium. The frost is all out of the ground and for the past week or so employes have been raking and rolling the path, so that now it is in pretty good shape. This permits preparation for the handicap games and the interclass track meet to be held the second week of April.

The long distance men of the track team were called out early last week, and have been working out on the paths around the outside of the Stadium.

The field event men, on the other hand, have been holding daily practice for the past three weeks under the direction of Coach Quinn in the basement of the Hemenway Gymnasium. Quinn has also had the hurdlers under his direction, giving them fine points on form in this event, in which he himself is little short of a wonder.

Skater Kearney to Retire.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Phil Kearney, who has won more skating championships than any other speed ice skater, announces his retirement from the skating game. Kearney has been a speed skater over ten years and has beaten every racer of note in that time, including Edmund Lamy, of Saranac Lake.

Big League Bowlers Meet

Chelsea Tackles Murrays

Decisive Match Between Leading Teams in Greater Boston-City League Comes Friday Night.

By ED COGSWELL.

BILL GALWAY is a kidder. This was made manifest when he got after Jimmy Burns's goat in saying he was going to gather the strongest of his players in the Boylston team when going against Chelsea Square. Not only did Bill fail to do so, but he was absent himself, going to Revere the night of the match.

All of which goes to prove Bill can play practical jokes with the best. Chelsea Square, by taking all four points from Boylston, gained another lap on Murray & Irwin in the Greater Boston City League, now having a lead of four points. Revere climbed up to even terms with Carruth for third position in the race.

But how the wool will fly next Friday night when Chelsea Square and Murray & Irwin lock horns over the latter's alleys. Mish Murray will be taxed in finding room enough for the crowd who will gather to see the leaders fight it out to a finish. If Chelsea Square can break even in this important match it means much in giving them the championship.

The Odd Fellows League have concluded their season with Everett Lodge the champs. Cambridge finished second, American third, Mt. Pleasant fourth, Siloam fifth, Tremont sixth and Neptune last.

Another league to wind up last week was the Mercantile, the honors going to Ballou by two points over R. H. White Co. The boys had a most enjoyable time bowling and are already planning for a renewal of the league next Fall.

There is a very interesting race on in the Wholesale Drug League between the first three teams. They have only four more matches to roll. May 18, they hold a ball at Inter-Colonial Hall in Roxbury, winding up with a banquet.

Last evening the Bankers and Brokers' League held its banquet at Corinthian Hall in Roxbury, followed by a very interesting entertainment. It was a Mecca in the closing days of the bowling season.

YALE STARTS SEASON WITH A SPEEDY NINE

Billy Lush Says That It Is the Best He Has Ever Seen There.

NEW HAVEN, March 25.—"I never saw such good material for a Yale baseball nine," said Coach Billy Lush to-day after the practice game between the regulars and scrubs. "There are more promising pitchers than we have ever had since I have been at Yale and there are strong candidates for every position."

Lush has general charge of the candidates, including the pitchers, this year, for the first time, and he had had a week of practice outdoors in which to start plans for the opening of the season next Saturday when New York University will play its first game against a Yale nine. Yale's lineup in the opening game of the year will be as follows:

Pitchers, Freeman, Thompson and Leary; catchers, Burdette and Carhart; first base, Reilly; second base, Stillwell and Bennett; shortstop, Loutrel and Ely; third base, Merritt; outfield, Badger, Stevens and Captain Corey, McGhie, McLaughlin and McCreery.

Burdette, formerly of Andover, and last year's Yale freshman catcher, and Carhart, second string catcher last year, will fight out the backstop position, with chances favoring Burdette. There are half a dozen clever young pitchers coming along fast. Leary, who was on the freshman team two years ago, but who has since been ineligible till this season, has shown phenomenal form, and Thompson, last year's freshman pitcher, shows class.

Freeman was one of the regular box men last year. He is better than ever before. Tommers, first string man last year, will do some pitching this season, but will be used largely in the outfield for his batting. Carhart will be tried in the outfield also when he is not behind the bat.

At the start of the season Reilly, captain of the freshman nine last year, will be used on first base. He led the 1913 team in stick work. Bennett of the freshmen has the call at second base, but Stillwell, varsity substitute last season, will make the race interesting. Shortstop is anybody's. Loutrel, who was tried there last year, is doing the best fielding of any candidate but his batting is light. He is the Yale hockey captain.

Merritt, shortstop last season, has been moved to third base. He has been captain of the eleven since the outdoor season opened, in the absence of Corey, who has been in Detroit.

Stevens, Captain Corey, and Badger, outfield veterans, will be pushed hard from the start by McLaughlin, brother of the Harvard captain; McGhie, whose batting was a feature for the freshmen last year, and McCreery.

Not in many seasons has Yale started the season with eight veterans and with such strong material thrown into the squad from a previous year's freshman class. Shifts in the lineup are expected before the season is far advanced.

HARVARD DEFEATS PENNSY AT SOCCER

Quakers' First Athletic Meeting With Crimson in Four Years.

Harvard signalized the resumption of athletic relations with the University of Pennsylvania yesterday afternoon on Soldiers Field by defeating the Quakers most decisively in soccer football 4 to 1. These two colleges have not met in any sport for five years, and naturally Harvard was out to get the first blood.

The game was well played and brought into the limelight again Hamilton Fish, captain of the varsity football team in 1909. He is in the law school, but an arrangement has been made with the Faculties of the graduate schools at Harvard whereby the students may take part in soccer to help the sport along. Incidentally he was the cause of Penn getting its only score.

Harvard's defence was too strong for Penn at all times, Chadwick, the Crimson goal, putting up an excellent game, making many difficult stops.

Harvard made all its scores in the first half, the first three coming on team work, while the last was made by Byng on a pretty exhibition of clever footwork and running.

Penn scored a few moments before the end of the game, when a foul was called on Barron. This gave the Quakers a free chance at a goal. Thomson kicked the ball and Fish got in the way of it and caused it to carom off into the corner of the net, just out of Chadwick's reach.

Harvard found little trouble penetrating the Penn defence in the first half, but in the second period the Quakers got together better and Reeder at goal began to play the game for all it was worth, stopping several well placed kicks.

Needham and Byng played excellent games for Harvard, while the whole Crimson eleven showed good team play. Foulke and Jordan did well for Penn, the latter being forced to retire in the latter part of the game on account of a strain received in blocking, Fraser taking his place.

The summary:

HARVARD.		PENN.
Chadwick, g	g.	Reeder

FIRST POLO GAME.

Green Take Whites Into Camp in Best 2 in 3.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., March 25.—The first match polo games of the season practice for the International polo cup were played at Georgian court field at Lakewood this afternoon. Three games in all, consisting of eight periods of play, were decided. The first match resulted in a victory for the Greens over the Whites by a score of 6 goals to 5. The second was won by the Green team by 2 goals to 1. The third game the Whites won by one goal, the Greens failing to score.

Yale Track Dates.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., March 25.—The following track athletic engagements for the season were announced to-day for the Yale varsity and freshmen teams:

April 8—Novice meet at Yale field. "Y" men ineligible. April 24—Spring meeting at Yale field. April 29—Pennsylvania relay carnival at Philadelphia. May 6—Yale interscholastic meet at Yale Field. May 13—Harvard at Yale field. May 26-27—Intercollegiate at Soldiers' field, Cambridge.

The Freshman schedule: May 13—Harvard, 1914, at Cambridge. May 20—Princeton, 1914, at Yale field.

School Teams Clash For Bay State Title

Westfield and Oliver Ames High School Fives Meet in Championship Basketball Game.

WESTFIELD, March 25.—The Westfield High School basketball team and the Oliver Ames High School team of North Easton will meet here Friday in the first game to settle the long-standing argument as to which is the champion school five of the State. Haverhill High, Franklin High and Springfield High schools are also in the race, and games may be played later among these schools.

Oliver Ames has defeated every strong high school team in eastern Massachusetts and now has the best right to claim the title, but the others want a chance. They defeated Winthrop High, Quincy High and Revere High, three of the leading schools after the high honors. Quincy put up the hardest fight, but was afterwards eliminated in good style.

Westfield High cleaned up all the best school teams in the western part of the State and was undefeated until last week, when the Springfield High school team put over a win by one point. Holyoke and Pittsfield contend that Westfield would not give them a date.

Franklin High and Haverhill High have clean slates and want to get in the big games for the honors. A series was arranged between Oliver Ames and Franklin High, but was declared off. Franklin has played better basketball than Haverhill, has defeated stronger teams and will be given first chance.

Oliver Ames and Westfield will play two games for the title, the first in Westfield, Friday, and the second game in North Easton, Saturday.

BROCKTON CHAMPIONS.

Y. M. C. A. Basketball Team Has Big List of Victories.

BROCKTON, March 25.—Its record of eighteen victories in twenty-two games makes the Brockton Y. M. C. A. basketball team logical claimant of the Y. M. C. A. championship of the State for the second consecutive time.

Brockton has scored 537 points to its opponents' 375. It has defeated the following teams: Boston, New Bedford, Somerville, Fall River, Middleboro, Chelsea, Newton, Northampton, Holyoke, Bridgewater Normal and Lawrence. Captain Chester E. Rosen is the team's leading goal-getter, having scored 215 points. Captain Roach, Baldwin and Sheehan have taken part in every game.

Manager Lawson and Joe Reardon and Ryan have been laid up at various times during the season, and through their absence the team was seriously handicapped at times. Others on the team are Jack Rapp, Chase, Keith and Collins.

PORTLAND BARELY SCORES.

South Portland Five Walks Off With 12 to 1 Victory.

PORTLAND, Me., March 25.—Portland High School was defeated at basketball here to-day 12 to 1 by South Portland High.

NEW SCHOOL GROUNDS.

Somerville High Must Give up Use of Broadway Field.

Somerville High School will use Broadway Field, Somerville, as a playground for the last time this Spring. The Metropolitan Park Commission has granted the school a parcel of land in the vicinity of the Clarendon Hill station, which will be put in shape so that practice and football games can be played there next Fall. City Engineer Bailey will start putting the area into shape shortly.

Broadway Field is to be cut up into building lots. It will be used by Somerville High for baseball until the end of the current school year.

Bowling Contest for $100.

Up to last night the high score for the $100 prize at the Eliot bowling alleys is 45. The contest, six frames for one ball, will close a week from to-morrow night. Bowlers all over Greater Boston are greatly interested in the battle for the $100 purse hung up by Proprietor James.

OTTAWA SEVEN WINS WORLD HOCKEY TITLE

Defeats Wanderers of Montreal in a Slashing Game at Boston Arena.

was at its best last night, and its defence hung together like iron, and seldom allowed any penetration, and when it did Le Sueur, the goal tend, took care of the stray shots.

The game started off with a rush, the players tearing up and down the rink, taking turns in carrying the puck from one end to the other, and all the time going like streaks of greased lightning.

Both goals were threatened frequently from long distance but to no effect till the timer's watch showed seven minutes or more had elapsed.

Small, the Wanderers' left wing, got the [illegible] the side of the rink and at a hard angle and from a long distance he [illegible] drive and caged the rubber, thus drawing first blood.

Ottawa came back within the minute, however, Walsh working his way down the rink in record time and passing to Walsh who caged the disc from almost free position.

For the next eight minutes about the only person in evidence was Ross, who continually led the attack on his opponents' goal, only to be rebuffed and have Taylor carry the puck to the other end of the ice.

Hern made one great stop after Kerr had waded through the defense and made a free drive from a distance of about ten feet.

How Scores Were Made.

Ottawa's second score was made by Ridpath. Taylor carried the puck down the left side of the ice, and when boxed, passed clear across to Ridpath, who was free of the defence, and scored easily.

Kerr made the third tally. He slipped by both the Wanderer defensive players and found himself confronted by a forward before the goal. He calmly took his time and dodged around him and scored. It was a pretty play.

The second period discovered a number of changes in the losers' line-up. Taylor started the thing off by making a wonderful dash down the ice, but there was no one there to take the pass.

Ottawa's third score came five minutes later. Kerr and Ridpath worked down together passing in timely and accurate fashion, the former finally taking the puck some distance from the goal and dribbling it straight through the defense in great style, and scored.

Another tally came four minutes later. Taylor stole the puck from Ross's stick and without clever dodging and some fast skating, he had what appeared to be an easy time scoring. It was a well-earned score, however, and he got a hand for it.

Two Quick Goals.

Kerr made the last two scores in this period, the Wanderers failing to tally, first eluding Johnson, the cover, and finding Ross in the way, he drove the rubber between his legs into the basket.

A moment or so later, he got the puck near the goal end after scrambling about, losing, and finally regaining it, he drove it in from a distance of about five feet, Hern having no chance to stop it.

The third period brought forth some great play, the Wanderers scoring twice, once in a general scrimmage about Ottawa's goal, Hyland tallying, and later on a pass in from behind the cage, Russell getting the credit.

Kerr waded through the Wanderer defence for a fifth time and made the final score for his team. Incidentally in this period Darragh did a pretty somersault, and Taylor executed one of the cleverest snake dances ever seen on the ice, in his successful efforts to go through the whole Montreal team. Hern spoiled his shot, however.

PLAY TIE GAME.

ITHACA, N. Y., March 25.—A tie game of soccer was played by Cornell and Columbia here to-day, the score being 1 and 1. This is the first time that the Columbia players have not won in three years. Both teams played a good game and were evenly matched, but Cornell was unfortunate in losing, as a Cornell man kicked the Columbia goal. The ball slipped off the side of his shoe into the net as he was trying to kick it out of the danger zone. The line-up:

CORNELL.		COLUMBIA.
Stevenson, g	g.,	Murphy

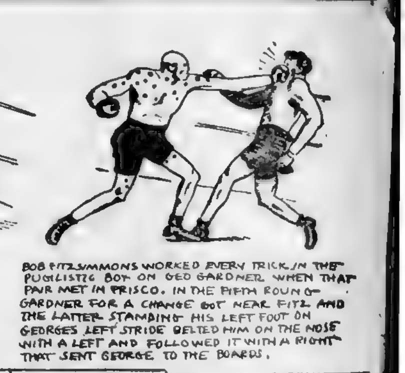
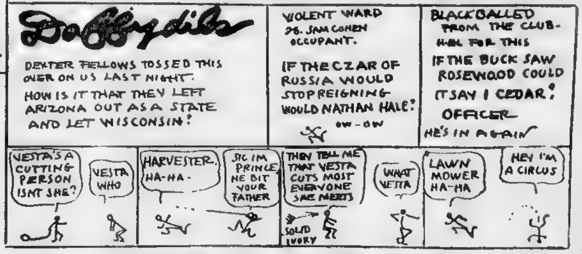
QUEER THINGS HAPPEN IN THE PRIZE RING — By TAD





PAPKE BACK IN FORM CLAIMS KETCHEL'S OLD TITLE

Dave Smith Drew Him Into the Second Battle and Was Soundly Beaten.

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

THE news that Billy Papke, once known to fame as the "Illinois Thunderbolt," had knocked out Dave Smith, the widely advertised Australian, caused a mild sensation. No one on this side of the Pacific knew that the pair had been matched again. We were led to believe that there had been one grand slump in Papke's fighting qualities, owing to the effect of yellow jaundice; and it was supposed that he intended to keep away from the ring for a considerable time.

Australian papers just to hand tell the story of the re-matching of the Australian and the American. It appears that Smith issued the challenge. He dared Papke to fight at 158 pounds for the middleweight title and a side bet of $2,500. As evidence of good faith, Smith posted $500 with a Sydney sporting paper.

Papke, who had evidently been watching for just such a chance, promptly covered the forfeit, and then Smith's manager remarked:

"Everything is in good shape; but you understand, of course, that the weighing is to be done at the ringside."

Papke [illegible] and was strongly backed up by the managers of the Stadium where the contest was to be held. As a matter of fact the Stadium folk took a firm stand and said that under no consideration would they stage the championship match in which ringside weighing was to be one of the conditions. The reason given was that matches of that kind in Australia had invariably proved unsatisfactory, owing to one and sometimes both principals being weak through reducing to weight.

The Stadium managers wanted a noon time weighing, and Papke said as far as he was concerned he was willing to do 158 pounds either at noon or six hours later.

"I can make the weight at the ringside if given the necessary time," explained Papke. "As it is, I must fight at short notice in order to adhere to the plans I have made for leaving Australia, and I will not take any chances of rendering myself weak. What is more, if we come to terms about the weight I will insist upon Smith wearing an abdominal shield. I am satisfied I did not strike him a foul blow in our last fight and I do not want to run the risk of being disqualified again."

While the weight matter was still in abeyance it was learned that Smith had demanded an exorbitant share of the gate money. He asked 60 per cent. of the gross takings and the Stadium managers immediately decided that it would be better to abandon the match than to handle it on the financial basis proposed by Smith.

Smith came in for sharp criticism at the hands of the Sydney critics and began to draw in his horns. He finally agreed that the weight be "eleven stones eleven ringside," or 165 pounds.

As it was felt that both men could make this weight without the least trouble the Stadium managers agreed to have it this way and that was the weight at which they fought.

Regarding the contest, the only news to hand is that Papke won by a knockout in the seventh round.

From what Papke said while the match was making it is very evident that he still considers himself a middleweight; and such being the case he will have something to say to the American boxers who have declared him out of the middleweight division and have been disputing as to who is best entitled to call himself Papke's successor.

12,000 Will See New 'White Hope' in Fight

All Oklahoma Is Boxing Mad Over Tuesday's Bout Between Morris and Shreck.

SAPULPA, Oklahoma, March 25.—Carl Morris, Oklahoma's entry as the only genuine and original "White Man's Hope," will meet Mike Shreck here next Tuesday afternoon, and Sapulpa shrieks with hope that Morris will make good. If he does, it means unlimited backing for the husky engineer when he thinks he is fit to go up against Jack Johnson.

If anybody in Sapulpa between now and Tuesday should so much as hint that Morris won't beat Shreck to a pulp they would run him out of town.

The promoters of the show have built an arena with a seating capacity of 12,000 and they are grieving because they didn't double the capacity. Already the mob is swarming in here, and by Tuesday it is expected that 20,000 visitors will have paid homage to the "Hope of" the White Race."

Morris is to receive forty per cent. of the gross receipts for the work of the afternoon, and even the bankers here will tell you that the receipts will total at least $25,000.

Time was when merchants here used to carry printed on their stationary this legend:

"Sapulpa, the Metropolis of the great Oklahoma Oil and Gas Belt."

The inscription now reads:

"Sapulpa, the Home of Carl Morris, Oklahoma's Hope of the White Race."

They smoke Carl Morris cigars, wear Carl Morris shirts, the bootblacks treat you with Carl Morris shines and the belles munch Carl Morris bonbons.

Great is the popularity of this "Hope." Seventeen baby boys have entered this sordid world bearing the Morris moniker, and nine infant misses are called Carlina. Morris could be elected Mayor of Sapulpa without opposition, but Carl has a better packet; this being a "Hope" in enthusiast. Oklahoma is stronger than a license to steal.

MILTON FIVE TAKES GAME.

Defeat Lawrence Y. M. C. A. by 39 to 37 in Tight Game.

The Milton Five won a hard, close game from the Lawrence Y. M. C. A. by the score of 39 to 37 in the Cunningham Gymnasium at East Milton last night. The game was close throughout and was in the air till the final whistle blew. Powell, Shield and Craig put up a good game for the winning combination, while Watson and Gargin played well for the losers. The Milton boys played foul ball and Lawrence made ten points from free trials.

The Miltotn Midgets defeated the Fall River Boys' Club in a preliminary game by the score of 17 to 16. The line-up:

MILTON FIVE		LAWRENCE Y. M. C. A.
Craig	r.f. — l.b.	Gargin
Shields	l.f. — r.b.	Wolahan
Powell	c. — c.	Moorehouse
Blake	l.b. — r.f.	Eaton
Ryan	r.b. — l.f.	Watson, Wilson

Score—Milton 39, Lawrence Y. M. C. A. 37. Baskets from floor—Shields 3, Powell 6, Craig 5, Blake, Gargin 6, Wolahan, Moorehouse, Watson, Wilson 4. Baskets from fouls—Powell 4, Craig, Watson 10, Wolahan. Referee—Eaton.

NEW MEN IN BOSTON RING.

Kohler Meets Murphy and Crouse Faces Perron Tuesday.

One of the "all-star" cards has been arranged for the weekly show at the Armory A. A. Tuesday evening. Two new faces will be seen in this city for the first time. Paul Kohler of Cleveland will meet Eddie Murphy in the main bout, and "Buck" Crouse of Pitsburg appears in the second bout of the evening.

Mark Conly and Kid Willets will meet in a six round bout in the opening bout. Crouse, who is a "hard hitting" Pittsburg welterweight, meets Frank Perron of Pawtucket in a ten-round go. Tommy O'Keefe of Philadelphia, who is a favorite in Boston, will meet Johnny Blover of South Boston for ten rounds.

Dartmouth Bad Shots.

HANOVER, N. H., March 25.—The Montpelier Gun Club won from the Dartmouth Gun Club in a clay pigeon shoot this afternoon by a score of 183 to 150. The individual marks of the visitors' team follows: Barcky 35, Adams 39, Dr. Burr 40, Moulton 38, Abbott 31. The Dartmouth scores follow: Crowell 34, Martin 32, Comstock 22, Harris 44, Higgins 18.

HARVEY SAYS BOXERS ARE DODGING MORAN

Manager of the English Lightweight Tells His Troubles to Tad.

By TAD.

"Silent" Charles Harvey is turning gray over the treatment of Owen Moran.

"Will you show me one of these alleged 133-pound lightweights who is willing to box Moran?" piped Charley, drawing the walrus brush to the light and then to the left.

"Here's 'Knockout' Brown and his manager, 'Dumb Dan' Morgan, making all sorts of promises to a man he has beaten and simply ignoring Moran entirely.

Brown has beaten Murphy, still he says he will box him first. He also shaded Hogan, according to the majority of New York writers, but Morgan goes right ahead and promises him a go.

"If Mr. Brown is such a great fighter, why doesn't he give Moran, a boy he has never met, a chance. We are willing to wait and we are willing to do weight; why not let us cut out the argument."

"Moran had to give ten pounds to McFarland in order to get a match and then showed Packey up more than any boy the Chicago lad ever met.

"I have the best 133 pounder in the world, but the trouble is that the rest of them are side stepping as fast as they can. I am told by Coffroth that Wolgast agrees to box us July 4, but I want to see the forfeits up before I'll believe it."

This is Charley Harvey's talk.

Wolgast Is Sore.

If we are to believe the reports printed in Western sheets, Mr. Abdul Wolgast of Cadillac, Mich., doesn't think much of the East. He thinks a great deal less of the scribes, too, let us add. He is telling the Western scribes that his bouts with Brown were all his and that prejudice and favoritism ruled instead of good, fair judgment.

"Why, if those fights were held in Los Angeles," he said, "every paper there would have given me the decision."

Then on top of that one of the Western scribes comes out with this:

"In New York it wouldn't make much difference how good a man Wolgast was or is, the fight promoters and the fight critics would be inclined to give him the worst of it, and for no other reason that that is their way of treating any one who comes out of the West and tries to grab off any of the bacon."

Of course, he should know more about the thing than we do, because he was in Los Angeles at the time, while most of us were bumping our breezers against the canvas ringside.

Westerners Fairly Treated.

At the present moment we can't recall one Western pugilist who came East and was given a raw decision.

Packey McFarland, who hails from Chicago, is as big an idol in the East as we've ever seen. Jem Driscoll of Wales, who trimmed everything set before him here is as popular as ever a lad was. Owen Moran of Birmingham is treated like a brother, while "One Round Hogan" of Frisco, is cared for exactly like one of the family.

Mr. "K. O" Brown gets no more right in New York than he would get in Zanzibar. "Dumb Dan" told us what Brown could do, and Brown did it. That's all there is to the Brown-Wolgast thing. He simply trimmed Wolgast fairly and squarely.

The trouble with Wolgast is that like a great many other pugilists he thinks he is a great deal better than he really is. His win over Memsic proved nothing. Mr. Memsic would have been duck soup for a flock of lads around here.

CRESCENTS BEAT YALE.

New Haven Soccer Team Barely Escapes a Clean Shutout.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., March 25.—The Crescent A. C. of Brooklyn, N. Y., defeated the Yale soccer team, 4 to 1, to-day in what was the Eli's last game before the inter-collegiate schedule starts.

The first half was about evenly contested, the visitors scoring only one goal. Timm, Yale's star centre half, suffered an injury in the second half, and the absence of two strong players from the Blue's line-up told on the locals. Armstrong featured the visiting team's play. Lineup:

CRESCENT A. C.		YALE.
Garland	outside right	Cornwall
Sauter	right inside	[illegible]
Andrews	centre	[illegible]

Goals—Crescents, Jeffers 2, Armstrong and Barrett. Yale, Cornwall.

Lowell Alumni Trimmed.

LOWELL, March 25.—The Lowell High track team defeated to-night a strong team of the Alumni, 49 2-3 points to 38 1-3. The Alumni made their best showing in the 30-yard dash, 35-yard hurdles and running high jump. The school team led in scoring points in the mile run, 600 yards, 1,000 yards and relay race and in the shot put. The relay race was one of the best contests of the season.

DENISON HOUSE BOYS LAND TITLE

Roxbury Five Beaten in Game For Social Union Championship.

The Denison House Seniors won the championship in the senior division of the Social Union League by defeating the Roxbury League five by the score of 8 to 7 last evening at the English High School gymnasium.

The game was one of the best and cleanest of the season. Both teams played a slashing game from beginning to end. The stars of the game were Sullivan and Currier of the winning team. These two men distinguished themselves on more than one occasion by their sensational work, which brought great applause from the crowd.

For the losers Brakal and Cullen played the best game. Time and time again did these two players save the day for their team by some great work.

Two games between the Juniors were played before the big match of the evening. The Hale House Juniors defeated the Roxbury League Juniors in the curtain raiser by the score of 5 to 2, while the Roxbury Neighborhood House Juniors triumphed over the Denison House Juniors by a score of 8 to 7.

The evening's sport was in charge of Zenas Crocker of the Ellis Memorial [illegible] night's games ended the Social Union League's season.

The freshman schedule announced as follows: May 13, Harvard 1914 at Cambridge; 20, Princeton 1914 at Yale Field.

Franklin Boys First.

In the Melrose Grammar School mile run yesterday afternoon Roland Blair of the Franklin School won first place, Lyman Bowen of the Franklin finished second and Howard Milton third. The Washington School won the mile relay race, with Franklin second and Lincoln third.

Miss Campbell to Try for British Golf Titles

U. S. Woman Champion Will Represent Hamilton Club at Portrush, Ireland.

CHICAGO, March 25.—Secretary E. A. Eulass of the Western Golf Association has been advised that Miss Dorothy Campbell, the Scottish golfer, who won the United States Golf Association championship title, and last year defended it at the Homewood Country Club links, will play in the British championship, to be held at Portrush, Ireland, and will later try for the Scottish women's title at St. Andrew's.

Miss Campbell will represent the Hamilton Club of Hamilton, Ont.

Accompanying the champion on the foreign trip will be Miss Florence Harvey, ex-champion of Canada, and a contestant last year at Homewood, and Miss [illegible] Nesbitt, both of the Hamilton Club. Mrs. Mary C. Fownes, sister of National [illegible] W. C. Fownes Jr., and Miss [illegible] Dikins, both members of the Oakmont Club, Pittsburg, also are going abroad to compete in the British tourney.

POLO SEASON ENDS.

Brockton Captures Seventh Consecutive Game.

BROCKTON, March 25.—In the final game of the season, which was cut short because of poor attendance all over the circuit, Brockton won its seventh consecutive game to-night in the National League series, trimming Fall River 8 to 4. Interest in the game has increased in Brockton rather than decreased, as has been the case in other cities and the large crowd was kept on its feet during the entire evening so exciting was the play.

From a polo standpoint the game was the best here this season. The entire Brockton team played exceptionally fast. Cunningham, Mansfield and Doherty starring. For the visitors Harper's work in goal was a shining feature. Lincoln also played a wonderfully fast game for the visitors. The summary:

BROCKTON		FALL RIVER.
Cunningham, 1r		J. Lane
[illegible], 2r		[illegible]
Mansfield, c		Cargen
[illegible]		[illegible]
Doherty, g		G. Harper

Rushes—Cunningham 4, Lincoln 11. Stops—Purcell 40, Harper 51. Goals—Cunningham 4, Cunningham 3, [illegible] 3, Mansfield 1. Referee—Menard. Timer—Maybury.

ALL STARS MEET DEFEAT.

Lawrence Soccer Champions Add One More to String of Victories.

LAWRENCE, March 25.—Lawrence Champions of the Lawrence, Lowell and district soccer league, defeated the "All Star" the pick of the rest of the league, at Glen Essex this afternoon by the score of 2 to 0.

Hague played splendid ball for the Lawrences, while Hill shone for the "All Stars." After the game the pennant and cup on which Lawrence secured a leg were awarded to the champions and the players were presented with medals.

The summary:

[illegible]

Score—Lawrence, 2 goals: Clarke, 2. Referee—Lacy of Methuen. Linesmen—Gordon of Andover, Wakeley of British Americans. Time—45-minute halves.

New Swimming Mark.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 25.—Hebner of the Illinois A. C. to-night defeated his field in the fifty yard dash for the National amateur swimming championship, setting up a new mark for the distance, negotiating the Y. M. C. A. tank in 24 4-5 seconds. McGillivray, also of the Illinois A. C., was second, and Fribelle of the Missouri, was third. C. M. Daniels of New York, the former holder of the record at 25 1-5 seconds, did not compete.

Andover Eleven Winner.

ANDOVER, March 25.—Andover soccer team won from Harvard, '14, on the old campus this afternoon by the score of 2 to 1. It was the first game for the Harvard players, who did well, although outplayed by the academy boys. There was some fast playing and the result was in doubt up to the close.

SIX POLICEMEN TO PREVENT A RIOT

Basketball Game in Dorchester Was Roughest Played There This Season.

In the final and roughest game of the year Dorchester Alumni defeated the South Boston High Alumni before a crowd of 1,200 spectators at the Dorchester High Gym last night by the score of 32 to 2. The play was so rough that Referee Delaney called both of the teams off the floor during the first half and told them they had to abide by the rules or he would call the game. After the game it took six policemen to disperse the crowd. The Dorchester A. A. defeated the South Boston A. A. in the opening game by the score of 23 to 16. The summary:

WHAT'S DOING AND WHY IN THE LEGISLATIVE AND POLITICAL ARENA

By A. POLITICAL SHARPE.

CLIP these names. Stick them in your vest pocket. Compare them with next Wednesday afternoon's papers which will give the vote of the legislative Committee on Federal Relations on the Income Tax amendment to the federal constitution. Here they are:

John W. Haigis of Montague, James A. Hart of Boston, Albert H. Silvester of Worcester, Republicans; John H. Hunt of Worcester, Clarence W. Harding of Williams, Alfred Sciglano of Boston, Eugene F. Toomey of Lowell, Democrats.

These are the seven members of the committee who have been steadily counted upon to support the Income Tax. There isn't any doubt as to where some of them stand. There is some doubt about others. Any one of them who votes against the Income Tax bill will somersault from his previously declared position.

The four other members of the committee are Charles H. Pearson of Brookline, Joseph Turner of Fall River, John Carr of Boston and Edward A. Sweeney of Attleboro. There is some hope for "Joe" Turner and Ed Sweeney. The two others are consistent friends of "the interests."

Mr. James A. Hart! Stop! Look! Listen!

A LITTLE friendly advice to Representative James A. Hart of Ward 24 Dorchester. We think well of him, and would hate to see him go astray. Mr. Hart is one of the members of the Committee on Federal Relations whom the vested interests expect to get on the Income Tax.

Representative Hart thought the Income Tax was a good thing when he ran for nomination and election last Fall. It was good enough to get him seven votes [illegible] a hitherto Republican district where one of the Republican candidates fell by the way side and the two others [illegible] by. But now, after [illegible] Representative Hart [illegible] the Income Tax is a good thing.

Think It Over, James.

REPRESENTATIVE HART, we hope some friend will whisper this in your ear:

Jim, [illegible]

"Repay that obligation by voting to lighten their burden through a tax that will reach those best able to pay. Remember Mr. Leonard G. Roberts of your own ward, who was in the House last year and who is not there this year because he voted against the Income Tax and against other measures wanted by the people, opposed by the corporations. Mr. Roberts was a one-year man. Representative Hart. Stiffen up your backbone and do some thinking for yourself."

President Treadway started after the nomination for Lieutenant-Governor last Fall. About the same time he began to say kind things about the bills that organized labor presents annually to the Legislature. In that respect, he emulated [illegible] Raleigh or Walker. But when it comes to doing things for organized labor he stops [illegible] his friends [illegible] Brookline.

Ah well! The votes will be counted next Fall.

"Tush, Tush!" Says Mr. Ellis. "I've Done It for 20 Years!"

REPRESENTATIVE GEORGE H. ELLIS of Newton has been as nervous as a [illegible] with an itchy nose over [illegible] printed in this column last Sunday that he does printing for the Boston Elevated Railway Company, and also serves on the legislative Committee on Street Railways, which usually decides the fate of bills affecting the "L."

Representative Ellis ran around the State House corridors last week telling fellow legislators that "There's really nothing in that story that was printed in the AMERICAN."

"What do you mean when you say 'There's nothing in it'?" asked a member from Oshkosh. "Do you mean that you don't do any printing for the Elevated?"

"No," said Ellis. "I mean that I've done printing for the road for the last twenty years."

Seems rather singular that the legislative Committee on Street Railways should be fated, year after year, to have in its membership men who do printing for the Elevated, men whose advertising publications get large sums of money for printing editorials favoring the L's bills, men who sell copper wire to the Elevated, men who have been on the Elevated's legal staff, men who take their orders from Elevated contractors, and so on and so forth. Yes, very singular.

They Can't Stay Away.

YOU heard a lot of talk about a year ago concerning the permanent retirement of J. Otis Wardwell, Ben Gibby, Walter Bullock and some others as State House lobbyists. A lot of piffle in that talk. Mr. Wardwell is back in the lobby with both feet. Mr. Bullock is back with both hands, and Mr. Gibby is catching a crumb now and then.

It's a great year for the men who make their living on what they pretend to be able to do with legislators. The lobby pikers who seldom wore a clean collar last year are smoking cigars with gold bands this year. They're all getting money, and getting it easy.

Make hay while the sun shines. Get the coin while it's coming. Some day the Legislature may pass a bill to drive the lobby out of the State House.

• • •

There Are Others, Also. Most of Them Dead Ones.

MR. WARDWELL, Mr. Bullock and Mr. Gibby are lobbyists. Everyone knows it. When they ask a Legislator to vote this way or that way on a certain piece of legislation the Legislator knows, unless he's a numbskull, that Wardwell or Bullock or Gibby is getting money for trying to line him up.

But how about ex-Senator Harry Foster, that slick gentleman from Gloucester? He has been as busy as a bee at the State House this year.

He is not registered in the lobby book in the sergeant-at-arms's office. Of course, if he registered he could not sit on the Senate floor every day and chat across the rail with members. The chances of passing legislation in the Senate to help the plain people would not be lessened if Mr. Foster were barred from entering the chamber.

Curley Against Lifting Jacks.

PERHAPS if Harry Nawn owned patents on lifting jacks, Senator Martin P. F. Curley of Roxbury might be more of a Democrat when the Senate votes on lifting jacks bills. The Senate had a roll-call on one of these bills the other day, and Curley was the only Democrat to vote against it.

BOSTON IS TO HAVE ANOTHER CONTEST FOR MOTOR TRUCKS

Boston Commercial Motor Vehicle Association Is Planning to Hold a Big Contest Sometime in June.

By J. C. KERRISON.

The commercial motor truck contest, inaugurated in this city by the Boston AMERICAN last October and which attracted attention throughout the country, being copied by a dozen or more cities, is to be continued this year by the Boston Commercial Motor Vehicle Association.

At the conclusion of the successful run in October last it was announced that the Boston AMERICAN would hold its second annual in 1911. Since then, however, there has been organized in this city the Boston Commercial Motor Vehicle Association, which, appreciating the value and importance to the trade of such a contest, has elected to hold its own in June next.

The Boston AMERICAN, therefore, after having given to Boston the honor of being the second city in the country to advance the interests of motor trucks by such a contest, now gives way to the governing body, the local motor truckdom.

The Motor Vehicle Association has virtually determined to hold such a contest some time in June, the same to be in the hands of a committee to be appointed by President Whitney. Before announcing the details the committee will go thoroughly over the rules, conditions and classifications, bringing about what it is hoped will prove a most satisfactory set of rules that it is possible to devise.

In this work it will unquestionably profit by the rules and experiences followed by other cities last year, and likewise, in [illegible] adopted by the [illegible] Board of the American Automobile Association, which has assumed the same jurisdiction over motor truck contests as it has over pleasure vehicle contests.

The entire details of the run are as yet in embryo, and as to whether or not the run will cover a period of one, two, three, or four days is a matter of conjecture.

The motor truck industry has developed [illegible] a wonderful degree since the run of last year, and it would not be at all surprising if something like 60 cars were entered and competed in a run, which it is fair to presume will take in the great [illegible] of the large manufacturing centres of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Hampshire.

It has been suggested that most excellent runs could be made from Boston to Providence in one day, thence from Providence to Worcester, Springfield, Greenfield, Fitchburg, Lowell and back to Boston. This would take in a territory which offers great opportunity for development in the motor truck line and would not repeat, to any degree, the route followed in the contest of a year ago. That run, it being remembered, was to Newburyport and return.

In the territory covered by the suggested route, is to be found some very large manufacturing plants, and such a run in that territory would, unquestionably, produce a great increase of interest and brighten trade prospects.

The idea of holding the contest in June rather than in the Fall meets with the approval of the manufacturers and dealers throughout the country, who feel that that month is the most advantageous of the twelve to prove and demonstrate to the business men the values and economies of motor trucks when compared with horse-drawn vehicles.

There can be no question of the success of this contest.

FALL RIVER'S SHOW LOOKS PROMISING

Plans for Fall River's automobile show are progressing rapidly, and requests for space are pouring in with every mail. The outlook for one of the most successful of the smaller shows is most encouraging, and the management is sparing no expense to make this first event a big success, as on the outcome of this year's show depends the future.

Mr. O. D. Corbett, announces that R. C. Gilhooley, the racing driver of the Peerless cars, has entered the Lexington Day races which he proposes to hold at the Riverside track, Fall River. This crack driver will bring to the track on that day the big Peerless racing car with which he has made so many notable victories in and about the city of New York.

Baker Electric Wagons.

Among the recent additions to the commercial motor vehicle trade in Boston is the F. A. Phelps Company of No. 17 Harvard street, which has taken the agency for the Baker electric commercial wagons. The Phelps company has long been engaged in the stable business and will continue that department, but President F. N. Phelps believes that there is a great future in motor trucking, and after mature consideration and much investigation decided that the electric offers the greatest advantages for city trucking.

"A Roundup."

To round up forty new members for Allston Council of the Royal Arcanum, the rallying committee will canvass the district in the Velie Boston Service Car in one of the most enthusiastic rallying campaigns that has ever been carried on in Greater Boston. The Velie Boston Service Car was placed at the disposal of Allston Council by James Coggeshall, New England representative for the Velie, who is a member of the council. The members of the committee, who will tour the district are: W. H. Short, Dr. W. C. Doar and Guy C. Willis.

Another Consolidation.

Permanent organization of the Consolidated Motor Car Company has been effected and the big selling and operating company now controls the Royal Tourist Car Company, the Croxton Motor Company and the Acme Veneer and Body Company. The Royal Tourist plant at Cleveland is one of the most modern and best equipped automobile factories in this country, and the Croxton firm has recently moved its plant from Massillon, O., to Cleveland. The Acme plant is located at Rahway, N. J.

Two New Arrivals.

There arrived in Boston this week two more of the fleet of electric wagons of the Edison company. These machines were built by the General Electric Company and are of the half ton panel top style. These [illegible] bodies and all, are built entirely of metal, making extremely light yet substantial vehicles. There are no wood panels to shrink or crack. The power equipment consists of sixty cells of the Edison A-4 battery and a street car motor.

THIS model possesses, in the highest degree, those important advantages that are peculiar to the Six Cylinder type. It runs at a foot pace, and by the mere pressure of a pedal climbs hills or accelerates to express train speed. The motor operates smoothly at all speeds.

¶ In addition, and very important, The Locomobile Six is notably economical on tires, the consumption of fuel, and the time needed for upkeep.

¶ As to the fundamental virtues of Safety and Reliability, it is a typical Locomobile—a car of the highest quality of material, workmanship and inspection. It is a thoroughly tested and highly developed model.

¶ The Locomobile Six is made and distributed by an experienced organization whose aim is to render such attentive service to owners that each Locomobile will give that complete and permanent satisfaction for which it was built.

The Advantages of the Six Cylinder Locomobile

The Locomobile Shaft Drive Six, without changing gears, runs as slowly as a walk, or at a rate of over 60 miles an hour, and climbs hills splendidly—yet shows an efficiency of 12 miles to a gallon of fuel. It has done this under ordinary favorable conditions on the roads of central New York with full passenger load. In hill climbing and other points of performance it is the best car that we ever made. A recital of the features of this model will make it clear why this is so.

The Six Cylinder Motor develops over 70 Horse Power on the test stand. The motor base is bronze. There are cylinders specially designed for this model, large valves, quiet valve lifters, high tension dual ignition, and a new carbureter that cuts down fuel consumption and provides great power at the same time. The new oiling system is self contained—oil is pumped to the bearings in a constant stream.

The Carbureter referred to is new Locomobile design and construction. It provides the snap and power of a multiple jet device with the simplicity, economy, and ease of starting of a single jet. Heat for vaporization is provided by both hot water and hot air. The hot air from the exhaust gives a good mixture immediately at starting. The combination of hot water and hot air gives a more perfect mixture than could be obtained with either system alone and enables low gravity gasoline to be consumed with satisfaction. The quality of the mixture can be varied by the operator.

The Clutch on the Locomobile Six operates without slipping or jerking. It is a multiple disc, the type most suitable for a larger car. It is simple, reliable and requires very little attention for lubrication. It may be removed and replaced as a unit without disturbing anything else.

The Transmission is another feature. The case is bronze, insuring permanent alignment of gears, shafts and bearings. Four speeds and reverse selectively operated. It gives no trouble and can be driven several thousand miles without adding any more grease to the case.

The Rear Construction contains no brazing. Alloy steel rear axle tubes. The ¾ elliptic rear springs are free to act—no driving through the springs. Universal joints are in metal housings—will run 5,000 miles or more without repacking with grease.

The Appearance is attractive—low lines. The body is graceful and roomy, of the four door type and seats seven. The bonnet is short, obviating the clumsy appearance and waste room of numerous other sixes. The running boards are clean on both sides. Tires are carried at the rear instead of on the running board, thus improving the appearance of the car and weighting the rear springs equally.

Tires are large in size and not overloaded, thus do not wear out before their time. Careful design and construction of the differential gear eliminates any binding or cramping when the car is turning a corner—a condition that increases the life of the rear tires very considerably.

The Riding Qualities are remarkable. This is due to a long wheel base, long elastic springs, and excellent balance. The car rides easily and steadily—there is no side sway or any tendency to skid when traveling at speed.

The Locomobile Six merits your close attention. If you are interested call or telephone for a demonstration. The price is $4,800, Touring Car or Torpedo, including Top and Demountable Rims.

The Locomobile Book, which is in library form and contains 258 pages and 80 illustrations, will be sent on request. Our methods are free from insistent salesmanship.

Tire Mileage Doubled

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires—10% oversize—actually double one's tire mileage. They cut tire bills in two. That is proved by the sale of one-half million of these tires.

Last year—after 12 years of tire making—we trebled our sales in a single year by a new type of tire.

We have sold 500,000 of them as fast as they could be made. Yet these tires, until lately, cost 20 per cent more than other standard tires. They cost nothing extra now.

Sixty-four leading motor car makers have contracted with us for these patented tires on their 1911 models.

They are now outselling our old-type tires—our clincher tires—almost six to one.

Won't you ask for the facts about these tires which are now saving millions to tire users?

No Rim-Cutting

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires make rim cutting impossible. In a hundred tests we have run the tires flat—as far as 20 miles.

Ordinary tires, when punctured, may be ruined in a single block. Rim-cutting wrecks them even when partly deflated. It is something which can't be repaired.

Rim-cutting damages rubber tires more than any other single cause. A punctured tire, because of this danger, must be repaired on the spot.

Now a patented feature—which our book explains—gets rid of this trouble entirely. It gives us the only practical tire which can't rim-cut—a hookless tire—a tire which needs no bolts.

This one feature alone saves tire users 25 per cent on the average.

10% Oversize

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires are 10 per cent oversize. The form of construction allows that.

We give you this oversize without any extra cost. That means 10 per cent more air—10 per cent more carrying capacity to take care of the extras—the top, glass front, gas tank, extra tire, etc.

It saves overloading—the cause of nearly all blow-outs. It adds 25 per cent to the tire mileage with the average car.

These two features together—No-Rim-Cut and oversize—under most conditions cut tire bills in two.

TIRE BOOK FREE

The facts are explained in our Tire Book—filled with vital information for motorists. Men who know these facts are insisting on Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires. You will do the same when you know them. A postal sent for this book may save you hundreds of dollars in time.

THE QUESTION OF "SKIDDING" RECEIVES CONSIDERATION

Massachusetts Highway Commission Has Certain Ideas Relative to Side Slipping of Motor Car.

The following comments from Motor News, the official organ of the A. L. A., is of interest to all motorists:

While the members of the Massachusetts Highway Commission do not wish to commit themselves as to their future attitude on the question of suspending or revoking the license of an operator who may be given a hearing to show cause why his license should not be suspended or revoked because of an accident caused in whole or in part by the skidding of his automobile, some indication of the board's future action may be gained from past experience.

It is unusual for operators in such cases to attribute the accidents directly to skidding, which could not be avoided. At such hearings the question is invariably asked by some member of the commission whether or not the operator applied his brakes. The answer is most likely to be that the brakes were not applied and is followed by the statement that to have applied the brakes would have been the most dangerous thing to do.

The commissioners are apparently not inclined to acquiesce in that statement, at least, without some qualification; and as they have had wide experience themselves as automobilists, and held many hearings at which evidence dealing with the various aspects of that point has been introduced, it is well for motorists to know the probable and general deductions of the board.

It seems to be their opinion that the greatest care should be used at all times over wet and slippery or smooth paving, and that in most cases of this kind it may or may not be wise to apply the brakes. In other words, they leave the matter open to discussion, except that they seem inclined to accept the statement, so generally made, that the application of the brakes, especially with much force, is dangerous.

As to skidding in sand, however, the opposite view seems to prevail. The questions of the commissioners at hearings seem to indicate that if a car begins to skid in sand while going at a moderate or fast rate of speed, the brakes should be applied, perhaps moderately at first, but with sufficient force to materially decrease the speed.

Practically all serious accidents from skidding have occurred when the operator unexpectedly ran into sand in turning out to meet or pass other vehicles. In probably nine-tenths of such cases, if not all, the operators have admitted that they did not apply the brakes and that at the moment of the accident the speed of the automobile had not materially decreased. While it is true that the commissioners only sit in judgment upon cases of skidding followed by accidents more or less serious in character, in such cases it would seem that the accidents could have been no worse had the brakes been applied.

The wheels of an automobile skidding upon a smooth surface are without friction ahead or sidewise; but in sand there is at least some friction and side resistance which, it would seem from the experience of the commissioners at least, should be taken advantage of by the application of the brakes.

The Farmer a Good Road Builder

Motor Vehicle Has Brought Farmer to Full Realization of Meaning of Good Roads.

"Probably the most advanced conditions made toward the improvement of our American roads has been the selling of the automobile to the farmer," says C. E. Fay, who continuing said:

"He buys his car; then he talks good roads and repairs his own highway. In driving through the western farm land sections you can usually spot the home of a farmer who owns an automobile by the character of his road."

"The Ford car has become an especial favorite with the farm trade because it is so easily operated; in case the farmer is busy with the horses in the field his wife can take the Ford and run to town, take the children to school, etc. The automobile brings the farm close to town and is very often found on the way to market with its load of garden truck or returning with parts to replace broken farm machinery, or a couple of rolls of wire fence. Undoubtedly 70 per cent of all the low and medium priced cars sold in this country this year will be bought by the American farmer. He's got real money to buy with and has found the automobile to be a profitable investment.

"It is a great mistake to think that the farmer is not conversant with the technicalities of the motor car. The farmer for years has been America's largest market for stationary gas engines; he has studied through practical experience the gas engine from all angles. The farmer can intelligently talk automobile construction from the superiority of vanadium steel construction to advantages of the left hand drive. It is an injustice to the farmer to think that he is not fully possessed of the latest facts in automobiledom. The automobile is just as necessary on the well equipped farm to-day as are any of the other modern conveniences.

ELECTRIC VEHICLE ASSOCIATION

Plans for Co[illegible] of Boston Dealers in Electric Vehicles Now Being Formulated.

A movement for the organization of an association of dealers in electric vehicles in this city is now on foot. The feeling is that by such an organization greater work can be done in the education of the public to the great possibilities of the electric vehicle as is now produced. The average individual hardly realizes that at the present time there are electrics of long mileage capabilities, and cars that need not turn back from any hill.

To make electrics known and fashionable, so that persons who want town cars will be inclined toward these machines for their use, is what the dealers desire to accomplish.

The success of electric vehicle associations in cities like Chicago, Cleveland, Kansas City, Washington, Detroit, Buffalo and New York encourages the dealers in the belief that Boston can certainly be developed to become one of the great electric vehicle centres of the country.

Boston now has its Dealers' Association, its Commercial Vehicle Association, and there is no reason why it should not have its Electric Car Dealers' Association. Each has work to perform in its individual departments.

REBUILT CARS GOOD.

They Offer Excellent Value to Prospective Buyers.

"With thousands of persons seriously considering the purchase of a motor car and hundreds of makes that have been manufactured," says C. S. Henshaw, "I fully appreciate the difficulties the prospective buyer finds in obtaining a truthful and correct answer to the question, What is the best medium priced car?

"To start with, the prospective buyer himself cannot know of the different kinds, and, therefore, it is practically impossible to decide for himself. He can hardly depend upon the opinions of others for the reason that they, like himself, cannot know of the various makes, or perhaps they may be prejudiced in favor of the kind they use." Mr. Henshaw says that the man interested can hardly take his choice from reading printed matter and advertisements of manufacturers, who naturally believe they are right and justified in claiming their respective makes the best.

"In view of the prospective buyers' difficulties in arriving at a correct decision a decided answer would be a thoroughly high grade rebuilt car. Because when such automobiles are first built up the workmanship, material, care in designing and accessories necessary for a thoroughly reliable car are embodied in the high grade machine, and the purchaser gets the long life all of these factors represent. Our confidence in the value of our Thomas rebuilt cars will perhaps be best summed up by stating that I know hundreds of machines which have seen almost constant service for seven years with practically no expense for upkeep, and the pleasure that the owners get out of motoring under such conditions amounts to more than they have ever received for a given amount in any other direction. Naturally, there will always be a big demand for the medium priced, new car, but it seems to me that the buyer is indeed fortunate in being able to secure a rebuilt high grade car for an equal investment."

BUSINESS BRISK.

Stevens Factory Working Night and Day.

Mr. George S. DeLaney, general manager of the Stevens-Duryea Company, dropped into Boston this week and spent a few hours with the local agent, the J. W. Bowman Company, and he was very enthusiastic over the prospects of business for 1911.

He states that the factory is now working overtime in order to keep up with its orders and that the shipments during the past two weeks have been far in excess of the shipments made at the same time last year, showing conclusively that the high grade cars are still very much in demand.

The system which is kept by the Stevens-Duryea Company from one year to another is very unique and is very similar to the records kept by the weather bureau at Washington, so that each year can be compared with the other at a glance.

The extreme popularity of six-cylinder cars this year is being wonderfully demonstrated in this plant. Mr. DeLaney has just gotten back from a trip to the Pacific coast, where he looked over the situation, and also spent some time in Chicago, where the Stevens-Duryea Company are opening their first branch.

No More Racing.

The United States Motor Company has absolutely withdrawn from all automobile races and contests in which speed is a primary factor. In speaking of this matter, President Briscoe, of the company, said yesterday:

"Races are practically meaningless. The mere ability of an automobile to run at sustained high speed over a given course shows speed only. I am confident that the prospective buyer is more interested in reliability and economical maintenance."

HARTFORD TO 'FRISCO.

Motorette Making Good Progress Through Bad Roads.

The little Motorette which recently started out from Hartford, Conn., on a 5,000-mile journey to San Francisco, is making most satisfactory progress toward its goal. Any number of automobiles have attempted this trip in the past, but the motorette is by far the smallest motor-driven car to ever attempt such an undertaking. Not only is it the smallest, but it is by a large margin the lowest priced. To this and to the fact that the Motorette is a three wheeler, is due the great amount of attention and interest that the little car is attracting.

The C. W. Kelsey Mfg. Co. of Hartford, Conn., makers of the Motorette, could surely have chosen a worse time of year to attempt such a hazardous trip, since the road and weather conditions throughout the South are now at their worst. The car, along with its occupants, Ward Sharwood and Otto Krause, has already encountered almost every condition which would impose the severest strain on both car and occupants. The run from Hartford to New York was accomplished through snow nine inches deep, but the real trouble did not begin until the Motorette reached Wilmington, Del. From there on the roads have mostly consisted of thick, sticky clay mud—mile after mile of it—in numerous places hub deep and over. And added to this, severe changes of temperature with frequent spells of rain and snow placed the roads, in many spots, in such a terrible condition as to be quite impassable for horse and wagon traffic. The boys have recently reported a change in temperature of from forty degrees to five degrees above zero, which froze the roads so tightly that a speed of over eight miles an hour was absolutely impossible. In a day's run previous to reaching Roanoke, Va., it was necessary to ford seventeen creeks and rivers, several of which were over the bottom of the tool box.

FILMS SHOW AUTO MAKING.

Moving Picture Show of a Big Factory.

The exceptional methods used in manufacturing E-M-F "30" and the Flanders "20" motor cars is to be demonstrated by the E-M-F Boston Company at the Hotel Lenox, at noon next Tuesday. The home office has prepared several thousand feet of moving picture films, which will then be exhibited in the Rose room. This moving picture exhibit is said to be one of the most interesting and most complete that has ever been made for industrial purposes.

As Regards Punctures.

The average number of punctures automobile owners repair in the course of a Summer's motoring is three.

This estimate was secured for the Diamond tire forces by W. A. Weygandt, an Akron newspaper correspondent.

His investigation, made by means of a printed blank sent out by himself and filled in by automobile owners, showed an average mileage for Diamond tires of 6,221 miles.

Including all makes of tires the average of casings replaced during the season is ¾ of one to each set in use and the average of new tubes required is one for every 3,543 miles. The average motorist last season ran his car 5,199¼ miles and the three hundred thousand automobile owners traveled 1,559,775,000 miles. Had these motorists devoted their time to travelling round the world they would have circled the globe 62,391 times in eight and a half months.

New Manager of Autocar Company

Chase Langmaid Becomes Head of New England Branch of the Ardmore Concern.

Commencing the first of the coming month, Chase Langmaid, manager of the United States Tire Company's Boston branch, will assume his new duties as manager of the New England branch of the Autocar Company, with headquarters here in Boston. Mr. Langmaid has for many years been identified with the local industry, he some fourteen years ago becoming associated with the Hartford Rubber Goods Company, with which company he has continued up to the present date.

He has seen the affairs of that company grow from a very small beginning until it is to-day one of the largest, if not the largest, rubber tire producing companies in the country.

For the last few years he has been manager of the Hartford branch here in Boston, and at the establishment of the U. S. T. C. he was selected as Boston manager of that concern.

Mr. Langmaid's experience with the New England trade is one of the most extensive imaginable, he being closely in touch with all that pertains to motor affairs. His selection as manager of the Autocar is conceded as a most excellent one, he being the right man in the right place.

As manager of the Autocar Company branch Mr. Langmaid will have charge of the pleasure and commercial car business throughout New England and of the finely equipped service department in Boston. The Autocar Company has adopted the policy not only of making and selling cars and trucks but of giving the purchasers of its product the best of facilities for care of their vehicles. In this connection it has erected in Boston, on Beacon street, a large building having sales and administrative departments, but devoted in the main to service purposes. The building is provided with every modern arrangement.

Back from the Woods.

Mr. Harry W. Bell, Mr. G. A. Thornquist and Mr. E. J. Bartlett of the Empire Motor Car Agency at 94 Massachusetts avenue, have just returned from a very successful trip through the mud and snow in the hills of Worcester county.

The roads in that part of the State are in a very poor condition at this time of the year, but at no time on the trip was there felt any lack of power or speed.

Keeping up a fair average speed the little car ran through the mud and snow and over the hills in a way that made it a great favorite, and from the reports of the salesmen it will be a very popular car in that section this season.

"Chick" Fox Now Sells Oaklands

W. B. C. Fox, known throughout military and social circles as "Chick" Fox, has at last fallen victim to the call of the motor. Long has he yearned to delve into the realms of the motor world, standing afar and watching the wheels go around.

No longer, however, will he study this problem from a far-away position, but instead will get into the very heart of the matter, talk technically, and show you why the Oakland is the best car for you to buy.

In other words, "Chick" has become identified with the sales department of the Boston Motor Company, distributors of the Oakland pleasure car and Victor commercial truck.

"AN ALL STAR CAST."

Strong Aggregation of Talent Traveling for the Hudson.

"The All Star Cast" is what those in the automobile trade are calling the Hudson Motor Car Company's staff at the auto shows. Looking into the booth where the "33" is exhibited, a person acquainted with auto affairs will see a notable crowd of officers and salesmen.

President R. D. Chapin, organizer of the Thomas-Detroit, Chalmers and Hudson Companies, plays the lead with the "All Stars," and his support includes Howard E. Coffin, ex-president of the Society of Auto Engineers and designer of the "33"; General Manager R. B. Jackson, who won his spurs with the E. R. Thomas and Olds Motor Companies; F. O. Bezner, well known as a prominent officer of the Chalmers, Thomas-Detroit and Olds Companies, in the early days of the industry; Ned Broadwell, one of the best known and most popular automobile men in the business, who was vice-president of the Fisk Rubber Company before joining the "All Stars"; C. C. Winningham, probably the highest salaried automobile advertising man in the country; Charles A. Hughes, whose publicity stunts have taken him to all parts of the world; E. C. Morse, sales manager, who used to direct the sales of the E. R. Thomas Company, and has circled the globe several times while foreign manager for the National Cash Register Company; G. G. Behn, formerly chief engineer of the Chalmers Company; J. G. Vincent, formerly superintendent of inventions of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company; Frank Trego, manager of service division and one of America's best known technical authorities; Walter J. Bemb, a well known graduate from the old bicycle days who handles the middle West; "Tommy" Forbes, the Hudson factory's manager for New York, whom every one in Gotham automobile circles knows; P. D. Stubbs, another district manager who used to be sales manager of the Overland; Richard Bacon, Jr., formerly sales manager and advertising manager of the Haynes, who handles the Hudson business in the Northwest, and has a reputation of being one of the cleverest wits in the business; L. L. Barnes, who represents the Hudson so efficiently in the South Atlantic States, and "Sombrero" Jesse Draper, the ex-sales manager of the Mora and Wayne cars, who handles the Southwest in the same clever style in which he has handled sales for numerous companies.

RACING IN THE SOUTH

Large List of Drivers Ready for Contest to Start To-morrow.

There is a big field of racing drivers waiting for the word that shall send them off on their trials of speed and generalship in the Pablo Beach races near Jacksonville to-morrow. The four-day speed contest which is to be held there is attracting attention from all sections of the country, owing to the fact that the best drivers and the best-known machines have been entered, and that every effort will be made to reduce the records from the kilometer to the 300-mile mark.

A determined effort is to be made to improve on the present mile straight-away mark. The famous Oldfield Benz, on which a heavy fine has been paid to the contest board of the A. A. A., has been tuned up to go the distance and bring home a new record for the mile, and to prove that Pablo Beach is faster than is the far-famed, sea washed course at Ormond.

The men have been in the Southern resort for several weeks, tuning up their cars and getting everything in shape to make the coming four-day contest the greatest speed contest that has ever been held in America.

PREMIER IN MEXICO.

Car Which Carried Westgard Completes Run.

Not resting with the honors of having been the first motorists to cross the American continent in scouting a route for automobilists, the party of A. L. Westgard of the Touring Club of America and the United States Bureau of Public Roads has extended the course to Mexico. For the first time, therefore, there has been laid out a motoring highway from New York to the Pacific coast and to a foreign country on the western ocean, and the trans-continental Premier car was this week the one to establish such a record.

It was a comparatively short trip of 160 miles to the border of the neighboring republic, to add to the 4,500 covered by this same pathfinding car in traveling from coast to coast, but it had a peculiar interest in view of the present excitement in Mexico, and indeed was very soon the centre of the situation among Americans and Mexican authorities. Inasmuch as Mr. Westgard had to be absent upon other duties, the directorate was assumed by Louis H. Schwaebe, a prominent Los Angeles motorist, and with Charles Young at the wheel in place of Ray McNamara, the sturdy Premier car was loaded last Sunday at Los Angeles, with its full touring and camping equipment. The destination was Tia Juana, Mexico, via San Diego, and on Wednesday the car was piloted across the line and became an active figure in international affairs.

Bedecked as it was with flags of the United States and of the Touring Club of America, it excited some suspicion as it approached the belligerent territory. A squad of Uncle Sam's representatives stopped the party before they left American soil and searched for guns or ammunition, and warned the motorists that they crossed at their own peril, because an attack was expected hourly from the rebels. On reaching the custom House at Tia Juana, the Premier tourists found that all natives were preparing to flee across the border at the least alarm of an insurrecto invasion; all the cattle were corralled in front of the adobe buildings, and horses were in harness ready to be hitched to the wagons which were filled with household effects. Moreover, the wagons were all headed towards United States territory.

ITS BEST CONTEST.

A Continuous Motor Truck Contest Maintained.

President Ludlam of the Ant[illegible] [illegible] was $10. What does it cost you to keep your motor truck standing in the garage all day? The answer came, quick as a flash, '$45 in profits.'

NEW SALESROOMS.

Lozier Branch in New York Established.

The general offices of the Lozier Company, formerly located at New York, have been turned over to the former retail sales department, which will be operated as a branch. The foreign department of the company is the only department not now located in Detroit, the foreign business being handled by W. M. Mead, with headquarters in the New York city branch at Fifty-sixth street and Broadway.

New Honors for Page.

Carl H. Page, New York representative of the Chalmers Motor Company, has been elected vice-president of the Licensed Automobile Dealers of New York. John F. Plummer will succeed M. J. Budlong as president. The Licensed Automobile Dealers of New York is one of the strongest dealers' organizations in the country. Its members probably sell more cars annually than are sold in any other city in the world. Mr. Page is one of the most prominent automobile dealers in New York and sells an average of 1,000 Chalmers cars a year.

Orange Blossoms to Be Rival of Easter Lilies

Charming brides-to-be preparing dainty gowns and arranging wedding kit for marital march to the altar as soon as Lent is gone and glad-garlanded Easter heralds the opening of a new social season

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT

CONSIDER the brides! Easter lilies in all their glory shall not outrival Easter brides in [illegible] array this season—at least not in Boston.

Already we are having visions of these dream-girls blossoming in filmy, cloud-like creations on the Easter horizon

It is a procession we hail each year with fresh delight.

Prominent among our most aristocratic maids who will "take the veil" and join the Ancient and Honorable Order of the Orange Blossoms will be that sparkling bit of womanhood, Miss Helene Putnam, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Putnam of Boylston street, Brookline, who on April 25 is to wed Henry L. Sigourney, Harvard, '07, son of Mrs. Henry Sigourney of Beacon street. The wedding is to take place at the Putnam residence Miss Putnam was to have made her debut next Winter, but has decided she would rather be a bride than a bud, and so is doing the unusual in donning bridal attire before she has made her bow to society. Mr. Sigourney is a member of the Somerset, Athletic and various other clubs, and is one of six children, four of whom are Alice, Edith, Katherine and Mary Sigourney. His younger brother is David B.

Quite in the lead of her sister "lily-brides" will be the stately Katherine Warren, who has chosen to wed a few days before instead of a few days after Easter, and so has chosen April 6 for her marriage to John Thayer, Jr., the ceremony to take place in Arlington Street Church at 12 o'clock.

HELEN SEARS TO BE MAID OF HONOR.

Miss Warren has chosen for her maid of honor Miss Helen Sears, with whom she traveled through Europe a couple of Winters ago, chaperoned by Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, the latter's mother.

The bridesmaids will be Miss Nora and Miss Evelyn Thayer, sisters of the prospective bridegroom; Miss Christine Hunnewell, Miss Margaret Thomas, Miss Natalie Thayer, also a sister of Mr. Thayer, and Miss Sylvia Warren, sister of the bride—so the bridal party will be distinguished for the rare beauty of its members as well as for their artistic gowning, for I hear that the gowns are to be quite wonderful

Mr. Thayer, who graduated from Harvard last June, has chosen his best man and ushers, with the exception of three of the latter, from among his classmates Roger Amory of Commonwealth avenue is to be his best man and the ushers will include Henry Sargent Appleton and Raymond Belmont, both of New York, Harvard '10; George Denny, Harvard '09, William Perkins Homans, Harvard '05; George Saltonstall West, Harvard '10; Bayard Warren, brother of the bride, all of Boston; Gilbert Mather of Philadelphia, Harvard '10, and George A. Parker of Lancaster, Harvard '10.

Another of our social favorites to forswear the life of single blessedness will be Miss Cornelia Wolcott, only daughter of the late Governor and Mrs. Roger Wolcott, who will wed the Rev. Mr. Drury, sub-master of St. Paul's School and for some time identified with St. Stephen's Church of Boston Miss Wolcott, who is usually one of the important members of the famous drill of the Vincent Club, is not to take part in that feature this year as she is busy with preparations for her approaching marriage. Miss Wolcott, who made her debut several Winters ago at a series of teas arranged by her mother, has ever since been one of the most popular girls in Boston society and has likewise been much admired abroad and in Washington. She is a strikingly handsome brunette, tall, slender and graceful, so will make a strikingly lovely bride.

Follows Marital Example.

Miss Wolcott has four brothers, Prescott Wolcott and Oliver Wolcott, Roger Wolcott, Jr., who married Miss Claire Prince, a sister-debutante of Miss Wolcott's, shortly after her presentation, and S. Huntington Wolcott, who married Miss Hannah Stevenson, second daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Robert H. Stevenson of Beacon street. Miss Wolcott in accepting a clergyman for her life partner is following in the footsteps of her clubmates and sister-heiresses, Miss Helen Paine, who married the Rev. Thacher Kimball; Miss Elinor Burnett, who married the Rev. Ellis Bishop, and Miss Katherine Gardner, who married the Rev. Francis B. Boyer.

A dazzling recruit to this enchanting army will be Miss Emeline Ticknor of Jamaica Plain, who, April 20, weds James Melville Hunnewell of Harvard class of '01. The marriage will take place in St. John's Church, Jamaica Plain, and is to be a large and brilliant affair. Miss Ticknor is a decidedly pretty and attractive girl and will make a distinctly lovely bride Her sisters are Miss Caroline Ticknor and Miss Edith Ticknor, and her brothers are William Davids Ticknor, who married Ella Wattles of Canton several years ago, and Benjamin H. Ticknor, Jr. Mr. Hunnewell is a nephew of Miss Alice Farnsworth of the Vendome, of Mr. and Mrs. James Means of Beacon street and of Mr and Mrs. William Farnsworth, also of Beacon street.

A Rare Wedding Gown.

Miss Priscilla D Stanton, who is to marry J. Howland Auchincloss at the home of her parents, Mr and Mrs. Louis Lee Stanton, 30 West Forty-ninth street, New York, on April 19, is to wear her mother's wedding gown and also the point lace which adorned the bridal gown of her maternal and paternal grandmothers, which will make her gown one of exceeding interest as well as much beauty. Mr. and Mrs. Auchincloss are to make their home in Boston until the former finishes his course at the Harvard Law School in June

Another notable wedding of Easter week will be that of Miss Carmelita Shreve, one of the two daughters of Major and Mrs. William P. Shreve of Beacon street, Brookline. The bridegroom will be George Gifford Symes of Denver The marriage is to be celebrated in All Saints Church, Brookline, and will be followed by a reception at the Shreve home. Miss Shreve is especially attractive and winsome and will make an interesting bride. The young people are to reside in Denver

Glad Garlands For Beautiful Fiancees

WITH the whole world of fashion on the wing and Cupid holding the centre of the stage, engagements are coming in such rapid fire succession these days that those at home are kept spending all their pin money on flowers sent to the happy brides-to-be.

One of the all-important engagements of the week was that announced on Wednesday by Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Fay of their winsome, fair-haired daughter, Miss Dorothy Fay, to Dr. William Jason Mixter of Marlboro street. The announcement was made at a reception held at the Fay home Miss Fay is a member of the Vincent Club, as also are her sisters, Miss Mary Fay, Mrs. Thomas Motley, Jr., and Mrs. Frederick L. Dabney. She is the only fair-haired member of the Fay family, all her sisters being decided brunettes. Dr. Mixter is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles J. Mixter and is a graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, '02, and of the Harvard Medical School, '06. Dr. Charles G. Mixter is a brother.

Miss Caroline H. Gay's engagement to Albert Gardner Mason, which was announced earlier in the week, is bringing innumerable flowers and felicitations in its train. Miss Gay is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Gay of Chestnut street, and a sister of Miss Marion O. Gay, whose engagement to Francis I. Burrage, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Burrage of Commonwealth avenue, was announced last Fall. Mr. Mason is treasurer of the Whitman Mills of New Bedford, and has previously resided both in Boston and New Bedford. He graduated from Harvard in 1900, and during his senior year was president of the Intercollegiate Amateur Athletic Association of America. He is a member of the Harvard Club of New York, the Puritan and Arkwright Clubs of Boston, the 'Varsity, Dicky and Hasty Pudding Clubs of Cambridge, and also the Worcester and New Bedford Clubs.

An engagement of interest to society here as well as elsewhere is that announced of Miss Emily Packard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Packard, to Sidney Harrison of Brookline. Through both parents Miss Packard is a member of some of the oldest and most distinguished colonial families of Virginia and is also identified with several of the oldest families in Maryland. Miss Packard is considered, by all who know her, a particularly charming and cultivated young girl. She has figured conspicuously in society and has been greatly admired since making her debut a few season ago. Mr. Harrison belongs to a prominent Massachusetts family and is a recent graduate of Harvard. The marriage is to take place during the Spring

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Bessie Mary Sage, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Winifred Hayland Sage of Medford, to Frank Damrell Neill also of Medford.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lee Robinson of Malden have announced the engagement of their daughter Margaret, to Dexter Stevens, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Stevens of Malden.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Miller of Somerville have announced the engagement of their daughter, Edith Belle Miller, to Clarence Irving Chase of the same city.

Mrs. and Mrs. Alva N Ward of Malden have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Reta N. Ward, to George S. Cumings of Lynn.

Mr. and Mrs. George B Towle of Roxbury announce the engagement of their daughter, Linnie Edith, to Edward F. Bigelow of Wakefield.

Many to Attend Park Horse Show

IN less than a week the entries for the horse show at the Park Riding School next month will close and the number already received is assurance that last year's entry will at least be doubled. In several classes it looks as if a limit will have to be placed, as the ring, though the largest in the city, will hardly be able to care for more. The classification is specially attractive this year, there being eleven more classes, with a total of sixty-two, than were offered last Spring. In most of the classes cups will be the first prizes and some very beautiful trophies already have been received The plan of having the show in the evening appeals especially to the business man and the advance sale of tickets has been unusually heavy. The children will have their innings on the last afternoon of the show, when there will be a matinee for their especial benefit, with the many pony classes forming the greatest attraction.

MISS MARGARET DRAPER

HASTY PUDDINGERS IN READINESS FOR SHOW

MEMBERS of the Hasty Pudding Club of Harvard have for weeks been busy with preparations for their annual show, "The Crystal Gazer," which they are to give in the clubhouse in Cambridge next Thursday night. The Boston performance is to be given in Jordan Hall on Friday, the last night of the month and on Saturday, April 1. They will also give their show in New York when there will be two performances in the ballroom of the Hotel Astor on Friday and Saturday evenings, April 21 and 22.

The book and lyrics were written by James Cable Savery of Cable, Mont.; the music by William Bowen Barker of Jamaica Plain, with additional numbers by Reginald Candler Foster of Charles River Village and Francis Wood Gilbert of Utica, N. Y., all of them members of the senior class. Mr. Savery will take the part of Ozab, the crystal gazer, who also poses as Percival Bishop, a floorwalker. Mr. Gilbert will take the part of Miss Grayce Taylor, a manicure.

William Shepard Seamans, Jr., a son of Dr. W. S. Seamans of Madison avenue, New York, who graduated from Harvard in '77, and a brother of Woodbury Seamans, '08, will play the role of Henry Higgins, a wealthy merchant from Oshkosh, Wis. Edson Austin Bemis of Cambridge will be Mrs. Higgins, a wife with social aspirations, and Edward Peter Pierce, Jr., of Boston, will be Dorothy, their daughter whose marriage makes a large part of the plot. Wetmore Hodges of Detroit will be Jack Manners, one of the lovers, and Lindley Hoffman Paul Chapin, Duke Pierre de Verche, looking for an heiress, Mr. Chapin is the son of Mrs. Lindley Hoffman Chapin of West Forty-ninth street, New York

Lawrence McKeever Miller, the son of Mr and Mrs. Hoffman Miller (Edith McKeever), of Tuxedo Park, will impersonate Brooks, a butler, and Sussette, a maid, will be done by Randall Clifford of New Bedford. John Edward Bolt, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Apthorp Boit of Brookline, will be Rosita, an Italian flower girl, and a boatman will be done by Alan Marshall Osgood of Washington Anderson Dana will be Dick Allen, whose "Larriat dance" is sure to make a hit. Mr. Dana is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dana (Mary D. Butler Duncan) of New York, Mr. Dana, a '74 man, and a brother of Miss Janet Dana, who has many friends in Boston, and of William Butler Duncan Dana, who is an undergraduate at Harvard.

One of the leading features will be the group of debutantes, Helen, Grayce, Corinne, Suzanne, Evelyn, Ruth, Margery and Edyth, who will be done by George Davenport Hayward, a son of Mrs. George G. Hayward of Newbury street, Harvey Edward Wetzel of Detroit, Charles Baird, Jr., of Akron, O., Richard Bowditch Wigglesworth, a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Wigglesworth of Milton, Robert Williams of Brookline, Henry Cannon Clark of New York, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Crawford Clark (Marian Cannon), and a brother of Mr. Grenville Clark, who married Miss Fanny Dwight, Frederick Ayer, Jr., of Commonwealth avenue and James Cook Trumbull of Salem.

Older ladies will be Messrs Perry Dunlap Smith of Chicago, William Baillie Fraser-Campbell, a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Fraser-Campbell of New York John Edward Bolt of Brookline, Thomas Addis Emmet Harris of New York, Charles Wells Hubbard, Jr., of Bay State road; John Hoar, a son of Mrs. Samuel Hoar of Concord, and a nephew of Mrs. Washington B. Thomas; Otis Tenney Russell, the youngest son of Mr and Mrs. Joseph Ballister Russell, Jr., of Cambridge, and Abbott Stevens of North Andover.

A group of "handsome men" will be John Elliott, the son of Mr and Mrs. William Elliott, West End avenue, New York; Robert Sanford Jewett of Dorchester Augustus Barrett Richardson of Forest, Ralph Lowell, a son of Mr. and Mrs John Lowell of Commonwealth avenue William Davis Sohier, Jr., of Beacon street; Sanger Bright Steel of Chicago, and Theodore Frothingham, Jr., a son of Mr. Theodore Frothingham of Locust street, Philadelphia, who graduated from Harvard in '79.

The other young men of the chorus will be Henry Curtis Dewey of Memphis, Tenn.; Charles Suydam Cutting, Jr., a son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Howe of Longwood, and Heyliger DeWindt of Hillside Then there will be gendarmes soldiers, flower girls, cabbies, Neapolitan peasants and street urchins.

There are two acts, the first taking place at Mrs. Higgins's country place, "Sea-Bird Manor-on-the-Hudson," an evening in early August, an hour before the time set for a garden fete, which afterward takes place, and which gives a chance for numerous songs and dances and vaudeville entertainment for the guests. The second setting is on a small piazza on the cliffs of Possilipo, overlooking the bay of Naples, with Vesuvius and the city of Naples in the distance. The time is sunset, and the peasants are returning from work Among the songs of the first act are "The Ways of the World," by Hodges, Pierce and Clifford, "The Best Little Girl," by the two former and the group of debutantes, who, with the "Handsome Men," also do "The One You Love," and "Temperament," by Messrs. Beuchley, Gilbert and Bemis. The latter sings "If Henry Would Be Abelard," and Mr. Savery, "Bogey-Mogey Town."

In the second act Mr Savery's song will be, "I For One Will Not Be There," and he has a trio, "People You Meet Every Day," with Beuchley and Gilbert. Mr Edmands and "The Daughters of Power" give "Business of Jest," and Messrs Hodges and Pierce, "Youth" Another duet will be Mr. Bolt and Mr. Osgood's "Good-Night, My Bianca." As usual the ballet will be a feature of the performance, with numerous other dances.

Suffragists Will Celebrate at Luncheon

AN important social event is the tenth anniversary of the Boston Equal Suffrage Association for Good Government, to be celebrated by a luncheon at the Vendome, Wednesday, March 29. Mrs. Charles G. Fashionable Crowd Sees "Hippolytus."

"HIPPOLYTUS," a drama by the late Julia Ward Howe, was given its initial performance in Tremont Temple Friday night The proceeds from the performance will be devoted to the Julia Ward Howe Memorial Fund. The committee was fortunate in procuring the services of Miss Margaret Anglin, the distinguished actress. The bad was well filled, and in the leading role Miss Anglin was heartily applauded The cast was a strong one and outdid itself in making the affair a success.

The play is based on the old Greek legend Hippolytus, Phaedra and Theuseus, with Venus and Artemis as secondary characters. The play was written by Mrs Howe in the early fifties and she wanted it played by Booth and Charlotte Cushman, but through some difference the play was never produced.

There are several forms of the famous legend, but Mrs. Howe selected the Italian one, which represents the guiltless son of Theuseus saved from the wrath of his grandsire, Poseidon. The play is in five acts with but few characters, and in blank verse, less than 2,000 lines in all. The two goddesses, Artemis and Aphrodite (Diana and Venus), appear as speakers at the opening and at the ending of the play The songs are in rhyme with the exception of a [illegible] unrhymed ode describing the mission of Theseus [illegible] by Ariadne, and her despair when forsaken. A part of this ode runs.

The king's fair daughter stood
To see the captives, meeting Theseus' eyes.
Such pity smote her heart
That from her window, as he went to death,
She flung the silken coil
To guide him, and her father's keen-edged sword,
Ye know the deed he wrought.
The monster, as he sprang,
In his own entrails sheathed the murderous steel
With fiercely knotted limbs
And writhings ineffectual he lay,
Wasting his hated life
The while with lightened heart
Greece shook the shameful tribute from her hand.

The play is a tragedy, [illegible] but with surprises which keep the listeners keyed up to high pitch The verse is lofty and harmonious

How to Make a Pint of the Best Cough Syrup and Save $2

This recipe for home-made cough remedy is used and prized in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada. It costs little, but it is splendid. Even whooping cough yields to it quickly.

Mix 1 pint of granulated sugar and ½ pint of warm water and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle and add the Sugar Syrup. This makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

This simple remedy will usually stop a deep-seated cough in less than 24 hours. It tones up the appetite, has a pleasant taste and is slightly laxative, which is helpful. You will also find it splendid for bronchial troubles, sore lungs and throat affections, asthma, etc.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe is so popular that it is often imitated, though never successfully. In trying it, use only the pure, genuine Pinex, which contains guiaicol and all the natural healing elements of Norwegian white pine extract, in concentrated compound.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

BRILLIANT SOCIETY FETE TO AID HOSPITAL

OF all the brilliant affairs Boston society has given for charity few can compare with the entertainment on Thursday afternoon at the Opera House for the benefit of the Sharon Sanatorium. [illegible] big auditorium was filled.

The Greek Pageant.

The Greek pageant presented told the story of Agamemnon, King of Mycenae, who, after his victorious return from Troy, was murdered by his wife Clytemnestra. This scene represents the ceremony of decking the tomb of the King with garlands and pouring libations upon it in accordance with ancient classic rite. Clymnestra stands on the steps of the temple and watches the ceremony—the chorus enters and takes its position behind the tomb as groups of garland bearers and flower girls enter, decking it as they pass slowly by. Next enter a group of [illegible] and then Elektra descends the temple steps with attendants. The ceremony is concluded by the pouring of the funeral libations upon the tomb, which is done by Elektra.

The cast was as follows:

Tea by Ushers.

During the intermission tea was served in the foyer, the ushers turning to waitresses, and nice, quick, considerate ones they made.

The gem of the [illegible] entertainment was the "Secret of Myrto," the dance given Miss Dorothy Jordan, who, in her short skirted costume of greenish chiffon and brown, danced her way right into the hearts of her spectators as she portrayed the story.

The scene is laid among [illegible]. At the back of the stage on the right, a bas relief in crumbling stone represents a group of dancing girls. In front on the left of the stage, a statue of A[illegible] stands erect on its base of [illegible] stones.

One of the dancers, Myrto, [illegible] herself from her companions and, wrapped in her veil, advances [illegible] movements gradually [illegible] fully awakened, [illegible] she sees the statue [illegible] god and looks upon [illegible] glances and [illegible] is unmoved [illegible] eyes. She seeks [illegible] ings of flowers [illegible] veil, she displays [illegible] her form to a fuller extent [illegible] this too, is ineffectual [illegible] before the deity, [illegible] the increasing [illegible] dance. He remains [illegible] by his continued immobility Myrto's dancing becomes wilder [illegible] hausted, she falls at the [illegible] of the statue.

Divinity in Immortal Art.

A far-away voice tells [illegible] gods are dead. Those who [illegible] have souls [illegible] vinity lies in [illegible].

Myrto [illegible] voice ceases once [illegible] her veil and regains her [illegible] dancing girls.

At the conclusion of her dance she was deluged with flowers and was recalled at least a half dozen times and made to bow her acknowledgements.

BUDS HOLD INTEREST OF OPERA THRONG

DESPITE the fact that Lent is still being observed and that so many of our fashionables are in mourning, there was a goodly showing of smart society at the opera on Wednesday night. Miss Constance Cunningham, whose sister, Susannah, has just sailed for Europe and who herself has taken up the farming fad, was among the earliest of the arrivals and was handsome and distinguished in sea-green velvet and cream lace.

Mrs. Henry Parker Quincy and her demure young daughter, Elinor, were again on the scene, Mrs. Quincy in pale gray velvet and Miss Elinor in pale pink satin, draped with cream lace.

Miss Ethel Gibson, who was one of the notable beauties parading through the lower foyer during the second intermission, was strikingly handsome in pale gold satin draped with embroidered gold chiffon and trimmed with touches of King's blue.

Buds With Elizabeth Sears.

All glasses, during the intermissions, were focused upon the box of buds in which Miss Elizabeth Sears, one of the wealthiest debutantes of the season, who has just returned from a sojourn at Palm Beach, entertained several of her sister-buds in her father's box. She was looking especially well after her brief respite from the gay round of events and wore a becoming gown of white satin and white chiffon made on the simplest lines. Among her guests were Miss Elise Ames, who has also been at Palm Beach with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Ames and who was especially pretty in rose pink satin veiled with silvered chiffon; Miss Helen Hooper, who is to be the most important [illegible] the coming month, was also a guest and wore a stunning gown of pale plus [illegible] trimmed with white [illegible] and [illegible] of black fur. Miss Mary Hunnewell, one of the prettiest of the group, was in white satin, trimmed with white chiffon, [illegible] large pink rose on the corsage giving just [illegible] proper touch of color.

Miss Alice Bolt was among the younger girls there and looked especially attractive in deepest rose satin, edged with delft [illegible].

Miss Edith Parkman was another notable figure among the younger girls [illegible] were [illegible] satin, trimmed with chiffon of the same color. Her mother, Mrs. Henry Parkman, was in black.

Miss Rosamond Dixey's handsome brunette coloring was shown to the best possible advantage by her gown of king's blue satin, trimmed with brilliants. She was with her mother and a party of friends, her mother in white lace combined with pale gray satin.

Miss Mary Curtis's Gown.

Miss Mary Curtis was an early arrival and as attractive and animated as ever in a gown embroidered chiffon over white satin, the decolletage outlined with brilliants.

Miss Elizabeth Gray, who is still on [illegible] as a result of her recent [illegible] was charming in [illegible] satin. She was with a number of friends, including Miss Barbara Burr, who was in black satin, with a large pink rose on the corsage.

Miss May Loring was in the George [illegible] box and was handsome in deep [illegible] satin, embroidered in silver, and small flowers in her prettily done coiffure. Mrs. Timothee Adamowski was in palest [illegible] satin and Mrs. Henry S. Hunnewell was in black velvet and heavy cream lace. Mrs. Stanley P. Clemence, who has just recovered from a long and tedious illness, was there looking just as handsome as ever in pale blue satin.

Mrs. Eben S. Draper, who entertained guests in her box, was in black jetted lace and black satin, and Miss Dorothy Draper wore cerese satin and chiffon.

Two most attractive girls in the second tier of boxes were Miss Alice Thorndike, who wore a gown of Helen pink satin and her guest, Miss Ruth Nickerson, who is to be among the important brides of June, in delft blue chiffon over palest pink satin. Mrs. Thorndike was in black lace over palest yellow satin. Miss Dorothy Fay, whose engagement had been announced at a reception earlier in the afternoon, was there with her fiance, Dr. Mixter, and was radiantly lovely in palest yellow satin and chiffon. She was busy during the intermission receiving the congratulations of her many friends who crowded about her.

More Striking Gowns.

Mrs. Samuel J. Mixter was in black jetted lace over black satin and Mrs. Alden Thorndike wore white satin and diamonds.

Mrs. Gordon Dexter was picturesque in flowered satin and Mrs. George R. Fearing, Jr., was becomingly gowned in emerald green satin.

Mrs. Philip Sears, who entertained several friends in her box, was in palest gray satin.

Miss Dorothy Jordan was hostess in her father's box and was in white lace over white satin, with deep phalange of black.

Miss Nina Burnham was in black lace combined with black velvet over white satin and a large pink rose on the corsage.

Mrs. Robert Saltonstall was in palest blue satin brocaded with gold and had several friends with her in her box.

Mrs. Birt Dexter was in black velvet and diamonds and Mrs. Stanley McCormick, Boston's leading suffragette among the society women, looked totally unlike most of the women one pictures most interested in the cause and was charming in delft blue chiffon over satin.

Mrs. Wallace Goodrich was handsome in king's blue satin.

Whereabouts of Those Known to Social Set

WITH the arrival and departure of guests, the planning of yachting parties, and daily luncheons, the society season is at its height in the several resorts in Florida. From St. Augustine comes the report that the city is crowded with guests. Messrs. Frederick Armory and Ingersol Armory have returned to the Ponce de Leon from a visit to Ormond. Recent arrivals at the Alcazar from Boston include Mr. and Mrs. John F. Welch, Miss Marjorie Welch, Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Emory, G. H. Lyall, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Hale and L. R. Bolton.

An interesting Easter week wedding will be that of Miss Susan Ludlow Gould, daughter of Mrs. E. Sherman Gould of New York, and Aldrich Durant of Cambridge, which will be solemnized in Trinity Chapel, New York, on April 20. Miss Cornelia Hoyte will be the maid of honor and Miss Ray Winters, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George E. Winters, and Miss May Greene of Worcester will be bridesmaids. Henry Durant will act as his brother's best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph B. Williams are planning to occupy their estate in Dover the first week in April. They will remain there until June, when they will open their bungalow at Beach Island, Cohasset. Since early in the Winter Mr. and Mrs. Williams and their children have been guests of Mrs. Williams' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Jackson, at No. 402 Beacon street.

Many courtesies are being extended to Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Andrews and their family by the Anglo-American colony at Rome, where they are staying at the Hotel Bristol.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Mifflin of Marlboro street have returned from a visit to Philadelphia, where they are very popular and where several luncheons were held in their honor.

Miss Angelica Brown, whose popular nom de plume is "Girlie" daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Brown of the Newport cottage colony set, is making quite as big a sensation in Cairo, Egypt, as she has done at Newport since her coming out. The attention that so many men are showing her may cause her to forget her trip abroad. At the annual costume ball held at the Hotel Savoy Miss Brown was without doubt the belle. She was gowned in dull gold net over mauve satin, and it won the woman's prize, a handsome Sevres coffee set.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Norris (Margaret Stone), whose marriage took place at Newport recently, and who for a time visited Boston, have gone to Aiken, Palm Beach and Jacksonville for a three weeks' stay. From there they will sail for Europe on their wedding tour. The bride's gown, which was of pale blue satin and chiffon, was one of the handsomest seen in Newport this year. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids.

Bishop and Mrs. Lawrence, with their son, William Appleton Lawrence, Harvard '11, who have been spending several weeks with friends in California, arrived home recently. On their way home they stopped over at Denver, Col. It is said that his daughter Ruth will be among the April brides.

Among other Bostonians stopping at Florence are Mrs. Parker Mann and Miss S. S. Lawrence. Mrs. Kenneth Horton, who spent some time in Boston visiting relatives, is also in the same city. She has been stopping at the Minerva Hotel, where she found many acquaintances.

Mrs. Edwin A. Shuman, an ardent lover of music and a constant attendant of this season's opera, was especially beautiful and attractive on Tuesday night, wearing pale blue satin relieved with touches of pink and pink roses adorning her pretty coiffure.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Peabody, Jr. of Milton, and their daughters, Miss Martha and Miss Sylvia Peabody, and Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Bigelow are visiting at Camden, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund M. Parker (Alice Gray) of Sparks street, Cambridge, have taken the Putnam cottage, furnished, at the Dumplings in Jamestown for the coming Summer.

Lady Evelyn Grey, daughter of Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, is expected to go to Newport from this city. Mrs. J. DeForest Danielson will join the cottage colony at Newport this Summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Walker of this city and Lenox have taken the John David Davis cottage on Shoreby Hill at Jamestown for the Summer of 1911. This is the place they occupied last season.

Mrs. Francis Otway Byrd of Albany has returned to her home after a visit with her sister, Mrs. Charles R. Sturgis (Alice Bowditch), at her home, No. 2 Mt. Vernon square.

Miss Clemence Crafts, who has been spending several weeks in Palm Beach, Fla., has returned to her home in Commonwealth avenue.

Mrs. Henry Barton Jacobs (Mrs. Robert Garrett) has rented from Louis L. Lorillard his property on Ochre Point for one year.

Charity Leading Motive for Big Society Affairs

WITH charity as the keynote to the Lenten medley of events-social, society is kept hustling and the various philanthropies thriving. The entertainment on Thursday for the benefit of the Sharon Sanatorium was the most brilliant of any charity affair ever given in Boston and society maids and matrons have for weeks been working overtime to make the affair the success which it surely was.

In aid of the Talitha Cumi Home an entertainment is to be given on April 3, at [illegible] o'clock, at the home of Mrs. William Lindsey on Bay State road.

The entertainment is to consist of readings from "The Pipers" by the author, Josephine Peabody Marks, and the singing of several groups of songs by Francis Rogers of New York. Among the patronesses for the affair are:

Mrs. James J. Storrow	Mrs. Warren Sturgis
Mrs. W[illegible]	Mrs. J. M. Storer
[illegible] Thomas M. Shaw	Mrs. Thomas Motley
Mrs. T. R. [illegible]	Mrs. Robert F. Clark
Mrs. Thomas P. Curtis	Mrs. Robert Lovett
Mrs. Robert Grant	Mrs. [illegible]
Mrs. S. Parker Bremer	Mrs. John H. Storer
Mrs. J. Mason [illegible]	Mrs. Robert T. Paine
[illegible]	Mrs. Russell Sturgis
Mrs. Francis [illegible]	Mrs. Charles A. [illegible]
[illegible]	Mrs. George Saltonstall
[illegible]	Mrs. W[illegible] McKee
[illegible]	Mrs. Alden A. Thorndike
[illegible]	Mrs. Paul Hubbard
[illegible]	Mrs. Eben Stanwood
Mrs. C. D. Converse	Mrs. H. O. Marcy
[illegible]	Mrs. C. W. May
Mrs. Charles [illegible]	Mrs. Frank W. Wood
Mrs. Robert [illegible]	Mrs. W. H. McElwain
[illegible]	Miss Frances [illegible]
[illegible]	Miss Anne Edwards

"The Mikado" is to be presented by the Professional Women's Club at the Shubert Theatre on April 6, and with such capable women and such abundant energy and enterprise back of the affair it is bound to be a success. The opera is cast entirely by women members of the club, which has enrolled 53 professional singers. Mrs. Bertha Wesselhoeft Swift of the Vincent Club is to sing the title role. Mrs. Edith McGregor Woods is to be "Katisha" and Marie Celeste Strong, [illegible] and Miss Edith Louise M[illegible] and Miss Katherine Hunt are to be the "three little maids." The patronesses are

Mrs. [illegible] Wolcott	Mrs. [illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Mrs. [illegible] Gardner	Mrs. William Appleton
Mrs. [illegible] Anthony	[illegible]
[illegible]	Mrs. Francis B. [illegible]
Mrs. Frederick R. Sears

Tuesday Mrs. William B. Kehew opened her house in Chestnut street for a talk by Mrs. Everett C. Bumpus on "The Art of Italian Hill Towns," and the coming Tuesday Mrs. Alden A. Thorndike will open her house for the same purpose. At Mrs. Kehew's the talk was devoted to painters, sculptors and wood carvers of Siena, and at Mrs. Thorndike's the subject will be San Gimignano, her towers and frescoes. The patronesses are Pretty Wedding of the Lenten Season

A PRETTY Lenten wedding took place Tuesday evening when Miss Katharine Hoyte, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoyte of Brookline, was married to Lester Watson, Harvard '10, also of Brookline. Rev. Dr. Ambrose W. Vernon, pastor of the Harvard Congregational Church, Brookline, officiated at the wedding, which was held at the home of the bride, No. 181 Tappan street. There were [illegible] sixty relatives and friends present [illegible] [illegible] a large number of friends of the family attended. Miss Katharine Stone was the maid of honor, while [illegible] Watson was best man. After the reception Mr. Watson with his bride left on a several weeks' wedding trip. On their return they will reside at No. [illegible] Braemore road, Brookline. The bridegroom is the son of Charles H. Watson, well known in Boston banking circles.

Mrs. Charles Steadman Hanks, and her daughter, Miss Clarina S. Hanks, the latter one of the Winter's debutantes, have gone South for a few weeks. Mrs. Hanks, who has been occupying the Beacon street residence of George von L. Meyer, has not decided upon her plans for the coming Summer.

Among the Boston people who sailed recently for the Mediterranean were Mrs. C. Howard Walker of No. 13 Walnut street and her daughter, Miss Katherine M. Walker, Mrs. F. H. Sleeper, Parker Taber, Mrs. C. C. Pond, Mrs. J. A. Cameron and Miss Bertha B. Morley.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence of Groton sailed this week for Cherbourg. From there they will journey to Paris and later to Rome, where they will remain over Easter. They will be in London during the coronation festivities.

FARR'S GRAY HAIR RESTORER

"Like Mother—Like Daughter."

Many a mother can stand comparison with her youthful grown up daughter in grace of figure and freshness of complexion. It's the tell-tale gray hairs that give the appearance of age.

And yet the hair is entirely under woman's control. She may neglect the first gray spears and allow it to grow gray and faded, or with very little effort and slight expense she may restore its natural youthful color and keep it soft and fluffy.

Farr's Gray Hair Restorer gradually gives gray hair the life and natural color that properly belong to it, not any color that is new to what you had but the actual original color. If your hair is streaked with different colors a very few applications of Farr's Gray Hair Restorer will impart a uniform and even color to every hair on your head. Sold under a positive guarantee that it is absolutely harmless. Its use cannot be detected. It is clear as water and pleasant to use. Once the hair has returned to its natural color it is a very simple matter to keep it that way. The hair can be washed, shampooed and curled as often as you wish and the color will not be affected in the least.

Danderine

Grows Hair and we can PROVE IT!

DANDERINE is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful. It at once imparts a sparkling brilliancy and velvety softness to the hair, and a few weeks' use will cause new hair to sprout all over the scalp. Use it every day for a short time, after which two or three times a week will be sufficient to complete whatever growth you desire.

A lady from St. Paul writes in substance, as follows:
"When I began using Danderine my hair would not come to my shoulders and now it is away below my hips."

Another from Newark, N. J.
"I have been using Danderine regularly. When I first started to use it I had very little hair, now I have the most beautiful long and thick hair anyone would want to have."

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

Danderine enjoys a greater sale than any other one preparation regardless of kind or brand, and it has a much greater sale than all of the other hair preparations in the world combined.

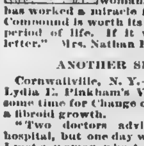
Cut This Out — Free To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this free coupon to the KNOWLTON DANDERINE CO. Chicago, Ill. with their name and address and 10c in silver or stamps to pay postage.

Woman's Danger Periods Made Safe

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Here is proof:



Natick, Mass., —"I cannot express what I went through during the Change of Life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold. I had creepy sensations and could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I had a tumor.

"I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it has worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this period of life. If it will help others you may publish this letter." Mrs. Nathan B. Greaton, 51 No. Main St., Natick, Mass.

ANOTHER SIMILAR CASE.

Cornwallville, N. Y.—"I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time for Change of Life, nervousness, and a fibroid growth.

"Two doctors advised me to go to the hospital, but one day while I was away visiting, I met a woman who told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and I know it helped me wonderfully. I am very thankful that I was told to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Wm. Boughton, Cornwallville, N. Y., Greene Co.

The makers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have thousands of such letters as those above—they tell the truth, else they could not have been obtained for love or money. This medicine is no stranger—it has stood the test for years.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

The testimonials which are constantly being published in the Pinkham advertisements are guaranteed to be absolutely genuine, honest, and given without reward in any way whatever.

St. Elizabeth Guild Doing Notable Work

IN the front rank of the Catholic charitable organizations of Boston stands the Guild of St. Elizabeth, which was founded in 1899 by the Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., for the purpose of carrying on benevolent work among the children of the South End district. The first neighborhood house was established at No. 57 East Springfield street. Two years later the guild secured a permanent location two [illegible] in the same [illegible]. Cambridge Catholic Union to Hold Ball

The annual ball of the Catholic Union of Cambridge will be held in the new St. Mary's Hall, Harvard and Prospect streets, Cambridge, on Wednesday evening, April 26.

Last year's banquet, when Archbishop O'Connell was the guest of the evening, was such a brilliant social event the directors felt it w[ould be a] difficult task to plan another which would surpass it, so they decided to have an Easter ball this year, instead of a banquet.

The committee of seventy members, residing in the various sections of Cambridge and nearby cities and towns, who have the arrangements for the ball under way, are working earnestly to make the affair one of the brilliant social functions of the season. President John W. Bradley is chairman of the committee and George F. Galvin secretary. Already nearly 500 tickets have been sold.

The order of exercises for the evening will be as follows: A concert program from 8 to 9. Then a grand march, starting at 9, in which Governor Foss and members of his staff, Mayor Fitzgerald, Mayor Brooks, Mayor-elect Barry and other leading personages will take part. Dancing will continue until 2 o'clock, with the exception of a slight intermission for a buffet lunch, which will be served in the gymnasium. The committee on transportation will provide ample car service to all points from midnight until the close of the ball.

The Catholic Union of Cambridge has been in existence for nearly nineteen years. It was founded in the Summer of 1892, and was made a chartered organization in 1894. The present officers are: John W. Bradley, president; M. Joseph O'Donnell, vice-president; Rev. M. J. Doody, P. R., chaplain; Edward W. Kennedy, secretary; William J. Cogan, financial secretary; Daniel J. McLean, treasurer. These and six others comprise the executive committee, which controls the business affairs. A board of five trustees has charge of the property.

The committees in charge of the Easter ball are as follows:

Hall—John W. Bradley, chairman, M. Joseph O'Donnell, William A. Wadden, John H. Brown, Edward P. Collier, P. F. Dealy, Dr. A. J. Do[illegible].

Printing—M. Joseph O'Donnell, chairman, Bernard A. Downey, John J. Sullivan, Edward W. Kennedy, John F. Dee, William F. Hopkins, John H. Glacken, Thomas C. King and Charles F. Duffy.

Mayo Men Honor St. Patrick's Memory

Friendship Hall was crowded on Sunday for the St. Patrick's Day celebration by the Mayo Men's Benevolent Association. Thomas F. Phelan gave an address on "St. Patrick and His Achievements." At the close Mr. Phelan was awarded a rising vote of thanks. In the social entertainment which followed Toastmaster P. H. Brogan referred with pleasure to the fact that this latest St. Patrick's Day had very little, if any, of the offensive caricatures of the Irish race which in past years were found so profitable by a certain class of vendors. The absurd stage Irishman has also disappeared, a fact which Mr. Brogan said was entirely due to the vigilance and energy of the Irish societies of Boston. Those who took part in the exercises of the meeting were: President Joseph M. Thornton, Secretary James J. McAndrew, Peter L. O'Toole, John Hastings, John Flynn, Cornelius Brown, M. J. Needham, Peter Barnicle, William Drungoole and John Murray of the Dublin Club, Organizer McNamee of the Central Council and Past President P. F. Hastings. The Mayo Club will have memorial services for its deceased members on April 19 in the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Miss Norah Barnicle, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, was present at the meeting and invited all to attend the ball on the evening of Patriots' Day.

Brighton Knights To Hold Dance

Easter Monday night is the date set for the dancing party of the Brighton Council, Knights of Columbus, at Verdi Hall. It will be the event of the season in the Brighton district. James F. Flaherty is at the head of the committee of arrangements. The council has a membership of 250 and is in a promising state of progress. During the week the first degree was exemplified by Edmund F. Keefe, G. K., George J. Farrell, D. G. K., James C. O'Brien and a large suite. The second degree was exemplified by P. G. K. Martin Ivory and James Coyle. There was a large representation of visiting councils.

Many Mourn Death Of Mrs. Lyons

The death of Mrs. Mary A. Lyons of No. 350 Sumner street, East Boston, has caused genuine sorrow throughout the district where she enjoyed a host of friends. Mrs. Lyons was a prominent member of Division No. 4 Auxiliary of the A. O. H. At a special meeting of the organization it was voted that it be represented in a body at the funeral services.

Boston College Wins Over Fordham.

All Boston College men are jubilant because of their debating victory over the men from Fordham University. The debate took place Thursday night in the presence of the greatest audience that has ever met in Boston College Hall. The question was a live one. It was "That the present method of electing United State Senators by State Legislatures is preferable to election by the people."

The Boston men were on the negative side. They were Cornelius A. Guiney, '11, of Boston, Thomas L. Gannon, '13, of Beachmont and David B. Waters, '11, of Newton, with Stephen H. Mahoney, '12, of Somerville as alternate.

The Fordham men were picked speakers from the St. John's Debating Society of the New York college. They were Vincent H. Isaacs, '11; Albert J. King, '12, and Maurice B. Ahearn, '12. Gerald O'Donoghue, '12, was the alternate.

Judge Michael J. Murray was chairman of the debate. The judges were James H. Vahey, B. U. '92; Dr. John T. Bottomley, Holy Cross, '89, and William T. A. Fitzgerald, B. U. '97.

Seville Council, Knights of Columbus of Brockton will hold a minstrel show in Canton Hall, May 15 and 16. Joseph E. Feeley is directing the chorus.

Fr. Daly Draws Many to St. Mark's

Each Wednesday evening since Lent began finds a large congregation gathered at St. Mark's Church, Dorchester, where the pastor, the Rev. Fr. Daly, is conducting a series of lectures on the practical side of the faith. Fr. Daly's subjects are delivered in a masterful manner, leaving no doubt in the mind of his hearers as to the personal application of the subject.

Santa Maria Council, Knights of Columbus, of Malden, is making arrangements for a mock trial to be held soon after Easter. The following committee has been appointed to arrange for the affair: C. J. Moynihan, J. J. Dillon, John D. Welsh, William Cronin, K. A. Kelly. The new rooms of the council in the Barrett building have been comfortably furnished.

Wakefield A. O. H. to Have Easter Ball.

On Easter Monday evening Division 26, A. O. H., of Wakefield, will hold its annual ball in the town hall. The feature will be the grand march, in which the members will wear the full regalia. President Patrick McLaughlin is chairman of the various committees.

• • •

Confirmation will be administered by Bishop Anderson on Tuesday to a large number of children at St. Rose Church, Chelsea.

Club and Social Notes

At a recent meeting of the North End Council, Knights of Columbus, it was voted to hold the annual whist and dancing party on the evening of April 25, at Roughan's Hall, Charlestown. An efficient committee has been appointed including James S. Kenneally, Frank P. Nolan, Joseph Laffey, John H. Cleary, Michael J. Gilligan, Michael J. Noonan, John O'Connell, Hugh MacMachin, Patrick J. McArdle, Timothy J. Murphy, John Ahearn.

St. Matthew's Men Open Retreat Today.

The men of St. Matthew's parish, Dorchester, will assemble this morning in the lower chapel of the new church on Stanton street for their annual retreat. The exercises will be begun at the 8 o'clock mass. They will be conducted by Redemptorist fathers, headed by the Rev. Father Donoghue, C. SS. R. The pastor of St. Matthew's, Rev. John A. Donnelly, will have the formal opening of the new church on Easter Sunday. But this will not be the dedication service. That will be held only when the upper church is finished. Meanwhile, the other parish masses will be continued in the wooden chapel on Norfolk street. The new church will seat nine hundred.

W. C. U. of Charlestown To Hold April Bazaar.

There is a marked activity among the members of the Women's Catholic Union of Charlestown, and each month a most interesting program is arranged for the entertainment of the members. The costume party held on Friday evening was a round of merriment and added another success to the long list. The members were grotesquely costumed, impersonating many well-known literary characters. An old fashioned supper was served and old time dances furnished a feature of great fun. Next Thursday evening the monthly Scripture class will be addressed by the spiritual director, the Rev. Thomas F. McCarthy. The various committees are being formed for the seventh annual bazaar, to be held on April 28 and 29.

CHARITY WHIST AIDS CONSUMPTIVES' HOME

Great activity prevails among the members of the East Boston Charity Club in finishing plans for the concert and whist party to be held in Meridian Hall Thursday evening. Through the year much assistance is given by this society to the Free Home for Consumptives. It is the wish of those interested in the home to see the spacious new building for the home formally opened early in the Summer. It was impossible to open it heretofore on account of the lack of funds. The building is fully equipped for the care of a large number of victims of consumption. The sunny exposure and hygienic surroundings will be effective in bringing about the cure of many victims if they are cared for in time. It is with this end in view that the loyal supporters of the home are making a strong plea to their many friends for assistance in this most worthy cause. Through the efforts of the club this year the sum of $700 has been forwarded to the home. It is the desire of the members to reach the thousand dollar mark before the season closes.

The officers of the club are: Miss Annie M. Mland, president; Mrs. William J. [illegible], vice-president; Miss Louise A. Golden, recording secretary; Miss Mary McCloskey, corresponding secretary; Miss Alice H. Flynn, treasurer.

The membership of the club includes:

Mrs. A. J. Bulger	Mrs. W. H. Grainger
Mrs. John J. Corrigan	Mrs. W. F. McClellan
Mrs. Jacob Cronk	Mrs. Michael J. Connelly
Mrs. John Carey	Mrs. Frank Cunningham
Mrs. J. E. Fitzgerald	Mrs. John J. Longhead
Mrs. Frank A. Goodwin	Mrs. John J. Finn
Mrs. Henry L. Plummer	Mrs. S. J. Hallahan
Mrs. T. G. McEnaney	Miss Agnes Hart
Mrs. Helen E. Haggerty	Miss Katherine Hickey
Mrs. Maurice Leahy	Miss Agnes O'Neil
Mrs. Mary A. Lannery	Miss Ellen Howard
Mrs. J. P. McCusker	Miss Mary Fulham
Mrs. T. J. Morrissey	Miss Elizabeth Norton

The Rev. Maurice F. Flynn, spiritual director of St. Patrick's Total Abstinence Society, Roxbury, will address the members of Company A of the C. T. A. U. Regiment at No. 431 Dudley street, next Thursday evening. An entertainment will follow the lecture. The members of the society will attend the 7:30 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's Church this morning and receive holy communion in a body. Breakfast will be served in the rooms of the society after the mass.

Revere Council Prepares for Ball.

The members of Revere Council, Knights of Columbus, announce a ball for the evening of April 26, to be held in Revere Town Hall. A large committee has been appointed by Grand Knight Patrick J. Murray. It includes H. T. Wall, Charles W. Bruen, Denis J. Murphy, James J. Teevans, David C. Landry, G. W. Wallace, John J. Hayes, William S. Hayes, Thomas J. Phair, John T. Sweeney. Revere Council is one of the most active in the State and the announcement of its ball always creates much interest.

North End Society To Attend Retreat.

The members of St. Mary's Catholic Association, North End, will attend a retreat during the three last days of Passion Week, receiving communion in a body on the morning of Palm Sunday. After mass they will repair to St. Mary's Hall where breakfast will be served. During the past week there was a formal opening of the Association Reading Room for the benefit of the members. Here they will have the privilege of spending their leisure evenings reading the current periodicals. The association is composed of some of Boston's most representative residents who, at one time, have belonged to the North End district. Mrs. Mary A. Lynch, one of the most active workers, is head of the committee to arrange for the communion breakfast. She will be assisted by Miss Margaret McElaney and Miss Annie Garrity. The officers of the association are: John J. Flynn, president; Miss Margaret McElaney, vice-president; James Devlin, recording secretary; Mrs. Mary A. Lynch, financial secretary; Daniel Harkins, treasurer.

Saugus Parish Has Handsome Church.

Since the erection of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, Saugus, some twelve years ago, the population of the parish has gained steadily. The parish was for many years a mission of the Sacred Heart Church of West Lynn, but since the death of the Rev. Dennis F. Sullivan the Saugus congregation has been under the pastorate of the Rev. Father Holland of Maplewood. The recently erected stone church, replacing the former building, which was destroyed by fire, is an imposing parish edifice. Throughout the town a spirit of hearty co-operation exists between the members of the various churches, and the announcement of a social affair meets with a ready response from members of all denominations.

Retiring G. K. Gets Valuable Gift.

Dr. George A. Sullivan of South Boston, past grand knight of Pere Marquette Council of the Knights of Columbus, was recently presented with a set of the Catholic Encyclopedia as an expression of the appreciation and esteem of his brother knights. The presentation ceremony was presided over by Grand Knight Edward Muldoon, who made a graceful address in which he reviewed the excellent record of Dr. Sullivan's term of office. Remarks of a similar nature were made by the Rev. M. C. Gilbride of St. Augustine's, the chaplain of the council, and by District Deputy Edward Sullivan.

New Church Fund Helped by Players

A goodly sum was realized for the new St. Patrick's Church building fund at the charity whist conducted by the Tuesday Catholic Club of Brockton, when more than 150 were present in K. of C. Hall. The decorations were elaborate, green and white being effectively used. Thirty tables were in play in charge of Mrs. P. F. Lynch, Mrs. Christopher Mackedon, Mrs. Joseph Webber, Mrs. M. F. Twomey, Mrs. D. M. Foley, Miss Isa Wilde, Miss Sarah Lynch and Mrs. Josephine Harrington. The souvenirs were given by Miss Katherine L. Barry, Miss Alice Barry, Mrs. Charles L. Barry, Mrs. M. F. Twomey, Mrs. J. E. Feeley and Miss Isa Wilde. Those who won prizes were M. F. Twomey, Thomas Dholan, Miss Nellie Gilligan, Mrs. John M. Nolan, Mrs. James O'Hayre and Miss Lucy Kenney of Abington.

St. William's Whists Won Rich Results

The weekly matinee whist in aid of St. William's parish was held on Wednesday afternoon at the Dorchester Club. On Tuesday afternoon the last of the Winter whist will be held at the Columbus Club. The parties have been most successful during the season. They have furnished pleasant social diversions and added a good sum to the parish treasury. Mrs. T. Edward Sheehan was the hostess throughout the series. She was assisted each week by matrons from various sections of the parish. Mrs. Sheehan announces a whist and dancing party to be held at Whiton Hall on the evening of April 21. The committees are already being formed and will include the prominent members of the parish.

Brockton Guild Has Whist Party.

The members of St. Margaret's Guild of Brockton held a whist and forty five party in Mystic Hall at which whist was played at forty tables. The first prize went to Miss Eileen Callahan and Donald Simpson and the second to Miss May Papineau and Will Owens. Mrs. Hannah Burke and Charles A. Kelley were the winners at forty five. The seventeenth annual ball of Everett Council, Knights of Columbus, will be held on April 17, Easter Monday night, in Whittier Hall, Everett square. No expense is being spared to make the affair the best in the history of the council. Tickets are now on sale and can be secured from members or by addressing George H. Jacobson, chairman of the ball committee.

Boston C. T. A. U. To Meet in Malden

The thirty fourth annual convention of the Boston Catholic Total Abstinence Union will be held on Patriots' Day, April 19, in St. Mary's School Hall, Malden. Since the last convention the union, which is made up of forty five subordinate societies, has added 700 to its membership roll, making a total of 5,500 total abstainers affiliated with the organization.

The convention will be opened with a solemn high mass in St. Mary's Church. The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Michael J. O'Connor of St. James' Church, Boston, who is spiritual director of the union.

Following the mass the delegates will adjourn to St. Mary's Hall, where the convention will be opened by President Juan T. Shea of the Father Mathew Society of East Cambridge. After committees have been appointed and badges distributed, dinner will be provided by the St. Mary's Society, under whose auspices the convention will be held.

After the dinner the convention will listen to reports of the officers and delegates to the annual convention of the national union held in Boston last August. The principal business of the convention will be the election of officers. It is understood that there are a number of candidates in the field for the various places at the disposal of the delegates. The convention will include several hundred delegates, many of them women. With the strong array of temperance workers present it is expected that a great impetus will be given to the movement by those who address the convention.

Annual Retreat for East Boston Men

The annual retreat of the East Boston Catholic Literary Association will be opened this evening in the Sacred Heart Church, of which Rev. James H. O'Neil, LL. D., is pastor. The exercises will be continued until next Sunday when the retreat will conclude with a general communion at the 8 o'clock mass. All East Boston men are invited. Irving J. Heath of the association has made preparations for a large attendance. The priest who will conduct the retreat is the Rev. Patrick L. Mulhall, C. SS. R., who is one of the ablest preachers in the Redemptorist order. The musical program for the week will be rendered by William H. O'Brien, Virginia Capeloni and Francis J. GRADUATES TO RECALL OLD DAYS IN SCHOOL

On the invitation of the Right Rev. Monsignor Patterson, the past pupils and graduates of SS. Peter and Paul's School, South Boston, met on Monday evening at St. Joseph's Hall. There was a large attendance.

The meeting was called to order by Monsignor Patterson, who laid before the assemblage his plans for organizing a school alumni association. For fifty years, he said, the school had been sending forth its boys and girls who are now scattered to the many points of Greater Boston. The association will mean the banding together of many hundreds of prominent Catholic men and women of the diocese, the revival of early memories and the promotion of social intercourse.

First steps towards forming the alumni were taken by the election of officers. Monsignor Patterson was chosen honorary president by acclamation. Charles Crowley was elected president; Miss Sarah Kane, vice-president; Mr. Joseph V. Kenney, recording secretary; William Harrington, treasurer; Miss Alice Casey, financial secretary.

The membership of the board of directors is under advisement and will be announced at the next meeting. The association is open to all the graduates. Application cards may be had from the secretary or from the honorary president. The membership fee is one dollar per year. The following applications were filed at the opening meeting:

NEWS GLEANED FROM LOCAL LABOR WORLD

With six candidates running for the two offices of business agent of the recently organized Boston Painters' District Council, and three for the day secretaryship, the referendum vote ordered among the four unions comprising the council has developed into a hot but good-natured contest for the three positions. The candidates for the two business agencies are John A. Buckley, J. A. Budrot, John T. Cashman, W. F. McCarthy and E. F. Moorhouse of Painters' Union No. 11, and John F. Welch of Sign Writers' Union No. 201. Buckley and Welch are the business agents of their respective locals at the present time. Edward A. Fitzgerald, now serving as day secretary for Local No. 11, has been nominated for the secretaryship of the council, his opponents being John J. Lynch of the Sign Writers' Union and Fred Lightbody of the East Boston union. There are 3,000 members in the four unions, and the result of the referendum will not be known for several days.

Under the Sunday schedule adopted by the Milk Wagon Drivers' Union the weekly meetings of the organization will be held at Monument Hall, Charlestown, every Thursday afternoon until further notice. A rapid increase in the local's membership is reported by Thomas J. Minahan, its business agent.

* * *

After the expiration of this month the reinstatement fee of Machinists' Union No. 264 will be raised from $3 to $7.50, with still further increase anticipated in the near future, provided the "dead wood" members don't square their accounts with the union in the meantime.

* * *

Following its meeting at Wells Memorial Building to-morrow evening, Boston Longshoremen's Protective Union will meet at the same place on the first and third Wednesdays of each month, instead of every Monday evening, as has been the custom during the Winter.

* * *

The Ladies' Garment Cutters' Union has voted to hold a May party in Odd Fellows' Hall on Friday evening, May 5, to assist in the building up of the union's sick and death benefit fund. The entire net receipts of the party will be placed in this fund.

J. A. Murray of St. Louis, international president of the Bridge and Structural Iron and Asphalt Workers' Union, will be present and address Boston Local No. 50 at a special meeting called for that purpose to-day.

GIRLS TO BE INDEPENDENT.

To Learn Trades and Forget Man Exists.

WORCESTER, March 25.—The girls of this city are having dreams of riches showered down upon them and of self-supporting independence to such a degree that they can tell the bachelor to "go hang," for with the beginning of September a trade school will be instituted where they can learn the scientific and financial parts of power-machine sewing, millinery, dress making and other vocations in which women shine. There may also be a course in domestic science, but those who become students in that course will have it distinctly understood that they are doing it only as a means of gaining a livelihood, not the man they want to learn to feed and care for scientifically.

The board of trustees of the Worcester Trade School have voted that such a school shall be established in September, and committees have been appointed to have plans drawn up.

WORCESTER TO CELEBRATE.

Opening of Station to Be a Gala Event.

WORCESTER, March 25.—It is probable that when the trains on the Boston & Albany run through the new union station in this city for the first time there will be a celebration by the merchants. It has been given out by engineers engaged in the construction of the building that trains will run through on Sunday, May 14, and the engineers and merchants are endeavoring to arouse popular interest in a celebration that shall outdo anything seen here before.

The plan is that the new station will be connected in the early morning hours of Sunday, May 14, and if expected that the trains will give unusually low rates to surrounding towns, so that the celebration may be participated in by all from the surrounding district.

100 BIRTHDAY CANDLES.

Stamford Woman Celebrates Anniversary in Lively Fashion.

STAMFORD, March 25.—Mrs. Moses Hart of this city a few days ago entertained some of her relatives and friends at her century birthday anniversary, cutting a high cake on which flashed an even hundred candles and telling stories with the zest of a girl. Five generations aided the centenarian to celebrate, all of her six surviving children being present.

Mrs. Hart was born in New York on a farm 100 years ago and is now Fortieth street. Her husband was a shipbuilder at Northport, L. I., but died 25 years ago. Until two years ago Mrs. Hart was as spry as any member of her family, but a fall has rendered her rather feeble, though not impairing her faculties.

CONCERT FOR CHARITY.

Franklin Square House to Have a Benefit Tuesday Evening.

The annual concert to aid the Craft Hospital Association in raising funds for the hospital department of the Franklin Square House will be held at the house on Tuesday evening. Among the entertainers will be Miss Lilith Lang, organist, Vernon A. Eleet, reader, and Miss M. Davison, stereopticon lecturer. The latter will show the evolution of a music manuscript or pictures of processes and tools employed in producing a copy of sheet music. Miss Florence Page Kimball will sing Indian songs composed by Charles Wakefield Cadman.

MUTT AND JEFF ON THE GO.

Will Do the Honors at Show of South End Club.

Mutt and Jeff are going to help make things merry at the third annual show of the Chicatawbut Club of the South End, in Union Hall, Boylston street, March 31. The profits go towards a camp fund. The characters of Mutt and Jeff will be handled by Daniel J. Feudel and Jacob Greenberg. Others in the cast are David Bank, Edward Fleming, Philip Franklin, William Fleming, Philip Feldman and Miss Marie Morey.

Lectures on Holland.

At the meeting of the Dorchester Social Club of Women Miss Minnie Elliott Towne gave her illustrated lecture on "Quaint Nooks in Holland," being an account of her own journeyings in that country. At the next meeting, April 3, the Choral Class will furnish the entertainment. The class has been preparing for the event for some weeks under the supervision of Mrs. Minnie Scott Gould, musical director of the club. Mrs. A. M. Cook, chairman of the music committee, is chairman of the entertainment.

Veterans to Celebrate.

Captain J. W. Rose, president of the Charlestown Veteran Association, is making the arrangements for survivors to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their departure with the City Guard from Bunker Hill for Faneuil Hall in the war-time days of 1861. The anniversary date is April 19.

Social Set Attracted by Briggs Ball

A SPRING event of much interest to Boston society will be the dance given by Dr. and Mrs. Edward C. Briggs of Old Orchard road, Chestnut Hill, at the Country Club, Friday evening, April 28. Miss Dorothy Briggs, a great favorite in her set, is the daughter, and Templeton Briggs the son of the host and hostess.

* * *

Miss Helen Sears will be the maid of honor at the wedding of Miss Katherine Lee Bayard Warren to John E. Thayer Jr., in the Arlington Street Church, April 6, at noon. Her bridesmaids will be Mr. Thayer's sisters, the Misses Nora Evelyn and Natalie Thayer, her one sister, Miss Sylvia Warren, Miss Margaret Thomas and Miss Christine Hunnewell. Roger Amory of Harvard '10, will officiate as best man. The ushers who were in Mr. Thayer's class are Henry Sargent Appleton and Raymond Belmont of New York. Thomas S. Rimmer of Providence, John H. Chapin, John West Saltonstall, Gilbert Mather of Philadelphia, and George A. Parker of Lancaster. Other ushers chosen are George Bemis, Harvard '09; Philip Perkins Hommes, Harvard '09, and Bayard Warren.

The fifth and last promenade concert to be given by the First Corps Cadets was held in their armory on Columbus avenue, Friday night. A special musical program was provided, the Cadet Band rendering a concert from 8.30 until 9 o'clock. They also played the music for dancing until midnight. There was a delightful supper from the Second Corps, whose headquarters are in Salem. The following committee had charge: Lieutenant E. H. Bruce, chairman; Lieutenant C. F. Bunton, treasurer; Private W. J. Battersby, secretary; Sergeant F. M. Brush, Sergeant G. H. Farwell, Private D. B. Kenniston, Sergeant R. S. Luther, Private R. H. Conant, Sergeant B. Knapp and Sergeant E. Field.

The ball with Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Sargent of No. 207 Commonwealth avenue are patrons to give their niece, Miss Aimee Lamb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horatio Lamb of No. 120 Beacon street, at the Hotel Somerset next Winter, promises to be one of the most brilliant and exclusive of the season. A dancing class was formed for her and also was Miss Alice Belch., Mrs. Sargent, who has the reputation of being one of the most brilliant women in the Back Bay, is a leader of the assembly balls, and is always a patroness at these functions.

* * *

The postmaster of Groton has been wondering of late what made the mail bags so full of letters. The reason was obvious. Hundreds of congratulations have been pouring into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Richards, Jr., since the birth of their first son. Both the boy and his mother are doing well. The baby has been named Henry Richards, 3d, and is the first born child of Mr. and Mrs. J. Randolph Coolidge, Jr., of Brookline. The wedding took place at King's Chapel last June.

* * *

Mrs. S. D. Warren of Matunuck will spend the Summer in Europe with a short stay after the marriage of her daughter, Miss Charline Lee Bayard Warren to John E. Thayer Jr., in Arlington Street Church, April 6. During Mrs. Warren's absence her house will be opened by Mr. and Mrs. John L. Batchelder and their daughter, the Misses Sohier and Rosamond Batchelder. Last year Mr. and Mrs. Batchelder took their daughters abroad.

The garden grill at Palm Beach, seems to be the most popular spot in that resort this season. Luncheons are being held daily and during the afternoon scarcely a table can be obtained. Among those who have given luncheons recently are Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Ames and Governor Foss. Among the recent arrivals at the Breakers are Mrs. J. Way and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Mitchell of Boston and Mr. and Mrs. John Mitchell of Cambridge.

It is safe to say that the number of buds found on the society tree of Boston is exceptionally large this year. First now there is considerable talk about the debutantes of next year, but thus far they are much less than those of the season just passed. At present there are but seventeen of any prominence, including Miss Weld, Miss Saltonstall and Miss Bigelow on the list.

Moonlight rides and saddle picnics are diversions which everybody seems to be enjoying at Pinehurst, N. C. Among those who are indulging in this pastime are Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lawrence and Miss Margaret Brooks of Cambridge, Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Osgood and their daughter, Miss Katherine Osgood of Salem.

* * *

An attractive entertainment will be given in Chickering Hall to-morrow night when Mrs. Tippett will sing in costume American songs of fifty years ago. Miss Florence Page Kimball will give a Japanese romance, also in costume. There will be several other features.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Cochrane and their son, A. L. Cochrane, who are abroad will spend much of their time motoring. They have their car and chauffeur with them. On the same steamer with them was Mrs. Frederic Tudor, who was aboard last year as well.

Mrs. Julian Codman of Brookline has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Frothingham at their home, Overlea, Lenox.

For the Woman That's Fat.

A Detroit physician says that the cheapest and safest mixture a fat woman who wants to get thin can use is ½ ounce Marmola (get it in the original ½-ounce packages), ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 3½ ounces Peppermint Water. The proper amount to take is a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime.

These ingredients may be obtained from any druggist at small cost, and make a combination that is not only excellent as a fat reducer, being able, it is claimed, to take off a pound a day without causing wrinkles, but is also a splendid help to the system as a whole, regulating the stomach and bowels where the fat person often has been helped, and clearing the skin of pimples and blotches. No exercise is required to help the remedy in its work, and best of all, no dieting is necessary while taking it —you can eat what you like.

W.B. Reduso CORSETS

Are famous as beautifiers of large figures. They give the overdeveloped and matronly figure the lines of youth, with the effect of slenderness.

Not only this, but an actual reduction of one to five inches is secured in the measurements of hips and abdomen. This flattening of the abdomen is accomplished through the scientific arrangement of the gores, without straps, bands or attachments of any sort.

The lines of the REDUSO are always those of Fashion's latest command.

Different REDUSO styles are made to accommodate the requirements of short, medium and tall, stout figures.

Only staunch fabrics, dainty trimmings and good, firm, non-rustable boning are used in W. B. REDUSO.

Every large figure will achieve marked improvement by wearing one of the attractive REDUSO models.

REDUSO, Style No. 782 (as pictured.) Medium high bust—exceptionally long overback, hips and abdomen. New shaping of the gores and slash construction over groin insure perfect comfort. Exceptional quality coutil, wide lace and ribbon finish. Three pairs of supporters. Sizes 19 to 36. Price, $5.00

REDUSO, Style 781. For short, large figures. Low bust and low under arms. Long over hips, back and abdomen. Firm, durable coutil, lace trimmed. Three pairs supporters. Sizes 19 to 36. Price, $3.00

REDUSO, Style 770. For average large figures. Medium high bust, long over hips and abdomen. Durable, coutil or batiste. Lace and ribbon trimming. Three pairs supporters. Sizes 19 to 36. Price, $3.00

REDUSO, Style 776. For tall, well-developed figures. High bust and extra long over hips and back. General construction, trim and material similar to Style 770. Three pairs hose supporters. Sizes 19 to 36. Price, $3.00

Other Reduso models upwards to $10.00

W. B. Reduso, W. B. Nuform, W. B. Formu and W. B. Abdominal Steel Models can be obtained at any Corset Department.

In the case of "The Commuters," which is easily proving itself the most pronounced laughing hit of the season, and there was hardly a moment during the two performances under observation when the audiences were quiet, the Inventory showed exactly 447 laughs during the matinee and 453 in the evening. Giggles and titters were not counted, as it was found impossible to keep track of them.

The investigation of "The Commuters" reduced to acts, was as follows:

MATINEE.

Act I—	26 minutes	91 laughs
Act II—	34 minutes	156 laughs
Act III—	38 minutes	125 laughs
Act IV—	18 minutes	75 laughs
	110 minutes	447 laughs

EVENING.

Act I—	26 minutes	91 laughs
Act II—	35 minutes	151 laughs
Act III—	38 minutes	186 laughs
Act IV—	13 minutes	75 laughs
	112 minutes	453 laughs

In the face of such figures it is plain that the "play with 1,000 laughs" is still out of reach.

THE Shuberts are running a great deal of hoge on the new Fritzi Scheff opera, "Mlle. Rosita," which will reach town to-morrow night after a week's delay. You might call Miss Scheff a superstitious if you felt inclined to do so, for "Mlle. Rosita" is a title that she agreed ought to carry her through to splendid success. Originally called "The Rose Shop," the name of the play was changed to suit Miss Scheff's ideas on the subject, for it appears she has a distinct liking for the word "Mademoiselle," which, she declares, will bring good fortune to her new offering. "Mlle. Rosita" is by Victor Herbert and Joseph Howard, and is both modern and musical, if you can believe reports.

MR. WRIGHT LORIMER, over his own signature, confesses that he is the unhappiest man on the road to theatrical fame. He wired the news to Klaw and Erlanger after William A. Brady had suddenly closed "The Shepherd King" in Syracuse a week ago. There seems to be an interesting difference of opinion between Mr. Lorimer and Mr. Brady over the causes leading up to the discouraging event. Mr. Brady says Lorimer is too ill to play, and Lorimer says he never felt better in his life.

Somebody is telling wrong stories.

CHARLES FROHMAN is mixing it up boldly with the coming coronation ceremonies that will put the final touches on King George as a regular, honest-to-goodness ruler. Mr. Frohman is a member of the committee that is arranging a special theatrical production as a kind of side show to the coronation, and as a special tribute to the American drama John Drew and William Gillette have been invited to run over and represent the United States on the acting side of the carnival. A revival of "Money" has been decided upon as the offering with which the coronation will be specially honored.

It is probable that Mr. Gillette will grasp the opportunity to appear before London audiences, but Mr. Drew declined the honor, giving as a reason that he will be busy with "Smith" in the West and cannot get away.

Of course, Mr. Frohman, being Mr. Drew's manager, forwarded the invitation with no knowledge that Mr. Drew would be beyond the reach of the coronation.

THE Majestic Theatre will again become chief headquarters for intense emotion. Mrs. Leslie Carter will to-morrow bring "Two Women" to the house that for ten weeks was bathed in the tears of "Madame X." Mrs. Carter's play, it is said, serves that energetic actress faithfully and gives her all the necessary elbow room for the high dramatic flights her vigorous nature demands.

* * * * * * *

WITH the coming of Frank Daniels to the Colonial to-morrow in "The Girl in the Train," theatregoers may look forward to a new curtain speech—that part of Mr. Daniels's entertainment which always wins an audience, regardless of anything his play may accomplish in that direction. Mr. Daniels has many times thrust it to the front, a new speech, but when put to the test he has never failed to fall back upon the "Confidential Tête-à-tête," which has been long and [illegible] him.

IT is a sad commentary on the high cost of living that the price of lobsters should advance just as two big musical plays with more than a hundred hungry girls appear at the city's gate. There is bitterness and consternation in the ranks of the rah-rahs.

JOHN CRAIG is doing his full share in making the preservation of the Louisa M. Alcott house in Concord possible. The special morning matinee of "Arms and the Man" at the Castle Square Theatre next Tuesday deserves a generous response, for it will not only impose an unusual and tiring hardship on Mr. Craig's company, but will draw heavily upon Mr. Craig in the matter of expense.

Majestic Theatre.

Mrs. Leslie Carter will begin her engagement of two weeks at the Majestic Theatre to-morrow night in her new play "Two Women," which proved such a popular success during the two weeks of Mrs. Carter's last engagement.

[illegible] will be supported by a more [illegible] and his Tom Finny Fiske will be respon[illegible] in a comedy entitled "The New School Girl," which is one long succession of laughs. Marshall Montgomery, the recently acclaimed [illegible] Mr. Thomas E. Shea at the Grand Opera House has been extended to a third week. With matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, Mr. Shea will present "The Bells," the powerful drama founded upon the career of the late Henry Irving. Next week will be seen in [illegible] Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Shubert Theatre.

It is seldom that Boston is selected as the site for the premier of anything so theatrically brilliant as Fritzi Scheff in a new comic opera and the first production on any stage of "Mlle. Rosita" at the Shubert Theatre to-morrow night may, therefore, be looked upon as something of unusual interest and importance.

The Shubert establishment under whose direction Mme. Scheff is starring this season, have been singularly reticent in regard to the new comic opera. This much is known, however, the story is modern and the scenes are all laid in present day Paris. The scene of the first act is the flower shop of Aristide Bontonnière, whose daughter, Rosita, is the character played by Fritzi Scheff.

The company surrounding Mme. Scheff includes Walter Jones, Emma Janvier, Olga Rock, Eugene O'Brien, Joseph Herbert, George Graham, C. Morton Horne, E. de Varny, Sidney Taylor and James Norval.

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

The feature of the [illegible] B. F. Keith's [illegible] next week will be Valerie Bergere, [illegible] greatest favorites in [illegible] Miss Bergere will [illegible] a more luxurious [illegible] Clarence Wilmot and his Two Kinds. Frank will be responsible for a comedy entitled "The New School Girl," which is one long succession of laughs. Marshall Montgomery, the recently acclaimed [illegible] Mr. Thomas E. Shea at the Grand Opera House has been extended to a third week. With matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, Mr. Shea will present "The Bells," the powerful drama founded upon the career of the late Henry Irving. Next week will be seen in [illegible] Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Boston Theatre.

The fourth and last week of the highly successful engagement of "Naughty Marietta," with Mlle. Trentini, the fun-making prima donna, and Orville Harrold, the fine tenor, begun at the Boston Theatre to-morrow night, will be the most memorable of musical interest and importance.

The Shubert establishment under whose direction Mme. Scheff is starring this season, have been singularly reticent in regard to the new comic opera. This much is known, however, the story is modern and the scenes are all laid in present day Paris. The scene of the first act is the flower shop of Aristide Bontonnière, whose daughter, Rosita, is the character played by Fritzi Scheff.

The company surrounding Mme. Scheff includes Walter Jones, Emma Janvier, Olga Rock, Eugene O'Brien, Joseph Herbert, George Graham, C. Morton Horne, E. de Varny, Sidney Taylor and James Norval.

Grand Opera House.

As a result of an unprecedented demand for "The Bells," the special engagement of Mr. Thomas E. Shea at the Grand Opera House has been extended to a third week. With matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, Mr. Shea will present "The Bells," the powerful drama founded upon the career of the late Henry Irving. Next week will be seen in [illegible] Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Globe Theatre.

"The Girl from Rector's" will come to the Globe Theatre to-morrow. Paul M. Potter is the author of the play and declares it to be the first real play that has been published with plays of a certain nature, he has been very careful to see that the characters are as natural as possible. The most prominent [illegible] of the play to be judged from [illegible] fact that its earning capacity at Wilson's Theatre in New York was many times greater than that of the same house when the Weber and Fields' offerings there were the sole topic of New York's theatregoing public.

Colonial Theatre.

Frank Daniels will return to the city to-morrow as the star of "The Girl in the Train," which will play at the Colonial theatre for a limited engagement. Mr. Daniels will be seen in an entirely [illegible] role and is said to [illegible] the ability of [illegible] there will be a big chorus of [illegible] Fisher and Vera Michelena, who will be much to help the musical end of the piece to success.

Orpheum.

The new programme at the Orpheum [illegible] to-morrow will contain many vaude[illegible] novelties that have never been seen in Boston. The pictures exhibit, too, will be new and encouraging. Since the Orpheum passed into the hands of Marcus Loew good [illegible] has been its companion.

Park Theatre.

"The Commuters" will enter upon [illegible] other week at the Park theatre to-morrow. The real jollity of James Forbes' comedy is being eagerly grasped by Boston, a great army of commuters and there is every prospect that the coming week will show the same intense interest in the merry play that has been the rule since its first appearance here.

Tremont Theatre.

The final week of "Green Stockings" at the Tremont theatre will begin to-morrow evening, when Margaret Anglin will face another friendly Boston audience. In this play Miss Anglin gives ample proof that she is as much at home in comedy as in tear stained roles.

Columbia Theatre.

Headed by Joseph K. Watson, "The Lady Buccaneers" come to the Columbia Theatre to-morrow, presenting a [illegible] burlesque entitled "Down in Dixie." [illegible] show girls, clever comedians and one of the biggest sensations of the season, Senor Arrieta's [illegible] living picture.

Gaiety Theatre.

[illegible] will be much that is merry at the Gaiety Theatre to-morrow, for "The Parisian Widows" will drop in for a week just to show how twenty girls can make lively entertainment. The company is one of the best on the burlesque circuit and has much to commend it.

PLEASANT WEATHER TO HELP REALTY SALES

Large Volume of Properties Change Hands in the Past Few Days.

MARKET NOW VERY ACTIVE

Increase in Transactions Expected to Result in Busy Season in Greater Boston.

By FRANK A. LAVELLE.

ALTHOUGH the cold and unseasonable weather of the past couple of days put a damper on some of the deals that were [illegible] to go to record, the week closed [illegible] market with a record of a good volume of sales recorded. Few sales [illegible] of large valuation went to record yesterday, but the aggregate of the week's business reached a good total.

The market is now quite active and all that is needed to give it the right stimulus is pleasant weather. All sections of the city and suburbs are showing up well in the report of sales and the increases noted in sales in these various sections is expected to result in the start of a very busy Spring season within a [illegible] of weeks.

Among the sales reported yesterday was [illegible] square feet of [illegible] on Huntington avenue [illegible] streets [illegible] Realty [illegible] Associates. This property is taxed for $40,000.

Leases have been made covering the first [illegible] ing at No. [illegible] street from the Fred A. Loud Company, which removed to the new [illegible] erected for it at Cambridge to Alexander T. [illegible] who will [illegible] and occupy as an automobile sales [illegible].

A [illegible] high stoop brick [illegible] twelve rooms together with a [illegible] of land containing 1,900 square feet, on East Brookline street, all assessed on a valuation of $5,800, has been sold for Gorham Rogers to M. E. Cox. Edward T. Harrington Company were the brokers.

Codman & Street, Easton Building, report the sale for Robert A. Ware of his four-story brick dwelling, at No. 74 Mt. Vernon street, Beacon Hill, to Miss Rosamond Lamb, who will occupy. The rating is $16,000, of which $10,000 is on the 1,807 square feet of land.

The Assembly tea room has taken a lease of the basement, first and second floors at Nos. 280 to 282 Boylston street, Back Bay, for a term of ten years and will make extensive alterations and occupy. Codman & Street were the brokers.

Sales by the Edward T. Harrington Company.

WINCHESTER—Jere A. Downs of Hayden, Stone & Co. has purchased on Myopia Hill, [illegible] square feet of land, having 1,200 feet frontage on Cambridge and Arlington streets. It is located opposite the Country Club, adjoining the estate of Samuel J. Elder and overlooking Mystic Lake. This is one of the finest [illegible] in the [illegible] town. The grantors were Congressman [illegible] and George A. Fernald. [illegible]

[illegible] together with 900 square feet of land, all assessed on a valuation of [illegible]. The Abington Savings Bank was the grantor.

WINTHROP—Dr. George A. Black has sold his two-family house of fourteen rooms in Court Park. The lot contains 8,200 square feet of land. The purchaser, M. H. Reed of Winthrop, buys for a home, and will occupy about May 1.

CONCORD RIVER PARK—Among the sales reported are the following: Andrew J. W[illegible] purchased lot 1, at the corner of Pollard street and Riverview avenue, containing 4,700 square feet, also the adjoining lot [illegible] square feet [illegible] lot 15, on Pollard street [illegible] to Harold Waters, lots 61 and 62 on Pollard street, with a combined area of [illegible] square feet [illegible] lot 17, on Pollard street [illegible] the adjoining lot containing 3,800 square feet, to Mary A. There are about twenty-five acres of land, sixteen-room frame house and numerous stable and other outbuildings, all valued at $5,000. The new owner will occupy.

WOULD ALLOW OWNERS TO JOIN EXCHANGES

Such Membership Presents Advantages to Both Broker and Client, It Is Claimed.

That property owners should be eligible to join a real estate exchange as associate members, such as is now allowed in this city by the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, is urged by the National Real Estate Journal. Regarding the relations the property owner bears to the real estate broker it says:

"There is no reason why the large property owner should not become an associate member of the real estate board of his home city. He is the man who is vitally interested in the work that such organizations are doing and should become actively identified with the men who are devoting their best efforts to building up the municipality and thus enhancing the value of his property.

"Every active real estate board is constantly working to improve local conditions and make real estate a profitable investment. All property owners are interested in safeguarding their holdings and in no way can they do so more effectually than by co-operating with the members of their local real estate exchange.

"From the standpoint of the exchange such membership is desirable since it identifies large property interests with the organization and enables it to exert a more powerful influence on municipal and State legislation. The real estate board that goes before its local council or State Legislature backed by a strong associate membership of real estate owners is in a position to demand the kind of legislation that it requires.

"There are also many other advantages which cannot fail to result from the close association of real estate agents and their clients. It will enable the property owner to appreciate the character of men who compose the real estate boards of the country and will educate him to deal only with brokers who are identified with such an organization."

MRS. EVANS TO MOVE.

Former Summer Home of President Taft to Go to Marblehead.

Gardner H. Hathaway, real estate broker of Marblehead, reports the signing of an agreement for the sale of an acre and a half of land at Peach's Point, owned by R. H. Crowninshield, to Mrs. R. D. Evans of Beverly. Mrs. Evans is to move her house, formerly occupied by President Taft, to this site at Marblehead. Peach's Point is one of the most exclusive Summer colonies at Marblehead.

He reports the sale of three and a half acres of land in the same location to Arthur H. Marks, vice-president of the Diamond Rubber Company of Akron, O.; also the signing of an agreement for the sale of 23,875 square feet of land at Devereux to Mr. Charles H. Nichols, who is to build for his own occupancy.

BRICK HOMES PRETTY AND SUBSTANTIAL

In Construction and Style They Are Suited to All Kinds of Landscape.

In an article on "the value of the brick house in permanent architecture" in the Craftsman, the writer says: "To-day we are once more thinking about our homes, about the beauty of them, of the value of permanence, of their relation to the kind of life we are [illegible] about the effect they will have upon our sons and daughters as they grow up to be real American men and women. The result is, as we have already said, that we are turning toward the country for the life of these sons and daughters, and we are building in the country homes that will outlive our own life, that will be monuments for generations to come of the awakening of the American people toward the necessity of a beautiful satisfying home life.

"The brick house has the great advantage of [illegible] its own beautiful color [illegible] and with the [illegible] brick in [illegible] and with the mortar used in the [illegible] out between the brick a pleasing effect of rich and subtle color [illegible] which would [illegible] very many years of weathering [illegible].

"A house of brick well thought out may be made to harmonize most intimately with any kind of landscape. It is most friendly in effect [illegible] to a sloping hillside; if it stands on flat ground it only needs the close proximity of an [illegible] orchard. In the [illegible] relieves [illegible] monotony and on the seashore it is in beautiful contrast to the [illegible] tones and the blue sweep of the water.

"From a practical point of view the brick house is an excellent investment. Well constructed at the start, it needs very little repair and has the advantage of becoming more beautiful from year to year instead of [illegible] as is the case with many of our wooden structures [illegible] which the houses are painted instead of being oiled. And if one stops to think of it, what an inartistic as well as unfriendly thing it is to paint a house over from time to time in quite a new and different color."

BUILDING IN LYNN.

Statistics for Year 1910 in the "Shoe City."

New buildings erected in Lynn during 1910 are estimated by the superintendent of buildings, Herbert C. B[illegible]ard, in his annual report, to have cost $1,065,[illegible]. Alterations and improvements on existing structures cost $476,575. Four hundred and thirty-[illegible] buildings were erected, including 2[illegible] dwellings, one theatre, a [illegible] station, a hospital, an icehouse, a [illegible] building and four factories. The volume of building operation was considerably less than in 1909.

SEEK RELIEF FROM BIG FIRE LOSSES

Architects and Contractors See a Valuable Remedy in High Class Construction.

The fire losses in the United States in the last thirty years are said to have reached the appalling total of $[illegible] with the expense for men and apparatus to fight fires has approximated the same. It is estimated that in that time [illegible] persons lost their life by fires and that 150,000 persons were injured in conflagrations. And this is only half the story of fire losses [illegible] thousands who have been injured have had hospital bills to pay and the expense [illegible] has been figured by one authority as averaging $[illegible] each, a total of $[illegible] which must be added to the item of national fire loss. Unfortunately no record has been kept of the number of persons thrown out of employment but it is believed to be well up in the hundred of thousands. It, however, is figured that the annual loss in wages in the United States due to fire is at least 20 per cent [illegible]

[illegible] 1910 was $234,470,[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] during the year 1910 [illegible]

The total fire loss therefore equaled nearly one-half of the amount of money spent in building material and builders' [illegible] to ask, "Why [illegible] we [illegible] price to the demon fire?" Architects are saying "Why not [illegible] that [illegible] drain on the nation's resources by [illegible] buildings of fireproof materials?" Builders and architects are coming to regard that fire trap construction is no longer a necessity in this country.

A half century ago when wooden construction became the vogue it was because fireproof materials were not available or could be had only at prohibitory prices. An impression once created is long remembered and the impression still sticks in the minds of many that fireproof buildings cost more than a fire[illegible] building. Such is not the case. An ordinary frame village building which cost $[illegible] or $[illegible] can be constructed fireproof of hollow tile at an additional cost of 15 per cent and there is no danger of losing the [illegible] ing afterward through the ravages of fire. Hollow tile floors laid in concrete and walls and partitions built of the same [illegible] and given an exterior finish of stone or cement assure an absolute fire-proof dwelling, the same as a structural, hollow tile fireproof building insures an absolutely fireproof [illegible].

During the year the sum of $102,312,129 was paid in premiums to fire insurance companies in the United States. It has been figured that if this amount was spent each year in the erection of structures to make them fireproof that this amount would be almost permanently added to the wealth of the nation.

NOVEL FEATURES OF REALTY EXPOSITION

Work in Getting Ready For Boston Show Will Start Next Tuesday.

John D. Rockefeller's [illegible] model low-cost [illegible] will be on [illegible]

[illegible] his plans at the exposition.

These plans call [illegible] cost not [illegible] $3,000 [illegible]

[illegible] of constant [illegible]

[illegible] in Horticultural Hall [illegible]

The [illegible] of the biggest features [illegible] will be a [illegible] [illegible] kept constantly busy on this [illegible] alone in order to fulfill [illegible].

Another interesting [illegible] for which [illegible] that of a display [illegible] Many [illegible] low-cost method [illegible] but up to the present time [illegible] of this material is said to have [illegible] in solving the low-cost home problem. The promoters of [illegible] to be shown at the real estate exposition claim that a dwelling can be erected by their method for $2,000, one of the principal features tending towards this low cost being the fact that the moulds can be rented instead of purchased outright. In connection with this exhibit a model house will be [illegible] during the two weeks of the show giving an actual demonstration of the process [illegible].

The scope of the coming show will cover such a large field that the architect, the general builder, the real estate broker and operator, the man who specializes in exterior and interior decorations and the householder will find upon entering Horticultural Hall everything appertaining to the construction and fitting out of any kind or description of buildings, or the selection of a home site.

IDEAL HOMES TO BE IN THE SUBURBS

[illegible] of the Future Will Be Located in the Country, Says a Developer.

[illegible] BE REAL HOMES

[illegible] Pendulum of Population Is Beginning to Swing in That Direction.

DECLARING that suburban homes will be the only real homes of the future, because [illegible] of the city dweller [illegible] living conditions [illegible] of suburban [illegible] talk on "Ideal [illegible] give some [illegible] homes. [illegible] for more [illegible] from the [illegible] ipal too [illegible] easily obtained [illegible] of the [illegible]," said Mr. Harsen. "This movement will do much to increase [illegible] values and a corresponding [illegible] in depressing country values," he [illegible].

Mr. Harsen said he believed the pendulum was beginning to swing in the other direction and [illegible] movement from the onward [illegible] seeking homes [illegible] country and [illegible] by all [illegible] would [illegible] he [illegible].

Advantages of Suburban Life

Healthful conditions are decidedly better [illegible] and in many cases social life approaches the ideal. In the country home [illegible] measure and [illegible] In the city [illegible] neighbors are [illegible] of the country [illegible] real estate has not advanced [illegible] not on the [illegible] more than [illegible] value of desirable [illegible] normal and [illegible] increase in value for [illegible]

[illegible] which the great [illegible] almost as [illegible] to be the [illegible] grow, at [illegible] and are surrounded [illegible] influences [illegible] therefore [illegible] real homes.

Importance of Surroundings.

Those seeking real homes want attractive surroundings and agreeable neighbors [illegible] are [illegible] on land [illegible] good [illegible] are [illegible]

[illegible] surroundings are of [illegible] as it is only under [illegible] friendships [illegible] and the [illegible] but with [illegible] growth [illegible] people are [illegible] the [illegible] features [illegible] attractions [illegible] may [illegible] intimacies [illegible].

Ideal Homes Not Costly.

"Ideal homes do not necessarily mean [illegible] homes [illegible] designed according to the [illegible] good taste. Artistic homes [illegible] of character and [illegible] [illegible] used at [illegible] taste [illegible] are [illegible] not [illegible] [illegible] safe and quick [illegible] community [illegible] for those of [illegible] of large [illegible] inexpensive [illegible] picturesque effects [illegible] be provided for in every ambitious suburban development."

NATIONAL BOARD TO ASSIST MEMBERS

At the recent [illegible] meeting of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges [illegible] real estate boards were admitted to membership, the applications of four exchanges were received and seven firms were made associate members.

Frank Craven of Philadelphia was elected vice-president, succeeding Joseph P. Day of New York, resigned. The treasurer showed cash on hand to be $3,109.[illegible].

Through the boards of Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Minnesota, Toledo and Milwaukee a special fund of $500 was accumulated for extension work, the money to be used principally in sending representatives to different cities.

In the semi-annual report of the secretary it was announced that at the close of the fiscal year, June 1, 1911, there should be $3,450 in the hands of the treasurer. It was estimated that the probable expense of the national convention in Denver next June, would be $2,700, leaving a balance of $750, the estimate not including the $500 special fund referred to above.

The president reported the appointment of new committees on commission rates, convention program, reference, transportation, city planning, finance and printing and forms, which had not been provided for in the bylaws.

A resolution was adopted requiring each exchange to supply every other exchange in the association with its roster of members. The adoption of this measure will materially assist the members in getting in touch with the members of other cities in the transaction of business in those places.

Every Man Makes Mistakes

By Herbert Kaufman

—Copyright, 1911, by Herbert Kaufman.

Don't defend an indefensible position. Right your blunders or you'll wrong your cause.

When you're in error, you're on the wrong side of the wall. The barricade is behind you, not before you.

You're exposed—bound to be discovered. You have two weaknesses to protect—you must not only demonstrate that your original mistake was pure accident, but you must also combat the idea that you meant to be mean.

When you acknowledge weakness, you display strength. A just man need never tremble—he stands upon granite—he can't be undermined.

Infallibility is a human impossibility. All men are imperfect; all judgment is unreliable.

An accurate brain has never been known—a precise skill has never been shown. It is no shame to fail, but it is a shameful thing to deny fair failure.

You create distrust when you seek to prove that you can't improve. We fear self-acknowledged perfection; we doubt those who never doubt themselves.

Only knaves and fools seek to conceal their evident characters.

Conceit does not disguise but it discloses incapability.

A boast is not a boost; you can't lift yourself by the bootstraps of braggadocio.

The will of circumstance is at times stronger than any determination—your complete destiny is never within your absolute control.

To be downed is unfortunate; to remain downed is pitiable; only to lie down is contemptible.

You can't exceed the immediate limitations of your nature. Force must be developed; growth is gradual. Brains must be trained. We require stumbling blocks to acquire sure-footedness. Obstacles are essential to education.

Problems arouse the zeal of solution.

We gain poise through occasionally losing balance—the harder the bump, the greater the incentive to avoid it thereafter.

Until the aviator is imperiled by a flaw in his biplane, he is not aware that it can be bettered.

Mistakes are the manures of Progress.

Are you made in a different mold—do your veins flow with a unique blood—that you set yourself above the geniuses, the mighty captains, the illustrious scholars, the founders of industries, and the builders of nations.

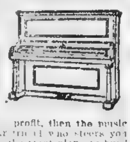
Eternal Vigilance Is The Price of Liberty

Watch out or the Piano Trust will get you. In looking over [illegible] ... Read it, every word—it is as true [illegible] ... and was quoted all over the country.

Are You Piano Wise OR OTHERWISE?

Do you know anything about the piano business? [illegible] ... warerooms of the Piano Trust ... exorbitant profits—the [illegible] ... together of [illegible] ... pose of [illegible] ... their instruments, and [illegible] ... that price, which [illegible] ... since their pooling of interests and their ironclad agreements prevent the piano houses from lowering the price or selling pianos at a reasonably low price [illegible] ... Like the other Trusts, "they soak you," and you have to "stand for it." Then comes the agent's profit, then the dealer's profit, then the commission man's profit, then the jobber profit, then the music teacher's little rake-off, and perhaps your dear friend who steers you into the piano store, and who tells you just the right piano to buy—sometimes you know your dear friend "needs the money"—then add to all this the big rents of the swell dealers, the expense of running their costly fitted, beautiful warerooms, and then don't wonder any more at Piano Trust prices.



WE MAKE NO PIANO TRUST AGREEMENTS When a dozen [illegible] of their pianos, new or second-hand [illegible] ... trust, to the first man or woman [illegible]

$5 DOWN $1 A WEEK

FREE Delivery Anywhere in Unmarked Wagons

AT THE
HENRY F. MILLER PIANO WAREROOMS, 395 BOYLSTON ST.

WE show some splendid bargains in new and slightly used pianos of our own and other makes, we believe our prices are the lowest in Boston, as we employ no "canvassers" but deal directly with each buyer, we have no "special" prices, but treat the humblest buyer the same as the most exacting expert. Investigate our offerings, you will be surprised and pleased. Established 18[illegible]. HENRY F. MILLER & SONS PIANO CO.

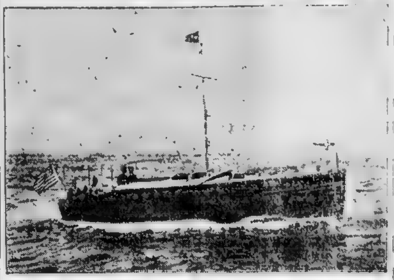
YACHTS AND POWER BOATS



Power boat Remoh, bought by Marston Harding, this city, to be used at York Harbor, Me.

The sailing race to Bermuda from this city on June 3 is attracting much attention among the yachtsmen of the country, and will be the big yachting fixture of the year in this vicinity. Mayor Fitzgerald has asked the Council to appropriate the sum of $500 for a cup to be given to the winner, and it will probably be granted.

The Wollaston Yacht Club gave a very enjoyable smoker at the club house Thursday evening, and the prizes for the Winter tournaments were awarded.

The fast 85-foot cruiser Remoh, owned by Arthur P. Homer has been sold to Marston Harding of this city, and will be used by him at York Harbor, Me. The Remoh was one of the best boats that came out last season, and was designed by Mr. Homer for cruising purposes.

The champion of the Boston Yacht Club, the 25-footer Virginia, has been sold by Lydia Burgess to Charles L. Joy of the Winthrop and Jeffries Point Yacht Club. Mr Joy will sail the Virginia in the Inter-club Association races this Summer and the boat will furnish good racing for the new owner.

Herbert M. Sears has sold his sonder boat Eel to a well known Marblehead yachtsman.

The New England Power Boat Association, being formed by C. Frank Moore, is growing in membership and will be in the racing game this Summer.

B. B. Crowninshield has the contract to design a new towboat for the Boston Towboat Company and it will be built by Green of Chelsea.

Swasey, Raymond & Page have designed a new steel ferry boat for the city of Boston, which will be built at a cost of $125,000, the boat being the largest the city will own.

Fred Hoyt of Marblehead and New York, has placed his sixty-one-footer Isode on the market and will not put the boat into commission this year.

The Remlik III., the new boat built at South Boston for W. S. Kilmer of Binghamton, N. Y., will be launched next Monday and Mr. Kilmer will bring quite a party of New York yachtsmen over to witness the launching.

Lawrence Percival will launch the Gee Whiz, his new power cruiser building at Marblehead from designs of A. P. Homer, next Saturday. The boat has been entered in the New England power boat championships and will be used by Mr. Percival for extensive cruising.

MYSTERY IN DEATH BY OPIUM POISON

The death of a well-dressed, unidentified man from opium poisoning at the Relief Hospital leaves another Chinatown mystery for the police to solve. He was found unconscious on Tyler street, near Beach street, with his pockets stripped.

Patrolman Michael Welch of the Lagrange street station discovered the man lying on the sidewalk. Failing in his efforts to arouse him the policeman sent for the wagon and the man was taken to the Lagrange street station. There he was examined by Dr. Williams, who ordered his removal to the hospital, where he lived but a few hours, passing away without regaining consciousness.

The man's clothing was of fine texture and fashionably cut. His pockets bore the appearance of having been emptied to avoid any chance of the man's identity being established.

From the man's appearance it was evident that he had been addicted to the use of drugs. He died, it is said, from an overdose of opium, but whether or not it was self-inflicted is a mystery which the police are trying to solve.

The neighborhood in which the man was found is but a step from Chinatown and is invested with "hop joints." The man may have been a frequenter of these places although none of the policemen who do duty in that section of the city remember seeing him before.

It is thought the man had been in an opium joint and was pushed out of the house to die in the street. The police made a house to house canvass of several streets in and around Chinatown, but nobody could be found who had seen the man or who was able to identify him.

ADVICE HOW TO MARRY.

Don't Wed Misers, Says Rev. Fr. O'Keefe to Young Women.

CLINTON, March 25.—The Rev. Edward J. Fitzgerald, pastor of the Church of the Holy Rosary, warns the young women of his flock against marrying misers. "Never marry a miser," he said to the girls in the course of a sermon on "Marriage." Other advice he gave was: "In selecting a life partner there is no need of chasing him with a microscope for fifteen or twenty years to see if he is all there. One year's courtship is sufficient." To the young men he said: "Don't lose your head over an angel face or follow the swish of a silk skirt adorning a Venus-like figure."

HOT TALK ON HOT WATER QUESTION

Sheriff Seavey and the County Court House Commissioners are in hot water because they will not provide hot water for the upper floors of the Court House building.

Scalding remarks were made about this neglect, or laziness or parsimony by Register of Deeds W. T. A. Fitzgerald to the City Council committee on appropriations. Mr. Fitzgerald was boiling with indignation over the uncleanly condition of his offices in the Court House and he mopped his heated brow several times during his remarks after declaring the court house floors were seldom mopped.

Register Fitzgerald characterized as an outrage the uncleanliness of the Court House and declared that the floors of his department had been washed but once since last September. The work of cleaning the building is wholly in the hands of Sheriff Seavey, the register said, as he is custodian of the building and is paid for the proper care of it.

He asserted that when he went before the Court House Commission and urged it to provide the hot water for the fourth and fifth floors, the chairman told him that it was unnecessary and that he had occupied for twenty years an office in a building where there was no hot water.

STOP WASTE OF WATER.

Electrical Men Urge Development of Power in New England.

Development of wasted water power in New England so that the six States might be supplied with electrical energy transmitted from New England rivers, was . . . at the annual dinner to the Central Station representatives by the General Electric Company at the Hotel Somerset. The 500 men present included officials and representatives . . . companies from all the New England States. Charles B. Davis, New England district manager of the General Electric Company, presided. J. R. McKee and Harold W. Buck of New York, and Everett W. Burdett of Boston, counsel for the company, delivered addresses.

RIVAL TO CRANBERRY.

Bayberry Culture Brings Big Returns to Cape Towns.

NORTH TRURO, March 25.—Bayberry culture is beginning to rival the cranberry industry in Cape Cod. It has reached the extensive scale quickly. The business started at this place in September, 1908, and has . . . steadily increased . . . 26,000 pounds of bayberries having been sold since that time. The towns contributed as follows: Eastham 400 pounds, Orleans, 700, Wellfleet, 1,000, Provincetown, 1,000; Truro and North Truro 21,000. Of this large amount 20,000 pounds have been made into fancy candles and other novelties which have been placed on the market.

WELLESLEY BILL SIGNED.

Gov. Foss Approves Measure to Hold Additional Real Estate.

Governor Foss signed the bill authorizing Wellesley College to hold additional real and personal estate not exceeding $10,000,000. In all he affixed his signature to twenty-one bills. It was the busiest Saturday that he has had as far as signing bills are concerned, since he took office. One of the bills which he signed was introduced by William B. Lawrence and provides a penalty of a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both fine and imprisonment for any person who wilfully makes a false report to a state commission.

Million-Dollar Bonfire.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 25.—The main warehouse of the Tyler Lumber Company was totally destroyed by fire early to-day and several nearby houses were damaged. The total loss is nearly $1,000,000. The flames were fanned by a strong wind and for a time threatened to spread to apartment houses with a block of the warehouses. A bonfire built by boys is said to have been responsible for the blaze.

Tax-free Ten Years.

WESTERLY, R. I., March 25.—An exemption from taxes for ten years has been granted the Bradford Dyers' Association, the English syndicate, which is soon to establish a large plant here, by the town council. The provision was made, however, that $100,000 shall be expended in the establishment of the industry in the town within nine months. The total cost of the building and equipment is expected to be about $600,000.

NEWPORT TAXATION DRAWS OUT PROTEST

City Authorities Say Municipality Paying Too Much to the State.

NEWPORT, March 25.—The Summer . . . of municipalities whose aldermen say are paying more than their share of State taxation. It is said here that in proportion to population, the people of Newport pay more than twice as much into the Rhode Island treasury as Providence, which is the biggest city in the Commonwealth.

. . . meeting of the . . . $50,000 . . . the State tax. . . . former Mayor . . . who wanted to learn why Newport should . . . several times as much as the State has equity demanded. If the State taxes . . . Newport were based upon the ratio of payments by other cities, this municipality would save thousands of dollars to expend upon local improvements.

Andrew B. Quinn, who used to be a member of the Council and is an authority on taxation, raised the same question several years ago. But his convincing arguments did not save the city any money. It is said, however, the Newport Board of Tax Assessors are to blame, and that as the State tax is based upon local valuation there can be no relief for this city until its local authorities do some scaling. It is asserted that Newport is paying the State $50,000 more a year than is should.

Many of the New Yorkers who own magnificent Summer homes here say that if the Newport assessors did not soak them so much the city would escape having to give up such a big part of its tax revenues to Rhode Island.

RIVAL OFFICE HOLDERS.

Just Compare Vermont Records and Take Your Choice.

BENNINGTON, March 25.—It was recently asserted in Somerset, the smallest town in Vermont, that Fred V. Johnson of that town holds the title of being the champion office holder of the State. This assertion aroused the dignity of Glastonbury, which immediately retaliated with the contention that Norman Mattison outstrips his contemporary by several offices. Here is the relative standing of the two officials:

Mr. Johnson—Clerk, treasurer, selectman, lister, tax collector, constable, road commissioner, overseer of the poor, town agent, and member of the Legislature.

Mr. Mattison—Assistant judge of Bennington County, representative in the Legislature, town clerk, first constable, selectman, lister, collector of taxes, overseer of the poor, town agent, justice of the peace, fence viewer, school director and health officer.

ROOSTER AND A CAT HEROES ON WARSHIP

Robinson Crewso Loses a Leg During Heavy Fire on the San Marcos.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The heroes of . . . cock. Like those of the Merrimac, those of the old warship that now rests upon the bottom of Chesapeake bay withstood a hail of shot and shell. Their conduct under fire will probably give them chief place among navy mascots . . . ever to tread the deck of a . . .

With others of their kind, the . . . Robinson Crewso . . . San Marcos to . . . New Hampshire . . . of living . . . battleship to junk. When the shooting was over, Secretary of the Navy Meyer went aboard the hulk.

Emerging from a mass of wreckage and an experience that must have made back fence adventures of the past, with boot jacks and beer bottles whizzing around him, seem mild indeed. Henry V. purred his way along and rubbed the Secretary's leg.

Perched on the upper deck was Robinson. He and Henry V. were the survivors. Discovery was made that a shell had taken off one of Robinson's legs. He was taken to the dugship, stretched out in the cockpit, treated to a proper amputation, and fitted out with a wooden leg. At last reports he was in a fair way to ward recovery.

ACTORS PLAN A STRIKE.

Vaudeville Managers Get Ready to Meet Big Walkout.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Preparations for a strike in the vaudeville world that has been rumored for some time assumed tangible shape when the Vaudeville Managers' Protective Association, of which E. F. Albee, general manager of the B. F. Keith interests, is the head, held a meeting and took in sixty new members managing about 300 theatres and including not only vaudeville, but the two big burlesque syndicates.

The activity is caused, it is said, in view of a proposed strike of the Vaudeville Actors' Association, known as the White Rats.

OLD TEACHER TO RETIRE.

Miss Gilman Will Leave Girls' School in Providence.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 25.—Miss Mary Gilman has been at the head of the Lincoln School for Girls for many years, but now it is announced that she will retire at the close of the term in June and be succeeded by Miss Frances Lucas of Lowell. Miss Lucas is a Wellesley graduate. She has already taught in Providence for a year.

DEATH RECALLS BANK TRAGEDY IN MAINE

Charles Stain, Whose Confession Sent Father and Cromwell to Prison, Dies in Almshouse.

BANGOR, Me., March 25.—The Dexter . . . a quarter of a century ago is recalled by the news of the death of Charles Stain, on whose purported confession his father, David L. Stain, and Oliver Cromwell of Medfield, Ma. . . .

Charles Stain . . . father had confessed . . . of Stain and Cromwell . . . life imprisonment at Thomaston jail, following a . . .

In 1900 Stain and . . . were pardoned by Governor Powers after a hearing at which a plea of alibi was successfully made. The evidence upset young Stain's assertions.

When announcement of his death was made here persons who followed the case declared that they had expected him to retract his "confession," as they believed it was prompted by a desire for revenge upon his father, because he had refused to supply young Stain with money.

DANCE, SAYS MAN OF 83.

He Forgot About Birthday, and Couldn't Go to Seth Brown's.

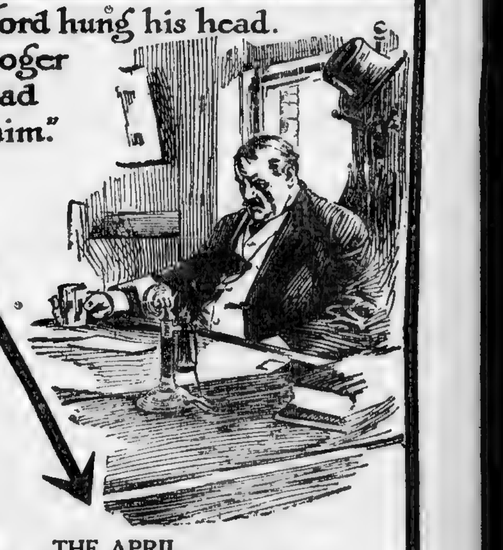
SUFFIELD, March 25.—George Hancock had mighty little time last night to go dancing, his favorite method of entertainment. Why? Well, George was 83 years old and his friends came . . . in such numbers and . . . many gifts and good wishes that . . . a hundred, that George . . . and stay at home one night and receive congratulations.

"Oh, yes," he said. "I'm sorry that Seth Brown's folks is givin' their dance tonight. I never thought of this bein' my birthday when I told Seth I'd be there. Dance? Me too old? Bless you, son, I've been dancin' nigh on sixty-five years and that's what has kep' me young.

"My advice is, dance! Be merry, happy. Bless the Lord for givin' you strength and will to do it. I never did believe it wicked and don't know as 'tis."

The Masons have presented George with a fine big easy chair and he accepts it for appearance sake, but quietly allows to his intimates that it will be a good many years yet before he will feel its need or make much use of the gift.

"Wallingford hung his head. The Booger Man had got him."



THE APRIL

COSMOPOLITAN

MAGAZINE

Wallingford is such a genial rascal that one cannot help sympathizing with him when he is in the clutches of the Booger Man and rejoicing when by some clever turn he finally comes out all right.

Although some of his adventures read like the wildest flights of imagination, Mr. Chester has a solid basis of facts for his stories. The newspapers almost every day describe some new scheme whereby another innocent is robbed by sharpers keeping "just within the law."

Mr. Chester's stories doubtless have caused many a credulous investor to hesitate before risking his savings. They are affording a rich fund of entertainment to the thousands who laugh over them each month.

THAYER'S DEATH LOSS TO "MOORE PARTY"

Boston Financier Was Heavy Backer of Remarkably Successful Combination.

By BOERSIANER.

CHICAGO, March 25.—The passing of Nathaniel Thayer of Boston last week [illegible] Moore party [illegible] [illegible] Moore [illegible] is of that [illegible] W. B. Leeds died [illegible] ago and James Hobart Moore [has] permanently retired from all business. [illegible] membership to Daniel G. Reid and William H. Moore, the [illegible] who have represented [illegible] and invention, Moore the other.

Thayer Gave Prestige.

Leeds had been a railroad man. To him were referred all matters pertaining to the [illegible] part of the party's railway [illegible] Thayer, besides lending money to all the Moore propositions, lent prestige. His was a New England name which conferred dignity and solidity, if it did not [add] lustre upon the Moore plans. James H. Moore was the stock market [illegible] [illegible] The great forces of the Moores [were] Daniel G. Reid [illegible] [illegible] always been a question whether [illegible] Moore [illegible] [illegible] could not plan.

Qualities That Win.

William H. Moore is in a sense inventive, perhaps it were more correct to say he is a designer or draughtsman or suggester. He is prescient and, what is equally important, patient. He has a genius for waiting patiently for results—in contrast to [illegible] impatience of his brother and of Leeds, who always burned for immediate results.

Reid has all of William H. Moore's qualities and [illegible] in an intensified [form] [illegible] He possesses a steel-like indomitableness [illegible] [illegible] The word "[illegible]" has been applied to him [illegible] [illegible] There is Reid the father of his daughter, the most adoring of parents, Reid the convivial whose conviviality [illegible] leaves a long wide and crimson [illegible] Reid the financier.

The [illegible] of fine traits was shown at [illegible] the Moore party. They [illegible] Moore party [illegible] the Moore crowd.

Proves Master in Crisis.

The scene is the assembly room in the [illegible] Trust and Savings Bank Building, Chicago. Two men, William H. Moore and Daniel G. Reid, are seated in pontifical chairs at the stately director's table. They are waiting the result of eighteen [illegible] [illegible] of forming the American Tin Plate Company.

To the Moores, who had been crushed by the Diamond Match [illegible] success of the undertaking would assure a brilliant retrievement of their credit and prestige; [illegible] would mean [illegible] disaster. To Reid and Leeds a successful consummation of the deal implied [illegible]

Thirdly, men representing as many plants must needs be satisfied. They had been summoned to Chicago on the same day, [illegible] with a skill worthy of a Machiavelli or a Richelieu [illegible] [illegible] All were in a state of suppressed emotion [illegible] James H. Moore and W. B. Leeds fearing they could not endure the strain of the final act, refused to go to the assembly room.

The ultimate test began. The tin plate makers came in in pairs at the appointed quarters of hours. Moore after the first half hour, could do nothing. The tension unfitted him for negotiations. He left everything to Reid, pacing up and down more or less until Reid [illegible] perfectly cool and [illegible] himself masterfully in hand. He appraised his man at a glance.

Beginning of Steel Trust.

He was dignified with this one, cheek by jowl with this one; imposed a low figure on a weakling, raised his price to the strong character [illegible] here and threatened there [illegible] the rebel, [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] the vain, soothed the sensitive [illegible] the obtruse. He never failed of the right tone and touch.

When the last man had deposited his stock [illegible] the American Tin Plate [illegible] J. H. Moore sank in [illegible] Reid [illegible] remarking: [illegible] "Now Moore, I am ready for the National Steel."

And so he was. Really also, for the American Hoop Company, the American [illegible] and the other companies that [illegible] part of the United States Steel corporation.

The Hollinger has produced from development [illegible] over 1,700 tons of ore which [illegible] an average [illegible] a ton. The stamp mill will have a daily capacity of 150 tons of ore, and it is on this that the estimate is based.

Frank [illegible] Armstrong of New York was the moving spirit in the organization of the Armstrong-McGibbon syndicate and the Armstrong-Booth syndicate. Associated with Mr. Armstrong are E. P. Earle, president of the Nipissing Mines Company; D. Lorne McGibbon, president of the La Rose Consolidated Mines Company; R. B. Watson, vice-president and general manager of the La Rose, and Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., of Toronto. Mr. McGibbon is also president of the Canadian Rubber Company, and is one of the well known financiers of Eastern Canada. These two syndicates are developing their properties preliminary to the organization of companies to take them over and operate them.

RECORD TRADING IN STOCK MARKET

Greatest Volume of Sales for Two Hours Seen in New York in Seven Years.

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Not for seven years or since June 5, 1904, has the volume of trading in a two-hour session on the New York Stock Exchange been as great as to-day. United States Steel shares showed a total trading volume of only [illegible] shares. Most of the stocks dealt in were handled to the extent of being a nominal 100 shares necessary to keep them on the active list. In thirty-eight issues there were only 100 shares each. The day was without even a robust rumor. The Mexican situation, and by that Wall Street understands the Japanese situation, is not treated lightly by leading banking interests. Decisive developments are expected within the next few days, but no apprehension is felt market wise regarding any [phase] of the matter.

Cotton Attracts Attention.

It was dulness of the market that drew public attention to the cotton market where the party that has been working for higher prices seems on the point of surrendering.

Trading conditions in the cloth market are such as to make a purchase of cotton options at this level a very hazardous proceeding.

The bank statement showed a decrease in surplus reserve on all deposits [illegible] the average and the actual statements. But as both reserves are about 27 per cent the change was not considered important.

Activity of bank stocks, new high prices for Canadian Pacific and sporadic activity among a few specialties were features of trading in Wall Street this week. Actual transfers were made by the Equitable and the Mutual Life Insurance companies of one half of their holdings in National Bank of Commerce stock to a syndicate composed of interests identified with J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the First National Bank and the National City Bank. The presidents of the National City and the First National, and perhaps of the Chase National, will enter the Bank of Commerce board.

Goulds Block Presidency.

About 43,000 shares of stock were taken over by the syndicate, giving almost 25 per cent. of the 250,000 shares outstanding. The price is understood to be about 220, so that the deal called for about $9,000,000. Under the State law passed at the time of the life insurance investigations, insurance companies must sell all of their stock investments before the end of this year. A purchase by some syndicate, therefore, was necessary, since it would be impossible to dispose of the bank stock in the open market at a price fair to the insurance companies.

Missouri Pacific directors reorganized, but left the post of president vacant. A new president is to be selected by a committee consisting of E. D. Adams, Frederick T. Gates and George J. Gould. Gates represents the Rockefellers and Adams the foreign stockholders. The presidency of the road has been offered to several important men, but has been declined because of the refusal of the Goulds to retire absolutely.

New York Central lines issued the annual pamphlet reports showing gross earnings about at record figures, but with net earnings at such a level as to prove the wisdom of reducing the dividend to 5 per cent., as was done.

Trust Company Supervision.

Owing to the disclosures made in connection with the Carnegie Trust Company, the New York Clearing House is planing such connections with the State institutions in New York city as to compel these institutions to submit to examination by the experts representing the Clearing House. The State Banking Department is completely discredited, and national banks insist on real inspection of trust companies and State banks.

The bond market was quiet last week, but short-term notes were in good demand. These notes are desirable because banks have received many millions of time deposits, and the ordinary money rates are so low that this money is being invested in short-term notes, where a good rate is obtained. Business men are also investing their money in such securities to await the time when the capital will be needed in business.

Wool Gains Activity at Price's Expense

Purchases Are Small, but Help Materially in Preventing Heavy Selling.

Though the wool market continues in a depressed condition, dullness is not as accentuated as previously noted. This somewhat increased activity, however, has been gained at the expense of prices. While purchases have not been extensive they have helped materially in propping up prices and preventing heavy liquidation. Texas twelve-months' stock, medium fleeces, domestic scoured wool, pulled wool and Australian merinos have shared with territory in the increased demand.

It is stated that some of the purchases have been for the account of dealers who had previously sold out in a fit of depression and had recovered their courage. Others are attributed to speculation, a certain portion of the trade being satisfied that prices are as low as they are likely to go. Still others are passed up to manufacturers who have a reputation for accurately gauging the bottom of the market and whose takings are partly speculative and partly for expected necessities.

Sentimentally the feeling is undeniably better, and there is a disposition to await developments and not unload at falling prices. Tariff agitation continues to unsettle affairs and is, in fact, the principal deterrent to the resumption of normal activity. For the same reason the goods market continues to hang generally back, although there have been occasional flashes of strength recently. Until the extra session tariff tinkering fears are allayed there can be no good wool market.

Difference of opinion still prevails as to the level of prices, and there are many believers in the rumors of sales of good territory on a scoured basis of less than 50 cents. There is also fairly good authority for the rumor of a sale of 250,000 pounds of Idaho on a scoured basis of 44 cents.

Some dealers are convinced that it will not be the easiest thing in the world to replace the clip that is now being sold at such remarkably low prices as have been accepted in this market, according to reliable advices and have been so much lower than the world's market that certain of the wools at least could have been shipped to London at a profit. As evidence of this position of firmness on the part of certain holders it is stated that an offer on a large line of Montana clothing wools of good description was fully a cent the grease pound below what the dealer expected (which was about 55 cents clean) and the offer it is said was firmly turned down.

Trading in Michigan fleeces appear to have been less brisk, although very low prices are quoted on these wools yet for a very fine quarter blood 25 cents is likewise said to have been obtained for a very desirable lot.

Some desultory business has been effected in semi bright this week also, among the transactions being 25,000 pounds of Missouri quarter blood which went at the reported price of 24½ cents. Other miscellaneous lots have been in request but at low prices.

PRICES NEITHER GO UP OR DOWN

Trend Hinges on Supreme Court Decisions, Extra Session and Winter Wheat Crop.

By E. A. WILKINS.

STATE STREET, March 25.—Colorless is about the only term that can be applied to the stock market these days. Prices neither go up or down except in few instances. [illegible] that if things drag as long as they are now that the market is likely to sag of its own weight if from no other cause. It is very apparent that stocks are in strong hands and that the big interests intend to market them at higher levels. This can only be done after the Supreme Court has rendered the important decisions now on its hands. Another near factor is the extra session of Congress. This body now being Democratic, can block the very purpose for which it is called together, that is reciprocity with Canada. If it persists in filibustering, the session may continue well along into hot weather and this will not help the stock market one iota.

Wheat Crop a Big Factor.

Aside from these questions the Winter wheat crop is the next important market factor. A big crop means a bull market and a repetition of last year's failure means the reverse. There is no getting away from this. Conditions up to the present favor the former and the big owners of securities are banking on big crops. So much so that predictions are freely ventured that the coming Summer will witness an active bull market.

This is the reason for the present general strength of stock market prices. It was anticipated that following the adjournment of the Supreme Court until April 3 a demonstration would be made on the up side but nothing of the kind has happened and the market has been allowed to remain in a state of lethargy. This will in all probability, continue until something happens to lift it out of its present rut.

Interest In Coppers Waning.

What is there to say about copper shares, aside from what has been remarked the past few months? Interest in them is waning if anything. There are no features. They have been liquidated to a standstill and only a demand and spurt in the price of the metal will bring them to life again. This can come in short order, but is contingent upon general business and trade conditions. Bring basic conditions to a nominal state and coppers would quickly respond marketwise. If it must be confessed Boston is losing ground [illegible] listing of Chino copper on the New York Stock Exchange has carried the market for this porphyry to that centre along with others. Boston had the opportunity of placing this security on its list, but not being satisfied with the ownership of a big block of the stock, refused it. Chino is one of the active curb issues in this city.

There is some awakening to the advantages of the new Porcupine gold mining camp, but it is mainly by so-called outside houses, although two or three stock exchange houses have become interested in these shares. Toronto is the headquarters, although the New York curb quotes a few of them. As the season advances more is likely to be heard [illegible] camp and quite an active speculation in the shares is looked for [illegible] admitted as being a remarkably [illegible] but thus far there are only two well developed mines, the Dome and the Hollinger.

WHEAT OUTLOOK IS GLOOMY FOR BULLS

Farmers, Elevator Men, Millers, All Have Overstayed Their Market.

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, March 25.—"How much lower will wheat sell?" was a common question on the Board of Trade to-day. There seems little in the outlook favorable to the bulls. In so far as imports are concerned, the countries of the Old World do not seem to know of the existence of the United States. As holders of wheat and flour on this side of the Atlantic, having enjoyed abnormally high prices for several years, it is difficult to [illegible] Russia, Argentina, Australia [illegible] stocks of overstuffs [illegible]

Not only the farmers of the United States, but the [illegible] and the millers as well as the farmers [illegible] Canada have overstayed the market. If a few months [illegible] previous [illegible] every grain of wheat [illegible] would be sold [illegible] Whether the market at Chicago declines, those at Liverpool and the lesser markets of the Old World follow [illegible]

Heavy Losses in Wheat.

Heavy losses as well as heavy gains have been made in the wheat pit since the long drawn out decline was inaugurated some [illegible] A [illegible] of [illegible] Chicago and New York [illegible] accumulated a [illegible] of wheat for May delivery at a price 15c above the present level, and their brokers continue to buy not only on the soft spots but they followed the market [illegible]

These holdings were accumulated in the [belief] that the Winter would show marked deterioration and that the shorts would [illegible] in an endeavor to [illegible] prices to a much higher [level]. It was expected that the insects would be found in Texas and that bough as was the case last year and that Kansas would show a large acreage Winter-killed, with losses in Nebraska and Iowa.

Bulls Are Disappointed.

The bull longs have been disappointed on every hand with the exception of a few unfavorable crop reports from scattered parts of the Southwest and the talk of dry weather there. Conditions have been more bearish than in many years. Favorable crop prospects have driven out of the market many of those who might have taken on lines of wheat. Crop prospects have halted the flour buyer and induced him to wait for bargains which are obtainable from day to day in every market of the country.

Some of the larger longs in wheat in the Northwest have created uneasiness in the Chicago market by talking of continued dry weather in the Spring wheat country and of the likelihood of the failure of the seed to germinate unless copious rains visit that section. Several men well known in the grain trade at Chicago have visited the Spring wheat country during the past week and to a man they say that there is ample moisture for the present. One declared considerable snow and ice was still to be seen between Winnipeg and Minneapolis. This shows that moisture is not lacking.

Corn Is Plentiful.

Those in the corn trade who have counted on a bull market are likely to be disappointed. They hoped that a good export demand would develop in this country and that with receipts smaller because of the Spring seeding a price advance would be an easy matter. It seems, however, that the Danube and Argentina are offering corn more freely and that, in addition, the French Republic [illegible] corn than it can possibly use and that it will be forced to dump a considerable part of it because of a lack of [illegible] to take care of it.

The shipping [illegible] of Chicago has been [illegible] for some time as points east of us are [illegible] supplying the demand. Farmers are [illegible] corn in moderate quantities only.

Oats have been under pressure of liquidation, but at the close of business to-day it was believed there are still heavy lines of May future which are likely to come out in a week or ten days. It is not at all unlikely that this grain will be taken by shorts in order to secure available profits.

Temper Courage with Judgment

Tilting at Windmills May Be a Fine, Inspiring Sight, but It Is a Shameful Waste of Valuable Force.

Copyright, 1911, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner.

IF all the human energy that goes utterly to waste, like the uncounted millions of horsepower that rushes useless toward the sea, could be conserved and applied to the good of mankind, there would be very little work for clergymen, editors and other advisory persons to do.

Every man has in him a certain amount of force. It might be supposed that the measure of this force will be the measure of his accomplishments, but this is far from being true.

It is not the amount of force a man possesses, but the manner in which he uses it that counts. A little brook, harnessed to a farmer's dynamo that lights the farmhouse and runs the farm machinery is far more useful than the greatest torrent that dashes over a precipice in the depths of the African mountains.

In this cartoon the artist has depicted one of the most familiar as well as one of the most interesting characters in all fiction —Cervantes' Don Quixote. This well-meaning but misguided knight, it will be remembered, had gone forth seeking something to fight and, desiring a really powerful foeman, made believe a great old-fashioned windmill was a giant and sought vainly to destroy it.

It was a pitiful waste of good energy and still better intentions, for good intentions are always valuable, and, guided aright may be made really helpful, even to those whose intentions are quite the reverse.

Poking fun at good intentions is a common human trait. It has been said that Hell is paved with good intentions; that he who has them has nothing else; that good intentions and bad performances go hand-in-hand.

But it is just as well to remember that no real good was ever done by accident; that no man ever served his fellows without intending to serve them.

And there could be no higher duty for those whose business it is to help their fellows than to devise some scheme for the conservation of misdirected energy—to turn the lances of those who tilt at windmills toward some common enemy of human kind —to give the world the benefit of all the force that is now wasted trying to break through impassable stonewalls or to check the resistless forces of nature.

Every one knows how admirable is the spirit and ambition of youth—how easy the battle of life looks to the boy who is beginning it, how high hope runs in his breast, and how simple seem the accomplishments of those who have made their way beyond their fellows, and have become real leaders or benefactors.

And, unhappily, every one knows how often that ambition thins and wears away with the years, how the light of youth dies with nothing done, and how much steeper and more impassable the mountains of achievement become as they are approached more closely.

Every crowd of the middle aged is composed mostly of failures, men who at twenty-one still believed in themselves almost as firmly as their mothers believed in them the first day they saw the light, but who, finding that this or that task seemed too great for their strength, at last sank into sodden resignation and ceased trying to do more than make a bare living.

If you could examine into these lives, question the failures who are predominant in the crowd, you could acquire some very useful information.

For most failures are victims not of a native lack of force, but of perversion or misdirection of the energies with which they were born.

In the ante-room of a patent lawyer there sat the other day sixteen men, each with a grimy roll of drawings beneath his arm, each with a pathetic hope in his eyes. Every one of those sixteen men were wasting their time and energy on absolutely useless attempts to solve problems that have been solved, as far as they can be solved, long ago.

Three of them had perpetual motion machines, the others had ideas borrowed or stolen from other men—ideas which they understood imperfectly and lacked the patience and ability properly to work out, even had they been original.

Such men may be called "Cranks" and useless encumberers of the earth—in reality they were a few of the countless varieties of men who want to get rich without working. Because other men, by deep thought, and years of patient, brain-wearing work had made great inventions, these sorry imitators hoped by putting a few marks on paper to accomplish as much.

They had all the courage of the inventors who really invent—none of the judgment—and courage, untempered by judgment, is merely ornamental.

It may be inspiring to read Tennyson's lines about Balaklava—the strong, earnest lines that tell of the charge of the "Noble Six Hundred," but the consummate idiocy of sending a detachment of good men to certain destruction because of a blunder, is a thing which no soldier can look upon with patience.

Here was a case of courage without judgment—blind, unreasoning courage, which furnished no useful example to humanity, which brought needless sorrow and suffering into many homes, whose only good was to supply Lord Tennyson, who was not lacking in themes for poetry, with another topic.

There are times when men must fight when they know they will lose. There have been fine and noble sacrifices in American history —which, after all, is the history that ought to be most closely studied by Americans.

In the Spanish war, when the fleet of Spain was lying in Santiago Harbor, a young naval constructor, scarcely more than a boy, volunteered to go aboard a collier, sink it at the mouth of the harbor, and thus capture a fleet at a minimum loss of life.

That man—Richmond Pearson Hobson—went to what he believed was certain death. He was willing to give his own life that the lives of his countrymen—even the lives of the enemy's sailors—might be saved. No misdirected energy there—no mere display of brute courage, but a high act of heroism, inspired by fine judgment.

It would be as well when the critics of Hobson call him an alarmist and a hothead, to remember that story—for since the days when Farragut lashed himself to the shrouds of his vessel that he might better direct the fighting, there has been no case quite like it in the story of American courage.

In most youngsters, particularly those who are bred on American soil, there is abundant force—abundant courage. If a call to arms should come to-morrow, the War Department would be embarrassed by too many, rather than too few volunteers.

Even the bully—the man who fights because of his physical vanity and delights to bring others under his domination, turns into a good soldier in time of war.

But most of our history must be worked out in time of peace, and the highest type of courage, the kind that does the most for its possessor as well as for his brother men, is moral courage, which is always tempered by judgment.

The men who rush like bulls at their enemies, desiring only to prove that they are not to be frightened, are not inspiring. They are merely pathetic.

None could question the bravery of George Washington—yet he never lost a battle because of a foolhardy attempt to show that he was not afraid. He bore criticism patiently—even permitted his fellow countrymen often to think that he lacked the dash and snap that a general should have—but he was fighting to win, and the cause was too great to be sacrificed by an empty display of personal courage.

There are, and there always will be, windmill tilters in the world. Always we shall see men blindly wasting good talents striving for unattainable objects—always, if we analyze their motives, we shall find that they are five parts vanity.

There will never be a time when real courage is not useful—when those who valiantly strive to be something beyond the ordinary time serving, self-seeking human being will not be admired and valued by their fellow men. But the courage of the bulldog is one thing; the courage of the patriot is quite another.

In politics, where the hardest battle of civilization must be fought, courage is a great essential, but the courage of a bulldog boss who knows only how to hang on to the very door of the penitentiary, will count for but little beside the courage of the statesman, who, despite fault finding and criticism, can work and plan for the betterment of his countrymen, caring only for the results he hopes to achieve, and nothing at all for the little men who yap like dogs at his heels and try to pull him down to their level.

Don Quixote was a splendid character—in action. Perhaps some of the men who are afraid of their shadows would be better off if they had his courage. Assuredly many of those whom we call courageous, merely because what is miscalled pride sets them tilting at windmills, would do well to profit by his example, and think before they fight.

Howard Athenaeum.

John L. Sullivan and his partner, Jake Kilrain, will be the magnets at the Howard this week. It is some time since Sullivan h . been in Boston, and he will have someth g to say about that Reno affair in which Jeffries lost to Johnson. Cora Livingston will be on hand for another week to meet all comers, and the burlesque feature will be furnished by the "Rector Girls," a new show with all up-to-the-minute material. John Grieves and company in a comedy playlet will receive a welcome hand.

Waldron's Casino.

Theatregoers have a week of fun in store for them when Gallagher and Shean make their first appearance with the "Big Banner Show" at Waldron's Casino this week, offering the "Girl from Paris," a musical satire with a strong array of talent.

Hub Theatre.

The world's only female elephant trainer, Miss Juliette Arnold, and her four East Indian musical elephants, the feature attraction at the Hub Theatre this week, will furnish astonishing entertainment.

Scenic Temple.

The excellence of the entertainment at the Scenic Temple accounts for the continued heavy patronage during the Lenten season. Next week the attractions will be of the usual high character and will be varied.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

A long and varied program consisting of high-class vaudeville and moving pictures will be seen at the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week. Brindamour, the jail breaker, will be seen in a new assortment of tricks.

Austin & Stone's.

Many new features will be added to the programme at Austin & Stone's Museum to-morrow. In the curio hall there will be much to entertain visitors and the theatre will be up to the standard.

Palace Theatre.

A new list of vaudeville features will be offered at the New Palace theatre tomorrow, which will include several novelties of the most engaging nature. The quality of the vaudeville at the New Palace is constantly improving. There will be a new list of motion pictures.

Theatre Comique.

The daylight pictures at the Theatre Comique are so popular that they will be continued. The new programme for this week will show many interesting picture subjects and several song numbers that have been carefully selected.

Hite in Providence.

Mabel Hite in "A Certain Party" will be the attraction at the Providence Opera House this week.

Hilliard Coming.

Robert Hilliard comes to the Boston Theatre on Monday, April 3, in his big success, "A Fool There Was." It is the story of a distinguished New Yorker, going abroad upon a government mission, and squeezed dry by a fascinating creature, who embodies the Kiplingesque idea of the siren who was only "a rag, a bone and a hank of hair." It has its comedy, episodes, its epigrams and a tragic crisis, which symbolize the forces warring for good and evil. It has its basis in Rudyard Kipling's poem, inspired by Sir Philip Burne-Jones's vivid picture, "The Vampire," in which startled Londoners professed to recognize an eccentric English actress.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

Mme. Tetrazzini is of the opinion that "Pelleas and Melisande's" popularity with some prima donnas is due to the fact that it can be sung off the key without being noticed. "Did you ever say 'Damn Chicago' as Mary Garden did?" she was asked. "No, Mary Garden," sniffed the Tetrazzini, "she damned Chicago because the theatre was only half full when she sang there."

* * *

Some one suggested to Miss Frances Starr that she ought to have a second play in her repertory to be substituted in places where village prejudice is raised in opposition to the truths made known in "The Easiest Way."

"I have already attended to that," she said.

"Indeed. And what is the play?"

"It is a dramatization of 'How to Know the Wild Flowers,'" answered Miss Starr.

* * *

T. Percival Wygney, a player in "Pomander Walk," has written a drama called "As It Was in the Beginning," which has been accepted by Messrs. Liebler & Co. In it Mr. Wygney relates how prosperity interfered with the happiness of one married couple. He was a member of the quartet of Englishmen who wrote "Sunday" for Miss Barrymore.

* * *

Miss Elsie Ferguson has had another mishap. "Dolly Madison" left its audiences quite cool and so it is to be withdrawn for this season at least.

Edwin Foy is to take up William Collier's old role of the jailed husband in "The Man from Mexico" which will be revived as "The Sleeping Car Conductor," with music by the inevitable Hoschna.

* * *

Miss Helen Ware is to be starred this month, and no doubt longer, by David Belasco in a play by W. C. De Mille called "The Woman." Her associates will be Miss Jane Peyton, William Courtleigh, Cuyler Hastings, Edwin Holt, William Harrigan, Guy Nichols, John Ellis, and Carlton Macy.

* * *

Frances Starr had a novel written about her and the manner in which she won her first stage successes at the Castle Square Theatre. Soon after that experience David Belasco had made her a star in "The Rose of the Rancho."

* * *

Ethel Barrymore is anxious to acquire a repertoire of modern plays, and to give them all in the course of each long engagement. Charles Frohman has practically assented to the plan.

* * *

Charles Dalton, who is leading man with Ethel Barrymore and will appear with her in both "Alice Sit by the Fire" and "The Twelve Pound Look" at the Hollis Street Theatre, is the English actor who first became prominent on this side of the Atlantic from his work as Marcus Superbus in "The Sign of the Cross."

* * *

Sallie Fisher, who is the leading lady in "The Girl in the Train" with Frank Daniels, is a graduate from the musical comedies of the Chicago type of popularity, and has played here in them.

* * *

Maude Knowlton, who plays Mrs. Crane in "The Commuters" was a member of Stuart Robson's company, when the famous comedian played "The Henrietta."

* * *

Olga Steck, who has an important role in Fritzi Scheff's support, has never been heard in Boston—she comes from the coast.

* * *

When "Mlle. Rosita" is presented at the Shubert to-morrow night it will be Eugene O'Brien's first appearance in opera. Last season he was Ethel Barrymore's leading man.

* * *

Brandon Hurst, who plays the role of the Marquis Pascal de Fondras in support of Mrs. Leslie Carter in "Two Women," was for a number of years an officer in the British army, serving in India and South Africa. He left home when a lad in his teens and when he left the service he was a sergeant-major in the King's First Dragoon Guards, a troop of rough riders.

* * *

Mrs. Leslie Carter is taking great interest in the Teachers' Equal Pay movement. The temperamental actress can see no reason why women should not receive as large remuneration for their services as men, especially as it is upon their shoulders falls the most delicate part of the education of children.

* * *

John Cumberland, who plays Mr. Colton in "The Commuters" at the Park Theatre, is the author of several plays, among them "The Suburbanites," which had a stock production in Worcester last Summer.

* * *

Maud Durand, the negro "mammy" in "The Nigger," first essayed a colored dialect part during the Boston run of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," when that classic was presented here with an all star cast, headed by Wilton Lackaye and Theodore Roberts.

HER AUTO CHURCH.

Mary Young Gets Spiritual Inspiration from Real Nature.

"What do I like best to do on Sunday?" returned Mary Young the other day in answer to an inquiry. "Well, you know that there is generally an opinion that actors are not church-goers, and to some extent it is true, for the strain of two performances a day, not to mention rehearsals, is something that inclines even the best of us to the proverbial extra forty winks on Sunday morning. And when breakfast is over, then its usually too late to think of church going!

"As a matter of fact, especially at this time of year, and a little later in the season, what is there better and more inspiring and more spiritual than a leisurely automobile jaunt through the many beautiful parkways and drives about Boston. Really there is nothing that makes me happier than a little trip through woodland roads, when nature is alive with the promise of Spring, and the trees and flowers are bursting into bloom. How can we better spend a Sunday than in such rest as this, with the woods springing green from the river to the skyline, and when everything seems the perfection of beauty?

"Sometimes I go to church, but when I want the real satisfaction of Sunday, I take to the woods, literally and figuratively. Although I like my work at the Castle Square, I want to get away from it once in a while, and on Sunday comes my opportunity."

Coming Events

"McFadden's Flats" will be among the April attractions at the Grand Opera House.

* * *

The children's [illegible] week of April 3 at the Castle Square will be given to a revival of the famous play of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which, it will be remembered, is a dramatization of Mrs. [illegible] equally popular story of the same name. In it Miss Henriette McDaniel, who has made such a hit as Peter [illegible] "The End of the Bridge," will appear as the title character.

COMEDIAN'S TROUBLES.

Hard to Be Up to Date, Says Frank Daniels

"It's getting so a comedian has to lie awake nights in order to keep up to date," declares Frank Daniels of "The Girl in the Train."

"Times are pretty swift for us," he continued. "We just about got used to the mother-in-law joke when [illegible] fashional. We had a lot of good [illegible] about divorce when along comes the telephones and phonographs and typewriters [illegible] That was a [illegible] for [illegible] adding machines. We had to put on the high gear to keep up. And [illegible] flying machines [illegible] Why I can't even [illegible] [illegible] own jokes."

WOMEN HAPPIER.

Feel All Emotions Far More Keenly Than Men.

The question, "What is woman's happiest period of life," was put to Mrs. Leslie Carter the other day.

"The question [illegible] asked," she replied, [illegible]

Do You Get Me, Old Chap?

By Our Team of Titled Comedians, Lord Camoys and Hon. Bobby Beresford

(Copyright 1911 by American Journal Examiner, Great Britain Rights Reserved)

Overheard at the Waldoria-Astorf Cafe the Other Night.

LORD CAMOYS—I say, Bobby, old chap, d'ye remember the awnswer to the riddle, "When is a door not a door?"

HON BOBBY—Er-er-er—When the bally thing's ajar isn't it?

LORD CAMOYS—Well, y'know, that's what I thought But this awfternoon one of those deuced press men was in here. He said that was the awnswer in America, but that in England we say, "When it's hawlf open." When it's ajar was the way I remembered it, but this press chap was so bally cocksure about it, y'know, that I thought I'd awsk you

HON. BOBBY—Perhaps he was spoofing you, Camoys. Y'know these Yankees have an idea we Englishare no sense of humor. Haw! haw! Why, 'pon my honor ,old chap, if they printed in Punch some of the jokes I've heard since I've been here, we'd jolly soon write to the Times about it'

LORD CAMOYS—The only funny thing I've heard since I've been here, Bobby, was the story that you had trounced Drexel—eh, what!

HON. BOBBY—I get you, old chap. But, seriously, this Yankee humor is extr'ordinarily silly. A fellow was telling me the other night that an Englishman and an American were walking down a country road, a bally lane, y'know, when all at once they came to a finger-post. And underneath it, y'know, was written: "If you cawn't read this sign, step into the blacksmith's shop and awsk him to read to you."

LORD CAMOYS—Oh, I say, what a sell, y'know. If the blacksmith was there, what use the sign, eh, what?

HON BOBBY—But that's not the point, old chap. When the American saw the sign he chuckled, but the Englishman wasn't moved a bit. But, quite an hour afterward the Englishman burst right out lawfing. "What's up now?" awaked the American. "Why that sign we pawssed some time ago," said the Englishman; "Suppose the blacksmith was out, y'know!" You see Camoys, that is supposed to be a whack at the English man. Took him an hour to catch the point, y'know

LORD CAMOYS Well, Bobby that's all tommy-rot An hour! Why, I've read jokes in Punch that these cute Yankees wouldn't get in a month. It takes me quite awhile sometimes to get them my self. Sometimes, y'know, I'll burst right out lawf in a and a fellow will say: "Er-er-er, what's the jolly joke Camoys?" And I'll say, "Oh, I was just h wfing at something I read in Punch"

HON. BOBBY—I know and then he'll say, "How long ago?"

LORD CAMOYS—The trouble with these American jokes is that they haven't much meaning Now our jokes usually have a double meaning, and that makes them extr'ordin'rily easier If a chap doesn't get both meanings right off he's quite sure sooner or later to get one of them.

HON BOBBY—Richte, Camoys Now here's an American joke I heard the other night Let me see you get it' Er-er-er, are you ready, old boy?"

LORD CAMOYS—Wait till we get another peg, old top. Waitah! Waitah! Two pegs.

HON BOBBY—Note, are you ready, old chap? I warn you, it's coming.

LORD CAMOYS—Fire away, Bobby, fire away

HON BOBBY—Eh-er-er, NOW. A fellow received a letter from a Black Hand Society, reading: "Unless you send us $1,000 we will kidnap your wife." And the fellow wired back: "Your figure is rawther high, but your proposition is interesting."

LORD CAMOYS—Rawther good, rawther good; not rippin', y'know, but rawther good

HON. BOBBY—But do you get me, old boy?

LORD CAMOYS—Of course. Er-er-er, when the kidnapers came to collect the ransom the fellow would have a constable there and jolly quick give them in charge.

HON. BOBBY—O, no, no, no, my boy. N-no. You don't get me at all. Don't you see, if the kidnapers told the fellow their scheme in advance he would send his wife away before they could get her

LORD CAMOYS—Yes, yes, now I see. But I'd have gotten it in time, Bobby, I got one off myself on a pressman this awfternoon, by Jove Didn't think I could do it

HON. BOBBY—What was it, Camoys?

LORD CAMOYS—Why, he awaked me to give him a good exawmple of Punch humor, and quick as a flash I replied: "An uppercut!" Haw! haw! But, 'pon my word, the silly ass, I don't believe he got me at all.

HON. BOBBY—Haw! haw! Perfectly rippin', perfectly rippin', old boy I say, you're a humorist

LORD CAMOYS—Thought it rawther extr'ordin'ry! Lemme myself.

HON. BOBBY—Jeeles told me a rawther good one the other day Er-er-er, about a bally heart breaking sermon of an Easter service Haw! haw! You get me, old chap? It was so bally touchin' that everyone in the church was moved to tears except one bally bounder And when they awaked him he' haw! why he was not in tears like the rest of the congregation what do you think he said?

LORD CAMOYS—That he was deaf!

HON. BOBBY—Oh, no, no, no, dear chap. How stupid He answered that he belonged to another parish.

LORD CAMOYS—Rippin', positively rippin'! Haw haw! I thought at first he was deaf

HON BOBBY—Well, so did I, old chap, till Jeeles explained it to me, y'know. It makes me think of a rippin' story a pressman told me It seems a Boston cabby drove a fellow around for several hours. And awfterwhile when he opened the door his fare had disappeared, made himself scarce, y'know, when the cabby wasn't looking But, haw! haw! there on the seat was a dead cat Naturally, y'know, the cabby was jolly well indignant at such spoofin' and he drove to the nearest police station. He carried the cat in to the head constable and said he: "Awfter drivin' a bally bounder about for several hours, y'know, and not bein' paid I opened me cab door, find the rotter gone and this on the seat." Whereupon the head notable looks carefully over a number of books nd says he, haw! haw! "WELL, THE LAW IS THAT IF NO ONE CLAIMS IT AWFTER TEN DAYS IT'S YOURS!" Haw! haw!

LORD CAMOYS— But, dear boy, what could the cabby do with it?

HON. BOBBY—Well now, Camoys, I never thought of that, y'know Quite true! What could he do with it?

LORD CAMOYS—Then here's another silly joke by Mark Twain, I believe A chap left his club one night pretty tight—do you get me? The moon was shining brightly When he reached his home you know, the steps were going wildly around of course you know they only seemed to be going around This chap waited patiently until they came within his immediate proximity and then made a perfectly reckless leap for them. He landed safely and got indoors. On hands and knees he commenced to crawl upstairs. Time awfter time he would get hawlf way up and then jolly well tumble to the bottom again By dint of extr'ordin'ry endeavor he eventually reached the top and was so proud of this achievement that he visibly stood erect But pride cometh before a fall, y'know—his foot slipped and down he went, the whole blighty. He was jolly well battered, bruised and stunned, I promise you When he opened his eyes and found himself with his arm around the newel post he exclaimed: "God pity the poor sailors out at sea a night like this!"

HON. BOBBY—I fail to get you, Camoys

LORD CAMOYS—I fail to get it, too, Bobby There doesn't seem to be any point in it. Just because was a line to sit on and doesn't follow that there wasn't a rippin' storm at sea, does it bobby

HON BOBBY—Haw! haw! I get you now

LORD CAMOYS—Get what now?"

HON. BOBBY—Why, the point of that cabby and cat story. It was the head constable's cat!

LORD CAMOYS—Of course, old chap. Now we get it. Haw! haw!

How to Get a Husband!

One of the Screamingly Funny Scenes from Margaret Anglin's New Comedy, "Green Stockings," by A. E. W. Mason and George Fleming, now running at the Tremont Theatre. Published by permission of the producers.

CELIA FARADAY, the eldest of four daughters of William Faraday of Faraday Park, is the only one of the four who is neither married nor engaged. There is a custom whereby unmarried girls wear green stockings at the weddings of their sisters. Celia has already worn them at two weddings, and at the beginning of the play "Green Stockings" at the Tremont Theatre, announcement is made of the betrothal of yet another sister, carrying with it the inevitable green stockings for Celia.

Following the expression of sympathy that is clumsily offered ot her by the new fiance, Celia announces that she also has become engaged to a Colonel John Smith, who that morning sailed for the war in Africa with his regiment. The engagement in her case is an invention, but it immediately absolves her from wearing the dreaded green stockings. In order to follow up her white lie, Celia had to take into her confidence her Aunt Ida of Chicago. Celia promises her aunt that the engagement shall be put an end to at the end of a few months by an announcement in the "Times" of the Colonel's death.

The announcement is duly sent to the "Times." Celia's father and the rest of the family see it and endeavor to keep the news from her until they can hit upon a plan to "break it to her gently."

AUNT IDA—Ah, the "Times."

FARADAY—Yes, the "Times." (He begins to look at it. Aunt Ida is excited and uneasy.) Never saw a paper like this. There's absolutely nothing in this paper.

GRICE—Never saw a newspaper with anything in it. What about the Death Duties?

EVELYN (picking up outer sheet, which Faraday has torn off)—Ah—Madge! Mrs. Hardiman has got a baby.

MADGE—Not really——?

TARVER—What kind of a baby?

GRICE—There's only one kind of baby.

AUNT IDA—Isn't there—isn't there any other news, Evelyn?

EVELYN—No, dear. Absolutely noth——Ohhh——(she gives a shrill scream and drops paper on floor.)

FARADAY—God bless my soul! What's the matter? What's the matter?

MADGE—What is the matter, Evelyn?

GRICE—Really, Mrs. Trenchard, you ought not to startle people like that. It's selfish. What's the news—eh?

FARADAY (taking paper)—I tell you (Turns paper over, reads what Evelyn saw, sits down heavily.) Poor girl——!

MADGE—Father!

FARADAY—Read. (Hands paper to Madge.)

AUNT IDA (of Chicago), who is aware of and is an unwilling partner in Celia's deception—You must never "kill" your husband again, Celia. I consider your whole attitude most immoral.

PHYLLIS—What is it?

MADGE—Oh, Phyllis!

PHYLLIS—That does seem cruel, doesn't it

GRICE—People ought not to keep news to themselves. (Takes paper away. Reads.) Phew! Well——

TARVER—Will somebody kindly tell me what has happened?

GRICE—Always thinking of yourself, Tarver. (Reads.) "On October 11, of wounds at Berbera, Somaliland, Colonel Smith

TARVER—And the news is just three weeks old. That's pretty rough, isn't it

FARADAY—Yes. It's hard. I've been inquiring about rooms at the club. I—I didn't expect this.

PHYLLIS—It's more terribly and cruelly hard upon Celia than it would be upon any other woman

GRICE—Why?

PHYLLIS—Because—— Don't you remember the night when she told us of her engagement? It was eight months ago

EVELYN—Yes, February the 11th

PHYLLIS—She said then that her betrothal would make an extraordinary difference in her life

EVELYN—Then she wasn't happy. Now she is

MADGE—And when she is, this blow falls without even a telegram to break the force of it

PHYLLIS—It's too horrible. Nothing but an announcement in the "Times" sent by post

MADGE—On October the 11th——

TARVER—Of wounds

FARADAY—At Berbera——

EVELYN—Somaliland——

GRICE—Colonel Smith.

TARVER—My word. If Celia withdraws from the contest, I am done.

GRICE—Wasn't that the front doorbell?

MADGE—Oh! Who is to break the news to her?

GRICE—Tarver

TARVER—Me! (In horror.) I think it needs a woman's voice—a woman's gentle fingers?

FARADAY—Good gracious! It isn't going to be broken to her in the deaf and dumb alphabet!

MADGE—Let us leave father to tell the sad news to her alone. (They all get up at once.)

FARADAY—No! No! I—I might break down. Some one outside the family will have more command over their emotions. Grice, for instance——

GRICE—No! No! I have an idea! Let us all break it to her simultaneously as she comes into the room. I will give the signal, one, two, three, and then we'll all say together, "Colonel Smith is dead."

AUNT IDA—Hadn't you better leave it to me?

MADGE—Of course.

FARADAY—You are the very person.

GRICE—Hush!

PHYLLIS (all go for "Times")—The "Times"! (Takes "Times" off table. Grice lumbers back to his chair and sits, thrusting the "Times" up his back, enter Celia.)

PHYLLIS—Have some tea, Celia?

CELIA—No, thank you.

MR. FARADAY (Brokenly)—Celia, my child.

CELIA FARADAY (Miss Anglin), reading notice in "The Times," inserted by herself, of the death of her make-believe fiance, Col. Smith—You were all trying to keep this from me!

TARVER—Did you manage to catch Wilson?

PHYLLIS—Bobby!

MADGE—Just now, too!

CELIA—He was out. But, Bobby, I bought you some throat lozenges and a box to keep them in.

TARVER—It's awfully good of you, Celia, to think of me in this way—just at this time, too.

PHYLLIS—You had better have some tea, Celia.

GRICE—Cake, with plums in it.

CELIA—No, thank you. (Laughing.) You are all very kind to me this afternoon.

PHYLLIS—Not a bit.

FARADAY—Not unusualy so!

GRICE (eating cake in his agitation)—Cake—with plums in it!

CELIA—Is there any news in the "Times"?

FARADAY—"Times"! Now, where has the "Times" got to? (All begin to look for "Times.")

TARVER—No, I don't think there was anything, was there, Admiral?

GRICE—No, no. Nothing very lively. (He turns and the "Times" falls out from his back.)

CELIA—But that is the "Times."

FARADAY—So it is!

GRICE—Now, where did that come from?

CELIA—May I see it?—If everybody else has finished? (Reads.) Births—deaths—and marriages. I always look first at that, you know——

FARADAY—Ah-h——

CELIA—How—very—amusing!

PHYLLIS (thunderstruck)—Celia!!

FARADAY—God bless my soul!!

CELIA—"On October 11th——"

EVELYN—Eleventh——!

CELIA—"the wife of George Robert Hardiman—a son." Why didn't anybody tell me Mrs. Hardiman had another baby?

FARADAY—I wouldn't go into that, Celia. I wouldn't pursue that line of inquiry any further—if I were you, my dear

CELIA—I must just see if anybody's dead, father——. (Aunt Ida has meanwhile joined her. Celia puts out a hand surreptitiously and pulls Aunt Ida near her. She then lets the paper drop. Shuts her eyes and sinks slowly upon Aunt Ida's shoulder.)

MADGE—Ah—darling Celia——

AUNT IDA—Hus-sh——

FARADAY—Celia——! My child——!

AUNT IDA—Hus-sh——! I think—she will—say something soon.

CELIA (raising a flushed, quivering face)—You were all—trying to keep this from me——! (She speaks in a tone of angelic sweetness; smiles heartbrokenly and then buries her face in Aunt Ida's shoulder. Her shoulders are seen to heave and quiver.)

PHYLLIS—Ah—Celia——!

AUNT IDA—Wouldn't it be better—if you all—left her alone with me?

FARADAY—Quite so. Quite so. Come, Admiral. Come, children. I cannot—even a father cannot—rob you of this sacred privilege of comforter, dear Ida. Come, Admiral!

CELIA—Wait! I only want to say, dear father, I want to tell you that I don't mean—this news—to make any difference outwardly. You—never knew that I knew—about him. . . . I can't—can't expect you to understand what I've lost . . . And so I don't see what would be gained by any parade of distress. . . . I propose to go about just as I have been doing—during the last eight months. . . .

TARVER—That's splendid of you, Celia. It's much the wisest way after all not to give way to sorrow. So you'll go and see Wilson to-morrow, won't you?

GRICE—He's extraordinarily selfish, Never mind Wilson, Celia, but I think you are right not to cut yourself off from your friends. So I shall see you at my house at 8:15. Tarver, 8 o'clock sharp!

(They all leave Celia with Aunt Ida.)

CELIA (hysterically)—On the eleventh of October—A nt Ida——

AUNT IDA—"Of wounds——"

CELIA—"At Berbera——"

AUNT IDA (choking)—"Somaliland——"

CELIA (with an explosion)—Colonel Smith!!! (They rock backward and forward, helpless with laughter.)

(It turns out that there is a real Colonel Smith, who, in order to investigate the report of his death, calls on the Faradays and as Colonel Vavasour establishes himself as the surviving friend of the mythical Colonel Smith. He tells Celia details of the mythical one and quizzes her to his heart's content. By an accident Celia discovers that the trinkets Vavasour has brought to her from Africa as from the dead Colonel Smith are his own. In a flash she realizes that the visitor has been making fun of her, and soon is satisfied that he is no other than Colonel Smith himself. The final scene of the last act is a charming one in the park, when the Colonel offers his hand and heart to Celia, who becomes happy in the possession of a real fiance.)

BEST STORIES TOLD LAST WEEK IN BOSTON

Standing Room

By Edward M. Barron of Blackstone street.

I WENT out to Norwood recently and was walking briskly along when I came upon an actor of some prominence, whom I knew very well.

His black garb denoted that he had met with some bereavement and he spoke of it the moment after we had shaken hands.

"I've come from my father's funeral," he said. After I had expressed my sympathy, he continued:

"I had everything in the funeral arrangements just as father would have liked it done.

"You are very well known," I ventured. "I suppose there were a great many people at the church"

"Many!" he exclaimed with a show of pride. "Why, old chap, we just turned 'em away."

Evidence Gone

By Senator Frank X. Quigley of Holyoke

THE young attorney appeared as counsel for the defence for a druggist who had been charged with selling liquor illegally. The damning evidence of this was a bottle half full of a liquid that appeared to be rye whiskey. The novice attorney called upon three patrolmen and the sergeant, who appeared for prosecution, to make sure that it was whiskey by sampling it. Each took a good swig at the bottle and each swore it was the real stuff. A half pint still remained in the bottle. The young lawyer picked it up and said:

"Your honor, this stuff looks like whiskey. It smells like whiskey, but does it taste like whiskey? That is the question." Then suddenly putting the bottle to his lips he made a desperate effort and drained every drop of the liquor. "Your honor," he said, as he put the bottle down, "I have tasted it and I can assure you that it is not whiskey."

The druggist was declared guilty and was fined $100, but when the case came before the higher court on his appeal it was thrown out. There was no evidence. The young lawyer had drunk the last drop

No Mistake

A good one by John Pollock, the well-known press agent.

MUTT, the great comedian, and Jeff, the celebrated humorist, arrived in the same town for their shows one day. When Jeff, with his company, got in, his eyes lit upon a poster announcing that Mutt would be playing that very night at a rival house and his resentment knew no bounds. He read the announcement from end to end and then turned to a quiet appearing sort of chap near by

"Say," asked Jeff "have you seen this fellow's show?" and he pointed to the poster

"I should say I have!" was the reply

"How's this critter Mutt in it?"

"Out er sight. He's so funny he'd make you split yer s des laughin'."

"Is he as good as Jeff?" ventured Jeff

"Licks him to smithereens!" came the answer

Jeff looked at the chap sternly and then said: "I am Jeff, sir!"

"I know you are," said the other cheerily. "I'm Mutt!"

Beauty First

Told at the State House by a Representative from Hampden County.

I WENT down to Providence recently and naturally dropped in at the capitol to see things in action. I was introduced to Edmund Walker, the Democratic House leader, and while we were chatting Representative Marshall of Cumberland came up.

"Say," said Marshall, "it seems too bad that all you Democrats are seated together here. A little argument sometimes convinces a man that he is in the wrong and if the members were intermingled it might produce good results"

"I am aware of that," said the Democratic leader, "but you see there seems to be a desire to keep all the good-looking men together and I guess we'll have to put up with the present arrangements."

The Limit

By a physician of Grace Hospital.

I HAD a woman patient here the other day and I consider that she made me a very clever answer. It developed that she had a throat affliction, the tonsils being enlarged. After asking her to stick her tongue out a little further several times, she leaned back in her chair, laughed heartily, and said:

"Doctor, I guess you think there is no end to a woman's tongue"

Knew It All

They are telling this story at the Wells Memorial Building in Washington street, where labor leaders congregate.

CHARLES E. O'DONNELL, business agent of the Barbers' Union, can hardly walk along the street without being "braced" by some "panhandler," since Charles has a countenance that marks him as being a man of sympathetic tendencies. The down and out chap is pretty certain to get something from him, too.

A few days ago Mr O'Donnell secured a typewriter and set forth to learn to operate it himself. He was picking away at the thing when a friend entered, regarded him for a moment and then said.

"Say, Charles, you ought to learn the 'touch system.'"

"I'm fully acquainted with that method," was the reply. "I was 'touched' seven times this morning in Washington street, and each time it cost me a dime."

Obeying Orders

By Lester Ritchie of Randolph, Who Has an Extensive Acquaintance with Stage Folk.

TOM MALCOLM, who is making such a hit with his Scotch songs at the Bijou Dream, was coming from New York a short time ago, the seat in front of him being occupied by a little miss who turned to him at each stopping place with the query: "Is this Providence?"

When the Rhode Island city was at length reached she did not rise to leave the car. Mr. Malcolm thereupon leaned over and notified her

"Oh, thank you," she said as she unfolded the paper that covered a box containing a dainty lunch "Mama told me to be sure and feed the kitten when we got to Providence," and she pointed out a wicker basket at her side the small opening in the cover revealing the presence of an angora.

Hopeless

Told during the noon hour at the big building under construction at the corner of Tremont and West streets.

A WEST END contractor met with an injury which caused his whole body to be thrown awry as his spine had become affected, yet with rare pluck he went about his duties in the building line.

The other day an applicant for a job was seen in conversation with him. The man finally turned away with a disgusted look on his face, meeting with other men who were bent upon seeking employment, too.

"It's no use fellows," he said, as he stopped to chat with them. "I hit the boss up for a job and do you know what he said? 'You just wait till I get straightened out, my man,' says he, 'and I may have something for you.' Why, anyone looking at him would know that he'll never get straightened out again."

Not Needed

By the Undertaker.

YOU may know that the most unpopular man in a court room when a jury is being selected is an undertaker. He is viewed with distrust by everybody. Where a capital offence is charged, this distrust becomes prodigious. Hence it has come to be known in our profession that undertakers are practically immune as jurors. Hence my little shot:

I was once impanelled in a murder case. The Court didn't get very far along with the questions.

"What is your occupation?"

"I am an undertaker."

It wasn't long before the counsel for the defence said:

"Well, I guess we haven't got a job around here for you."

Automobile Etiquette

(Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

WHEN your automobile overturns, leave your seat at once.

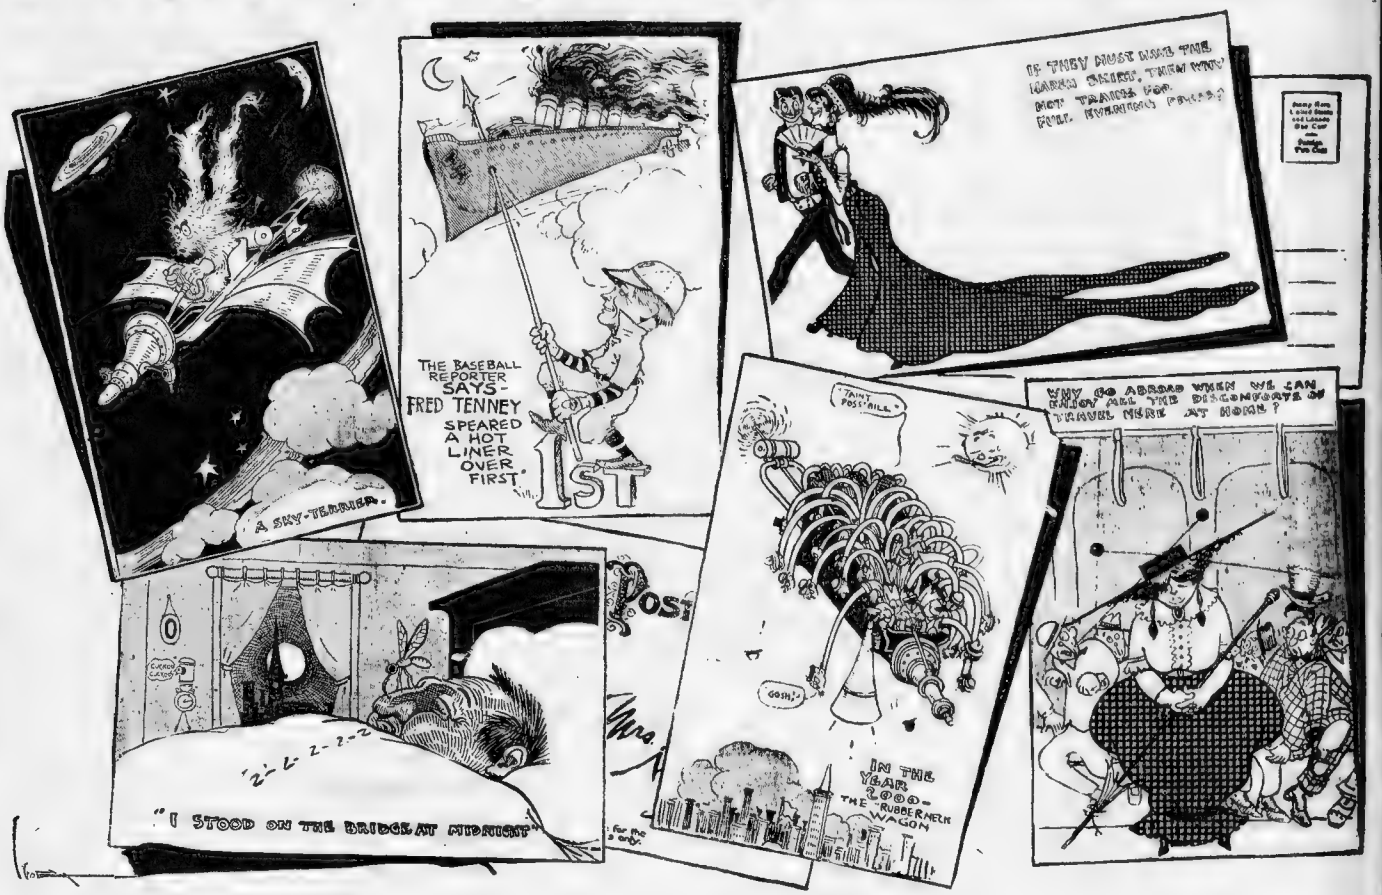
Always chew gum, thus having it ready to mend a tire puncture with.

When motoring on Commonwealth avenue, make it a rule to run into some swell people. Afterward you can truthfully say, "Oh, yes, I have met them."

Always carry a flask of high-proof brandy with you. When your gasolene tank is low you can use the brandy for emergency, as it helps while away the time while the chauffeur is walking two miles to get more gasolene.

Too many ladies crossing the street pause to see what the women in the autos are wearing, when they should be making a mental note of the number of the car, so as to remember what hit them.

OUR COMIC POST CARDS--ANOTHER BATCH NEXT SUNDAY



OUR COZY CORNER---Foolish Questions Answered Here

Conducted by Aunt Dotty

Many a dear girl would be quite attractive, to all outward appearances, were it not for her face. To-day your Aunt Dotty will endeavor to reply to a few yearning hearts who have confided their troubles with her.

ANNA LINE—It is indeed too bad your eyebrows are not mates. Your only salvation now is to become a brunette once more, then darken your eyebrows and mate them up with Sunset Stove Polish.

* * *

MISS G. WOTTERSITE—Why don't you set a mouse-trap for that mole on your cheek?

* * *

LITTLE PAIN-IN-THE-FACE—After gazing at your photograph for fully half a second I agree with you fully. Mature consideration of the problem has led me to the only proper remedy for it. Nothing except a massage with a steam roller will improve it unless you wear a mask.

* * *

MISS TALKER—You say you have too much chin. Honesty is the best bluff. But why worry? Do you think you are the only woman with too much chin? To be "different" you should reverse it. However, smile twice as much and talk ninety per cent. less and every one will forget your chin.

* * *

MISS RAVENLOX—The best cure for blackheads is peroxide.

* * *

GLADYCE—You are quite right. If he has married some one else he does not love you. But do not despair, he may—later.

ANSWERS AND ADVICE.

DEER ANT DOTTI—i have just saw that lovely pikture of your sweet fase and i know you will help me. i have ben merried too weeks and my husban insists on eating with his knife. is it proper?

LIL PEECH.

You dear Lil Peach, from what we can judge from your letter we should say it was quite proper for him to eat with his knife, as he stands a better chance of cutting his throat in that manner.

DEAR AUNT DOTTY—I am awfully worried about my husband. Only a week after we were married he began eating cloves. Now I know cloves are harmful, and I tell him so, but he only laughs. Why do you suppose he comes home every night with his mouth full of cloves?

IMA SIMPELTUNN

Because, Ima, because he (oh, we hate to do this)—because he likes them.

DEAR AUNT DOTTY—We have been married nearly a month now, and my husband always gave me his pay envelope without opening it, but last Saturday he opened it and had taken out fifteen cents before he gave it to me. What shall I do?

IDA KNOUGH

This is terrible, Ida, to shatter your sweet young love in such a manner. We advise you to get the mean thing in a corner and choke him until he gives you back them fifteen cents.

AFTER MARRIAGE

AFTER marriage limit the honeymoon to three weeks. Any one will tell you that "Three Weeks" is the limit. Some try to make a honeymoon last six months. Why bluff? Why attempt the impossible? Why dissemble?

THEN will come the family jars. Temper is not preserved in family jars. Some ask, "How avoid them?" The answer comes back right hot off the bat, "They cannot be avoided." There was once a married couple who had no family jars, but they were not married to each other.

LONG engagements are not good, either in love or war—this is tautological—and a short engagement of a month is better for every one except the florist, jeweller and confectioner.

BUT the average engagement should last at least a month. This will enable the girl to put a Pinkerton on the track of her intended, so she will thoroughly understand how many wives he has. At the same time it is a poor rule that won't work going and coming. Meanwhile this month enables the young man to learn from financial experts just how much he may expect to gain from her father's estate.

DIVORCE will not solve the problem, and, besides, one should know it is much more satisfactory to quarrel with one's own husband or wife than with mere strangers.

FAMILY COUNSEL.

MRS. GNUSTILE—While dictating replies to invitations to your secretary do not make side remarks. We knew of an instance where a woman got the following note: "Mrs. B'Jones begs to acknowledge the invitation of Mrs. G. Whizz to her musicale on the 11th and to gratefully (oh, dear, they ain't much, but I suppose I'll have to go on account of Henry's business) accept same."

MRS. DEE VORCEE—Yes, it is certainly bad form not to recognize your former husbands. If your present husband objects, get another.

OLIVER SHIVVER—The best way to get rid of fever and ague is to shake it.

G. RAY DORN—For your dizzy spells take a long walk around several blocks, drink a quart of clam broth and chauffeur an aqua car.

FUSSY—Do not become frightened when you have palpitation of the heart. It is rarely fatal. About the time your heart ceases to palpitate, you may worry. If your heart palpitates because of love, disregard former and worry the limit.

WISEWIFE—You are right, keep it on hand. A full decanter in the home frequently prevents a full husband at the club.

My Ole Man's Is a Subway Guard

MY ole man s a subway guard.
Down dere in de swim
He kin boost de boobs in hard.
Ain't no guy kin git him jarred.
He ain't skeered o' gittin' scarred
Not him

When de rush gits under way
He gits good en grim.
Spits into his mits, en say
When some green galoot gits gay—
My ole man give up de fray?
Not him

My ole man jest heaves a sigh,
Bubbles to de brim.
Lands a Maiden lullyby
On the apex o' de guy
Think my pop nd blink en eye
Not him

Pop wiz in de ring before.
Dat's why he's in trim
Gee, one day I stood en saw
When dere wan't no room fer more.
Pop pound schen thru de door
Dat's him

Boys, I got one awful hunch
If I ain't too slim,
When I grown I'll eat my lunch.
Down dere wid de ole man's bunch.
If I has de proper punch,
Like him.

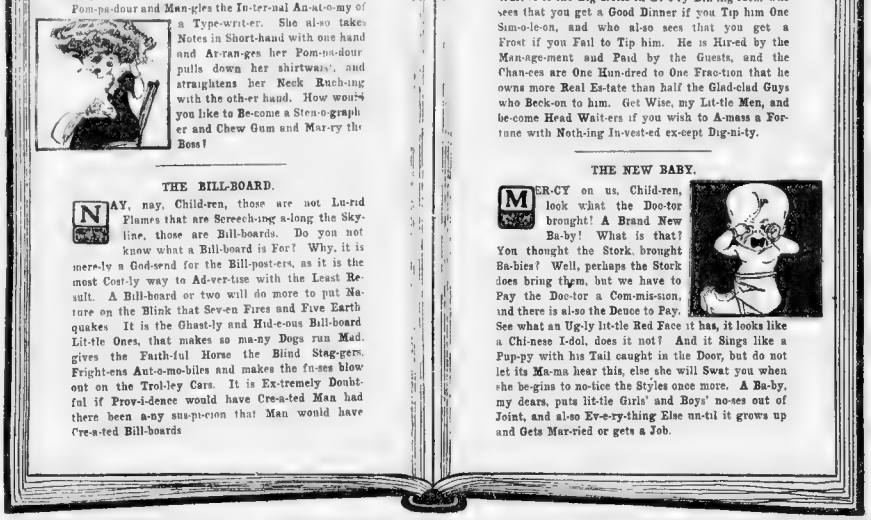
First Reader for Second Childhood

(Copyright, 1911, by American Journal-Examiner, Great Britain Rights Reserved.)



THE STEN-O-GRAPH-ER.

IS not this a Sten-o-graph-er? It is, Child-ren indeed it is. And now, Lit-tle Ones, what do you know a-bout a Sten-o-graph-er? What is it? You Hate to Tell? Tut-tut. A Sten-o-graph-er is a Weird Crea-ture who wears a Fear-ful Pom-pa-dour and Man-gles the In-ter-nal An-at-o-my of a Type-writ-er. She al-so takes Notes in Short-hand with one hand and Ar-ran-ges her Pom-pa-dour pulls down her shirtwaist, and straightens her Neck Ruch-ing with the oth-er hand. How would you like to Be-come a Sten-o-graph-er and Chew Gum and Mar-ry the Boss?

THE BILL-BOARD.

NAY, nay, Child-ren, those are not Lu-rid Flames that are Screech-ing a-long the Sky-line, those are Bill-boards. Do you not know what a Bill-board is For? Why, it is mere-ly a God-send for the Bill-post-ers, as it is the most Cost-ly way to Ad-ver-tise with the Least Re-sult. A Bill-board or two will do more to put Na-ture on the Blink that Sev-en Fires and Five Earth quakes. It is the Ghast-ly and Hid-e-ous Bill-board Lit-tle Ones, that makes so ma-ny Dogs run Mad, gives the Faith-ful Horse the Blind Stag-gers, Fright-ens Aut-o-mo-biles and makes the fi-nes blow out on the Trol-ley Cars. It is Ex-tremely Doubt-ful if Prov-i-dence would have Cre-a-ted Man had there been a-ny sus-pi-cion that Man would have Cre-a-ted Bill-boards

THE HEAD WAIT-ER.

BE Care-ful, Child-ren, you are now in the Pres-ence of His Fri-gid Dig-ni-ty, the Head Wait-er, Czar of all the Rush-ers. Of course, you know, Lit-tle Ones, that the Head Wait-er is the Big Noise in Ev-e-ry Din-ing-room who sees that you get a Good Dinner if you Tip him One Sim-o-le-on, and who al-so sees that you get a Frost if you Fail to Tip him. He is Hir-ed by the Man-age-ment and Paid by the Guests, and the Chan-ces are One Hun-dred to One Frac-tion that he owns more Real Es-tate than half the Glad-clad Guys who Beck-on to him. Get Wise, my Lit-tle Men, and be-come Head Wait-ers if you wish to A-mass a Fortune with Noth-ing In-vest-ed ex-cept Dig-ni-ty.

THE NEW BABY.

MER-CY on us, Child-ren, look what the Doc-tor brought! A Brand New Ba-by! What is that? You thought the Stork brought Ba-bies? Well, perhaps the Stork does bring them, but we have to Pay the Doc-tor a Com-mis-sion, and there is al-so the Deuce to Pay. See what an Ug-ly lit-tle Red Face it has, it looks like a Chi-nese I-dol, does it not? And it Sings like a Pup-py with his Tail caught in the Door, but do not let its Ma-ma hear this, else she will Swat you when she be-gins to no-tice the Styles once more. A Ba-by, my dears, puts lit-tle Girls' and Boys' no-ses out of Joint, and al-so Ev-e-ry-thing Else un-til it grows up and Gets Mar-ried or gets a Job.

A Few "Safe Hits" Before the Season Opens

(Copyright 1911 by American Journal-Examiner, Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

LUCKY.

"Jimmy always was lucky."
"Why?"
"Last year his grandmother really did die Opening Day."

A HAPPY OUTLOOK.

First Office Boy—I've got sixteen aunts, two grandmothers an' a great-grandmother.
Second Office Boy—Gee! Wot a lot o' baseball games you oughter see dis Summer.

CALLING THE "UMPS."

The busy man will soon forget
The price of wheat and cotton,
His chief concern will be to let
The umpire know he's "rotten."

THE OPEN SEASON FOR "DUCKS"

The high-ball season's nearly o'er.
Baseball will soon be here.
Big pitchers will be in demand
For ball clubs and for beer

BAD JUDGMENT BY THE PITCHER.

Following a Herculean swipe, Murphy had lined out the ball to deep centre field and he had made the circuit of the bases. Now, cap in hand, he stood bowing his acknowledgments to the delighted fans, for his run had won the game. But what of the opposing pitcher? Sick at heart, he sat lone on the bench.

"Never again," said he, bitterly, "will I deliver a corkscrew curve to a cross-eyed batsman."

BATTING AVERAGE TOO HIGH.

"I hear," said the president of the Upstart Baseball League, "that De Soakum is not going to pitch for your team this season."

"Your ears have not deceived you," replied the captain of the champion Invincibles. "He is not one of us."

"I am astonished. Why, he pitched well and had a batting average of 1.000 per cent."

"That's just the trouble. He's been on a bat every day since the first of January and hasn't struck out yet. His batting average is too high."

Gentlemen, Be Seated—

Introducing Our Entertainers This Evening, Tambo and Bones—By Carlyle Moore.

(Copyright 1911 by American Journal-Examiner, Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

TAMBO—Mr. Bones, can you tell me how many seeds dey is in a watermelon?

BONES—Sho, nat air watermelon ripe, Mr. Tambo.

TAMBO—Certainly, a ripe watermelon.

BONES—But am a question no gen'leman nb color kin answer.

TAMBO—Now, how do you figure that?

BONES—Dey ain't no bigger near sighted 'nough to count 'em.

TAMBO—Nonsense! After you have eat a the melon you sees a heap.

BONES—No, sah! Dey am in de middle.

TAMBO—Look here, Mr. Bones, why does you go to bed barefoot?

BONES—Kaise I ain't no button shoes to fit.

TAMBO—Why not lace shoes, then?

BONES—Cause I'm too modest t' wear 'em.

TAMBO—Too modest! But am a silly reason.

BONES—Go on! She ain't gonna wear 'em—

TAMBO—Who is she?

BONES—She is de only [illegible] in de ground.

TAMBO—Who is she?

BONES—She is [illegible]

TAMBO—Why not [illegible]

BONES—Cause I [illegible] she must be wid [illegible]

TAMBO—She must be wid [illegible]

BONES—Yas, sah, she is, sah! She done [illegible] name.

TAMBO—Speaking of money, Mr. Bones, if I have a dollar and you give me four mo', how many dollars will I have?

BONES—Ah'll tell yo' fo' mo' right now.

TAMBO—I'm all [illegible]

BONES—Yo' ought t' have a million.

TAMBO—Now, how do you figure dat, Mr. Bones?

BONES—Any man t' t kin git fo' dollar [illegible] one, he ain't nothin' stop 'em.

TAMBO—I didn't know you were so [illegible]

BONES—Dat remark am taboo.

TAMBO—What am de meaning o' dat, Mr. Bones?

BONES—Taboody knows dat's Den [illegible] "neck-ed."

TAMBO—I am not familiar with [illegible] Denmark.

BONES—Well, yo' used ter eat outen de same dish wid a Great Dane.

TAMBO—Mr. Bones, can you tell me why dese plain clothes men seb [illegible] her turn up at a riot or fracas of any sort?

BONES—Case dey allus run in de opposit direction from de [illegible]

TAMBO—I see, you think it is due to a defective [illegible]

BONES—Dat-das right, deceptive [illegible] No, sah, I said get on the police force—

TAMBO—It would be a miracle.

BONES—What's dat?

TAMBO—Don't you [illegible]

BONES—Not I speak to.

TAMBO—Let me explain it so you will never forget it. Supposin' I was on the top of a ten-story building [illegible]

BONES—But de only way some people kin git up in de world.

TAMBO—Don't interrupt. And I jumped off—to the street below, then I got up and walked away; what would you call that?

BONES—Ah—Ah calls it good for luck.

TAMBO—No! no! no.

BONES—An' got it! An' got it! Dey ain't no such [illegible]

TAMBO—Keep quiet, you're [illegible] of order.

BONES—Dat's correct.

TAMBO—And I jumped [illegible] walk.

BONES—What's it?

TAMBO—Did you get any [illegible] Suppose I would jump?

BONES—Ah'll tell yo' once mo' right now.

TAMBO—Now, you're stupid! Now for the third time.

BONES—Yo' ought t' do it again?

TAMBO—I'm done through, so you will understand.

BONES—Yo' jo' do dat jump free times?

TAMBO—Three times!

BONES—Ah, yo' got up an' walk away whar?

TAMBO—I walk away uninjured; now what do you call it?

BONES—Ah—Ah guess it mus' be a habit. Now, ef Ah wuz a policeman—

TAMBO—It would add another black mark to the force.

BONES—Dey know, Ah used ter forge.

TAMBO—I see, you have been a blacksmith.

BONES—Doan' yo' make no 'spressions 'bout mah [illegible]

TAMBO—You said you had hammered at a forge.

BONES—Ah never said hammer. Ah used a [illegible]

TAMBO—Can you tell me the bone of contention between the white race and the black race?

BONES—Ah kain't be sho', but Ah think et must be a chicken bone.

TAMBO—How do you make that out?

BONES—A white man los' a chicken an' th' colored man tole him he see coon tracks in his back yard that mornin'.

TAMBO—Well?

BONES—Well, the white man's been callin' nigger coon ever since. Th' other night Ah got inter a chicken coop an' all de hens wuz roostin' so high Ah couldn't reach 'em. Yo' see dey wuz on de high perch.

TAMBO—What did you do?

BONES—I gathered up th' coop.

TAMBO—That was pretty good.

BONES—An' den Ah foun' th' dog was fer me.

TAMBO—What did you do in defence?

BONES—Ah broke de legs.

TAMBO—In defence?

BONES—Yas, suh; when Ah wuz gettin' over it.

TAMBO—That was a bad game.

BONES—Et she wuz a shell game. Listen here. Did yo' all heah 'bout Henry See's chicken gettin' inter ol' uncy Hunt's coop?

TAMBO—Tell me about it?

BONES—Well, Henry See hunts for his hen in Henry Hunt's hennery; he sees th' hen, seizes it an' then hunts for Henery—

TAMBO—In Henry Hunt's hennery?

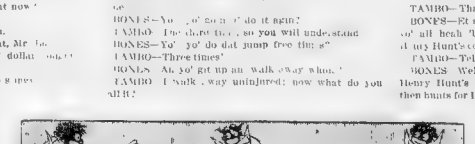
BONES—He seen Henry—

TAMBO—Henery See?

BONES—No, Henery Hunt.

TAMBO—Oh, Henery See hunts for Henery Hunt with the hen he seized in Henry's hennery—go on!

BONES—Yo' all know so dern much about et, finish it yo'se'f



Funny Stage Stories

WHEN Fred Niblo, the popular monologist, started in his profession, more than a decade ago, he found the task of attracting the attention of the booking agents to himself a hard one. He began by writing postal cards to each agent, each time increasing the size of the cards until they were so large as to compel attention.

This had no effect, so Niblo, in desperation sent applications and open dates on his collars, addressing them on one side and inserting postage. He also added a postscript as follows:

"If this does not avail me, I'll write on my cuffs next time."

And he surely did this, adding as a postscript, on the cuff:

"If this does not bring me work I'll write on my shirt next."

But the threat was enough. Niblo was booked at a salary of $50 a week and ever since he has prospered.

THOMAS DONNELLY was an old-time theatrical manager, who was always saying the proper thing at the proper time.

Once when business was particularly bad at the Grand Opera House, in New York, he was asked by the house superintendent for $5.

"What for?" growled Donnelly.

"I wish to purchase a new contrivance to facilitate the exodus of the audience in case of fire," the superintendent replied.

"Well, I like your nerve," shouted Donnelly. "Why should I spend $5 to help the audiences, such as they are, get out of my theatre? Kindly devote your energies and my money to some contrivance which will bring them into the house just now."

JAKE TANNENBAUM is a good, whole-souled, Teutonic gentleman who for nearly half a century has managed theatres in the South. He is a serious-minded man, but has a keen sense of humor.

On one occasion the manager of a traveling troupe, playing at one of Jake's theatres in Alabama, found himself in such financial straits that he couldn't pay his bills and get his company to the next town. So he went to Jake and pleaded for help. Jake told him that he had on several occasions extended financial assistance to suffering managers only to lose his money and their friendship as well.

"But I give you my word of honor that I will return you the money within thirty days if I am alive," assured the manager.

"You mean to say," asked Jake, "that if I loan you the money you will repay it in thirty days if you are not dead?"

"Yes," was the quick reply.

Jake advanced the money, and the company went on its way. The following Summer, as was his custom, Jake went to New York and appeared on the Rialto for the purpose of booking his attractions for the following season. This time it was noticed that he was in deep mourning and greatly depressed.

"A dear old friend of mine is dead," explained Jake.

"Who?" asked a friend, and Jake ventured the name of the manager he had befriended.

"Why, I saw him only yesterday. He is alive and well," said the friend.

"Impossible," answered Jake. "He told me in Alabama he would be dead in thirty days if he didn't return me some money I loaned him, and as he was a good fellow I am in mourning for him."

JOHN STETSON, one of the unique and most successful managers the stage ever saw, almost invariable waited all opening performances from the wings of the stage. One night a team of song and dance men were making their debut. They had been sent on suddenly by an agent because of a disappointment on the part of the regularly engaged team.

The team was very nervous and the appearance of Stetson in the wings did not tend to ease their anxiety.

After their first verse, Stetson was wild. He stormed and threatened, finally calling the frightened performers off the stage. They did not respond to this call, and Stetson ordered the stage hands to lower a drop on them, as there were no "hooks" in those days. As the team came off Stetson called out to them:

"What was the name of that song you fellows were trying to sing?"

"Where Can Those Sweet Voiced Canaries Be Heard," they answered. Stetson looked out at them with that one eye of his and said:

"I don't know, but you can go out to the box office and get one night's salary and take the rest of the week to find out!"

But, without any husbands around, can they raise the right kind of crops?

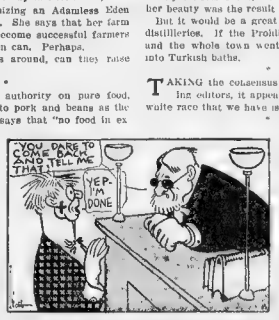
A SOCIETY woman, in a newspaper article, says five thousand dollars a year for dress isn't extravagant and that a woman is entitled to spend that amount annually on clothes. She certainly is, if her husband will let her get away with it.



It's an awful thing for a woman to come out in the public prints and hand out such ideas for the edification of our wives. Every woman who spends less than that reads that article, and when her husband comes home looks at him as if he is robbing her of what's coming to her.

From our point of view any woman that requires five thousand dollar's worth of clothes a year to make her look attractive ought to be ashamed to admit it.

WE are inclined to question the London beauty scientists who recommend bathing in wine to make one's skin beautiful.

Of course, we don't claim to be any authority on the matter of beauty, but if we have to depend upon wines and liquors to produce loveliness, we fear complexions. If one form of intoxicating liquors can beautify, why not the others to a less degree, so that if a poor girl aspires to beauty and cannot afford to swim around in wine she can at least send out for some beer and take a sponge bath?

Under those conditions, when you see a man going into a side door of a saloon, you won't know whether he is getting the liquor applied externally or internally. And then when his wife meets him at the door and he smells from liquor he can get out of it very gracefully by explaining to her that he had just come from the baths. And if she confronts him with the fact that she saw him go into a saloon, he can say that the bartender was "treating" him for his complexion.

And that is where the trouble with liquor as a beautifier would start. Anaemic persons would take the liquor treatment to get roses on their cheeks, but on account of the uncertainty of the way liquor works as a beautifier, instead of getting roses on their cheeks they would get blossoms on their noses.

And, then, just imagine meeting a pretty girl with a lovely face, and you love her because you think her beauty reflects the spirit within, and then found that her beauty was the result of "spirits" without.

But it would be a great thing for the breweries and distilleries. If the Prohibition people had their way and the whole town went dry, they could turn them into Turkish baths.

TWENTY thousand soldiers sent to the Mexican border and nobody knows why. It's a peculiar condition of affairs when all our available warships and half of the army is sent to the front at the people's expense and yet the people aren't to be trusted with knowledge of what it's all about. You see the way it stands, the people are to pay the expenses and do the fighting, if there is any fighting to do, but they are not to be permitted to know what they are paying for. Washington won't tell us, so the only chance we have got to find out is to go down to J. Pierpont Morgan's office and ask him.

From their standpoint there is nothing in it, notwithstanding the fact that it has served the purpose remarkably well for thousands of years. IN the Washington State Prison [illegible] striped suits and the lockstep on the ground they are relics of barbarism. The officials responsible for this reform claims that stripes and lockstep tend to destroy any remnant of self respect and individuality. The reform the prisoners are permitted to walk leisurely to their work and are attired in ordinary business suits

It is probably true that stripes and the lockstep are relics of barbarism, but so are prisons in general. The whole idea of punishment; so if prisons must be up to date and modern, why stop at half measures? Why not do away with all that connects us from barbarism. Why not do away with barred cells, cold stonewalls, plank beds and bread and water. Let us have prisons with modern improvements. Why force the prisoners to wear ordinary business suits for all occasions. Furnish them with bathrobes in the morning, frock coats for afternoon wear and evening dress when they dine at the festal board.

Let us make our prisons more comfortable and cozy. Let us have hot and cold running water in their apartments, brass beds, elegant furniture, pianos, [illegible] and as they sip [illegible] music play. Turn the [illegible] into a playground.

We are against this plan. Once the whole street level was ours, street and sidewalks. When the street cars [illegible] came along and took half the street, then came the taxicab stands and the Traffic Squad—[illegible] behind the other half.

By means of elevated railroads, lamp posts, pumps, [illegible] boxes and rubber cans they succeeded in depriving us of considerable part of the sidewalks.

Now the elevated stations [illegible] what was left of them. And now they propose to chase us off of our own street altogether and make second story men out of us.

With the street cars and automobiles in absolute control of the street level, and a private monopoly of elevated sidewalks, we would have to pay the sidewalk trust any price they ask for the privilege of using their sidewalk, because we wouldn't have a "chance on earth."

Hints on Carving

(Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

ONE of the most difficult game birds to carve is the Welsh rabbit. When the rabbit is sizzling hot on the platter get busy, as the cooler it gets the stiffer it becomes in the joints—in any joint, for that matter. Remove the rabbit to the table, skewer it to the tablecloth with a hatpin or extra fork. Take the opposite corner of the rabbit and fold it around the back of your chair. Then, sitting in the chair, move back about twenty feet. Then, with a pair of sheep shears or a wire cutter, sever the rabbit into desired lengths and serve.

MOCK turtle soup is another difficult entree to carve properly. First remove the tortoise shell sidecombs from the soup and take the tureen in your lap. With a wide knife cut the soup in portions, as you would a pie, cutting as many sections as there are unfortunates at your table. Wrap each section of soup in an antiseptic Japanese napkin and serve with U-R-A biscuit.

WHEN watermelons are properly fattened and in the market pick a fresh one from the pasture. Fresh watermelon may be easily identified, as they have soft breastbones and scarcely no feathers at all. Remove the legs and the dark green stripes; make an incision between the eyes, and into this thrust the arm, bared to the elbow. Considerable dexterity is needed here, but with practice one will become sufficiently expert to grasp the opposite interior end, and with a deft twist of the wrist turn the watermelon wrong side out, whereupon it is ready to serve.

"Little Miss Cute," the Latest Style of Stage Lady, Says Alan Dale

(Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

EVERY eye formeth its own beauty, of course, but every eye—if it be a sensible eye—follows the fashions, and there are fashions in beauty just as persistently as there are fashions in what beauty wears. To realize that fact, all that is necessary is to watch the stage—the veritable barometer of feminine influence. Thus you may perceive that the style of beauty which was the rage last season which was [illegible] advertised in every magazine and newspaper [illegible] the eternal compensation of woman's variety!

Nor does the latest style of lady depend completely [illegible] drama has a good deal to [illegible] trend of [illegible] that [illegible] is but [illegible] type that [illegible] explanation [illegible] a girl [illegible]

What [illegible] tacular usefulness will occur? Would it be safe for any lovely woman to go quietly into rustication until the time of her reign is announced?

Follow the drama [illegible]. It is the best advice I can give you. Look assiduously at the vogue of the moment on the stage, and if you are as clever as you should be you'll get a pretty good [illegible] of the situation. At the present moment, for instance, all that is really "worthy," and classical, and educational, and imposing, and "uplifting" is as dead as a doornail. What is popular? The lightest and the frothiest kind of musical comedy, the most frivolous and laughter-causing brand of farce, the flimsiest species of vaudeville, and the lightest and most gossamer calibre of comedy. The majesty of declamatory acting and the heroic chorus of the "blank verse" [illegible]

[illegible] towering beauty [illegible] the autumnal maturity of her charms to be of much avail. Take the Maxine Elliott type, for example. Recall the rage of that particular style that swept over us a few seasons ago. Everybody copied it, artists revelled in it, the demand for the Junoesque was even greater than the supply. Maxine herself, pining to be admired for her "art," professed indignation at the fervor caused by her beauty. How we used to "expand" upon it! What rapturous columns of adjective adulation we used to shed upon the lustrous eye, the curves of the figure and the serpentine grace of the hand!

[illegible] with pleasing results. We were quieter, steadier and more "settled" in our views. Our eye demanded something that filled it and gave it certain satisfaction. It was the moment of real feminine beauty—beauty that is rather a fact than a matter of opinion. Opulent lady, in fully blooming elegance, with warm blood pulsing through her veins, dark, enigmatic and mysteriously attractive, was the lady that charmed and held. For the others we had the scantiest sort of tolerance.

The opulent lady belonged to that searing drama—the drama of tempestuous love, of interrogation point, of dominant sex. The sex drama naturally calls for the impulsive appeal of sex, that [illegible] flippant. In this style of play no chances can be taken. The woman that men rave about and crime for must be a superb specimen of all that is most convincing in her sex. [illegible]

[illegible] fathers. To-d[illegible] We have [illegible] fashion. She is [illegible] skirt. She belongs to the "supers" or to the back row of the chorus. Poor opulent lady, whose reign was so beautiful and so alluring!

[illegible] the frolicsome lamb. It is the long delayed reign of little Miss Cute in the [illegible] the farces and [illegible] you will find little Miss Cute. She is "small and dainty." She belongs to the women who even at forty don't look a day over twenty. She is very light and weighs under a hundred pound[illegible] can pick her up in his [illegible] to the ceiling. He does. In the chorus she is often carried off. In [illegible] its on the tenor's should[illegible] around with her.

She is very wispy and fragile [illegible] it, anyway. (One might be disillusioned if one saw her punishing a beefsteak after the show.) She has the [illegible] phone and the dramatic [illegible] parrot. But she [illegible] a dear little girl. And [illegible] curly that she is almost medicinally [illegible]. Youth is her aim [illegible] legitimate play she lisps in a girly girl way; she lets down her back hair and she casts ingenuous sheep eyes at the audience. Look at little Miss Marguerite Clark, whom Boston [illegible] "Baby Mine." Could anything be cuter? A few seasons ago this role would have been played by a "handsome" woman who tipped the scales at a hundred and fifty and who had that occasionally coveted quality known as "authority."

Little Miss Clark is just a ha'porth of girl. See her skip into her bed and almost turn somersaults. Watch how superbly indifferent, how audacious[illegible] less she is of figure, of poise, [illegible]. She owns none of these qualities, but we have all of us admitted that her selection for this role was a stroke of genius. To play it she gave up a child's part in a Maeterlinck play at the [illegible] Theatre!!

Elsewhere the same thing may be perceived. Lady is tiny and—just a handful! There is no sex appeal to be obtained from a contemplation of her charms. There is no sex drama in town. The girl that is wanted to-day is one that the tired business man may contemplate frivolously—one that will not tempt him to wander from his own fireside. See the chorus! Oh, the pleasant, tripping little dears, singing their more or less mellifluous tra-la-la and kicking up their draperies with the thinnest things in legs!

The dressmaker and the hobble have gleaned a rich harvest, for dainty beauty is much more prevalent than opulent charm. Even in the public thoroughfares it is the hobble skirted girl, who looks like a perambulating lamp post, at whom men [illegible] and look. On the stage these clinging draperies make her look like Euclid's definition of a straight line. She has no curves. She abhors them. She has no hips. She has slight embonpoint. [illegible]

[illegible] is with us, and it is [illegible] strong. As a matter of fact she is very charming. It is her face that catches us with its gentle, mutinous prettiness. She caters to our lighter mood. She is the girl that drags us out of our [illegible] toy does. It is a sign of the [illegible] of the times when sex appeal becomes too strenuous and when we [illegible] Miss Cute for spectacular [illegible] Juno is too [illegible], too problematic and too difficult to please us. Juno makes us think somewhat feverishly, and we are in no mood for fever or for stress of any sort. [illegible] season for the lighter [illegible] the girl that makes us laugh for the "maiden of bashful sixteen" [illegible] creature that is really [illegible]. We want to play, to [illegible] sentimental. We want the doll face with its coquettish [illegible] and not the lustrous eye that looks into our soul and makes us [illegible]

[illegible] baby-blue sash round [illegible] the siren who glides past us in sinister appeal and who remain[illegible]

This is very safe "era" of the drama [illegible]. You may take your best boy, your youngest father and your most [illegible] to any of the shows in town and [illegible]. For little [illegible] Cute, adorable as she is, with her valentine face and her juvenile manners, is soon forgotten. She is not a serious proposition. She is not "in it" with the "hard head." They do not persistently buy her flowers and take her out to supper. I do not say that this would be impossible, but it is not as possible as with the florally, fully-blossomed Juno, who simply looks supper!

Personally, I am very fond of little Miss Cute. I prefer her. She is worth cultivating. She can be known and appreciated. She is not subtle—which is such an alluring charm. She has no meaning, which is just as captivating. She suggests the sweet[illegible] of womanhood, before it has fully arrived at the conclusion that it is womanhood. There is no depth in her eyes—they are not the lustrous pools that poets prate of—there is no soul in her presence. And the soulful lady does get on one's nerves, and we call her soulful just because she isn't.

So the latest feature in lady is just the wispy, willowy girl, who is as old as she doesn't look. It is the little woman, who is not material. It is the small petticoated creature who gambols and frisks, and laughs and makes merry. It is the feminine thing that is just—not masculine. Nobody would go to perdition for her, and she would not ask it or want it. Nobody would get foolish over her, and she is not there for that purpose. She is just a picture. Let me add that this is really the typical American girl—light as thistledown and unprovocative.

Of course, little Miss Cute won't last. She must make hay while the sun shines. She will have her little day, and she will, in her turn, go into rustication. Our mood of frivolous laughter and light self-forgetfulness will evaporate like our other moods, and we shall be serious again. Did you notice the other day that our Maxine announced that she thought she wouldn't act any more? And she sailed away. Doesn't that make my point even more salient? Temporarily snowed under by the vogue of little Miss Cute, the most opulent beauty on the stage announces that she won't act any more! Peevish!

All styles of beauty get their chance. It would be a pity if we were perpetually chained to one style. It would be hard luck. Every eye formeth its own beauty, but there is a pretty big influence brought to bear upon the eye. Our eye is not allowed to remain in one groove. Art[illegible] who draw always the one kind of wom[an] must realize this. The one kind of wom[an] finds that we get tired of her, as we do everything.

The reign of little Miss Cute will not [be] a long one because it isn't a settled o[ne]. She is for our lighter entertainment in o[ur] time of stress. We shall return to othe[r] forms. Those who are now in the "ba[ck] row" will return to the front. Those w[ho] are in "the front row" will go to the bac[k].

It is the eternal compensation of t[he] feminine.

MIRANDY ON TAXING BACHELORS--By Dorothy Dix

(Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

"D[e] odder night," said Mirandy, "Ma'y Jane was a readin' to me an' her paw a piece in de paper dat say dat de legislatcher in Minnesota was talkin' about passin' a law to tax all of de ole batchelors five dollars a year, an' use de money to support ole maids wid."

"Dat's right," sclaims Ike, "I'se for taxin' de unmarried men ev'y time. Let dem what enjoys luxuries pay for 'em."

"Oh, I don't know," I spons; "hit looks lak to me dat dem men whut has been slick enough an' nimble enough to dodge supportin' a family ought to reap some reward for hit, for I tell you a man has got to be some sprinter ef he gets away from a gal dat's after him in dese times."

"Well, in my opinion, hit's a mighty reachin' an' close-fisted man dat would begrudge payin' five dollars a year for de privilege of single blessedness," says Ike. "Des think of bein' able to keep yo' pay envelope for yourself, an' not havin' to eat a pound of cloves ev'y time you took a glass of beer, an' bein' able to tote a latch key an' come in any ole time you please, widout havin' to pull off your shoes an' tip-toe in an' den stumble over a lady whut's settin' on de steps, a waitin' up to tell you whut she thinks about your conduct. I tell you to git all of dat ca'm an' peace for a measly little ole five spot is des got a marked down, cut rate bargain in happiness."

"Dat's whut hit is. But dat's des de way wid batchelors. Dey gets de good things ev'y time, drat 'em. I never sees one walkin' along de street, so sassy an' chisty, dat I don't wish I had a brick bat handy to heave at 'em."

"I wonder what hit is in ole batchelors dat makes ev'ybody have hit in for 'em," says Ma'y Jane. "I disremember dat I'se is ever hear anybody say a good word for 'em."

"Women hates 'em," spons I, "becaze ev'y old batchelor has done some woman out of a husband. Besides which dere ain't nuthin' dat riles a woman lak seein' a man spend de money on cigars, an' stovepipe hats, an' fancy neckties, an' good eatin' for hisself, dat would buy flower bonnets, an' longery shut-waists, an' silk dresses."

"A man hates batchelors," says Ike, "becaze de ole batchelor shows him how many kinds of a fool he's been to put his neck in de halter. Ev'y time a married man looks at a batchelor he feels like a ole plow horse does when a colt runs by him an' kicks up his heels in his face."

"Hit ain't right," spons I. "Hit's against nature for a man to spend all of his money on hisself, for look whut he gits wid hit: Too much rich vittels, so he gits dyspepsy; too much whiskey, so he gits drunk, an' clothes dat's des exactly lak dem boiler tube garment dot he has got already. Nawsir, de good Lawd intended dat de women should have de spradlin' around of de money, an' dat's why He jest turned a woman's fancy to lace, an' ribbons, an' weepin' willow fedders an' sech lak adornments.

"And for dat reason, an' becaze I don't believe in frustratin' de plans of Providence, I'se in favor of taxin' de ole batchelors, an' takin' deir money away from dem by force, an' turnin' hit over to de women, whar hit belongs.

"Mo'over, dis thing of taxin' de ole batchelors to suport de ole maids will lift a mighty load off of my mind, for I'se bein' a layin' awake at nights worryin' over whut was to become of dem onmarried women dat folks was tryin' to shoo back into deir sacred spear, an' whut didn't have no spear.

"Cose I ain't denyin' dat maybe a woman's sacred spear is in her home, an' dat her life wuk is henpeckin' a husband, but whut is she gwine to do when some ole batchelor has done side-stepped matermony, an' done did her out of a husband an' a home?

"But bless Gord, dat tax on ole batchelors pints de way to Kingdom Come for ole maids. Dere won't be no mo trouble about deir gittin' out of deir spear, becaze all dat dem whut don't marry will have to do will be jest to set up an' draw deir ole maid pension.

"Hit shor'ly is a grand chanst for dem men whut is down on women going out into de world to wuk to pay up an' keep de female sect whar dey say hit belongs, in de home, for all de ladies dat I knows ain't never hustled out after a job ontel dey has failed to catch a husband.

"Yassir, dis plan of makin' de ole batchelors support de ole maids, wedder or no, sho'ly is a pio[us] idee, an' hit will sort of put de ole maids in [de] gilt-edge class, won't hit, when dey gits de mon[ey] widout havin' to bodder wid no husband a settin' around de house?"

"Huh," sclaims Ike, "a man dat's so mea[n] an' selfish, an' stingy dat he's a batchelor ain't never gwine to pay a ole maid tax. He'd do something desprit fust. He'd git married."

"Well," said I, "I can't abide de sight of a ole batchelor."

"Neider can I," spons Ike. "Hit jest makes me sick to see how much smarter he has been den I has, an' I des hope dat Minnesota legislatcher will tax 'em into matermony."

How to Write a Letter---By Wex Jones

FROM a man who has bought a dog to the man who sold it:

DEAR SIR—The large and woolly animal you describe as a dog arrived at my house yesterday and, I regret to say, in perfect health. As you said, he is quite at home in the house; so much so, in fact, that he refuses to allow any one else inside it. Also, as you said, he is an exceptionally alert watch dog. Consequently, I have not been able to get into my own home since the animal was released from the bomb-proof crate in which you had the forethought to enclose him. I do not begrudge the creature shelter in this weather; but as I am unable to compress myself into his kennel, I feel that he should admit me to the house.

If you have any plan whereby the animal may be extracted from my dining room I offer you a large reward for it. Yours truly,
JAMES BROWN.

FROM a young man who believes that two can live as cheaply as one to a young woman who professes the same belief, but knows better.

DARLING ANGELINA—Just think of it, six long hours till I can see you again! How can I live through such a time? Echo answers, How?

Snookums, I saw such a nice little house in Malden to-day. It is close to the car track, so that I need not rush from the breakfast table until we see the car coming down the street. It makes me awfully sad to think that I shall have to leave you to go to the office. That is the only cloud on my happiness.

Now, Dearest Angie, won't you meet me tomorrow and we can get the license? It only costs a dollar, and we can soon save that on your cooking. The house has a nice gas range, so you can do all the cooking without any coal dust flying around.

Say yes, popsy-wopsy, and make me the happiest man in or near Boston.

X X X X X (Each of these represents ten billion kisses).

FROM a beauty doctor to a girl who suffers from ingrowing freckles:

DEAR MADAM—Two hundred and three freckles on one face is not a surprising number, especially in your case, as we judge from your photograph that your face was designed for the cultivation of freckles on a large scale.

We do not know just how to advise you. Perhaps it would be better to accumulate four more freckles and thus have your entire countenance decorated in a uniform shade of shingle stain.

If this plan does not appeal to you, remove the freckles as follows:

Gather all the freckles on the front of your face; then step quickly away from them.

From a young author to an editor:

DEAR SIR—I enclose a manuscript of 70,000 words. It is full of pathos and humor, and I can let you have an additional 10,000 words of pathos if you think there should be more in the story. I have also 17,000 words of humor which could be inserted at suitable intervals, if desired. Kindly have the story illustrated by some good artist whose pictures will not disturb the text. Yours truly, W. SHAKESPEARE SMITH.

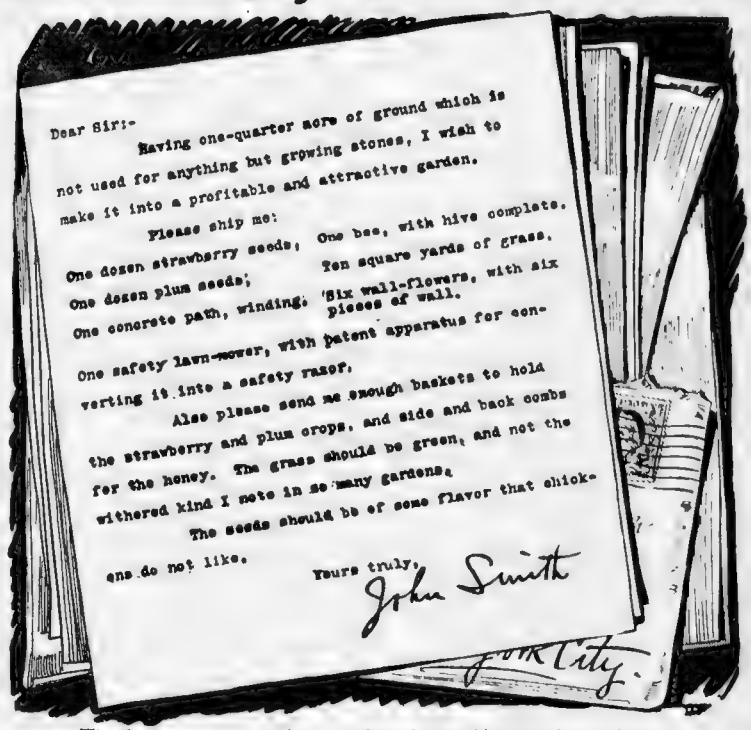
FROM a young man who has bought a portable house to the manufacturers:

GENTLEMEN—Your portable house is all that its name implies. I erected it on a camping site and some stranger, impressed with its portability, took it away with him. I am now withholding for a chance to do the same. Yours truly, RICHARD BLACK.



This letter was written by a moderately sensible man, about to begin a garden at his suburban home, to a tradesman who sells seeds

A MAN was standing in front of a church during a funeral service. He was one of a very large crowd, for the deceased was a prominent man and hundreds had gathered about to see what they could of the impressive affair. John didn't know who the deceased was, but having nothing else to do, stuck around.

Just as the body was being borne from the church a man stepped up and said to John:

"Can you tell me who is dead?"

"I don't know," answered John, "but I think it's the man in the coffin."

New Funny Parody Contest

THE new funny parody contest begun in last Sunday's City Life Section has started off with a rush! Parodies are coming in from everywhere, and if you have any doubt of their being funny just read the ones we have picked as the prize winners. There's a lot of fun in being funny, so sit down now and win one of these parody prizes. Remember your parody must be on some simple familiar poem and not too long. The names of winners are suppressed by request.

Here are to-day's prize winners:

MY HOSIERY.

(Parody on My Rosary.)

The coin I spent for thee, footwear,
Is gone and ever lost to me.
I count each dollar over, while I swear,
"Blanked hosiery! Blanked hosiery!"

Each hose a sock, two socks a pair,
To hide my feet from public view.
I count the holes in those I have, and dare
To think of new, to think of new.

No glaring searchlights will I buy;
No barber poles to spot me for.
No more I'll wear loud hose, not e'en to die
That kind I'll bar, that kind I'll bar.

I view the socks, and know I ought
The quiet kind to pick among—
I count green stripes and red in those I've bought,
And know I'm stung. Oh! socks, and know I'm stung.

NEVERMORE.

(Parody on Poe's Raven.)

Once upon a midnight dreary, as he sat and called for beer
On a sofa built for one, but holding more,
Suddenly there came a rapping, as if some one gently tapping,
Tapping at the parlor door.
"'Tis my father, sir," she murmured.
Only this, and nothing more.

What cared he for her relations, he was full of exclamations,
Such as "Lovey, does oo love oo dearly more"
When the father tired of waiting, waiting being aggravating,
Opened wide the parlor door.
Only this, but wait, there's more.

Ah, distinctly he'll remember that cold night in bleak December,
For in places best unmentioned he's still sore.
When the father's foot had landed, this young man for life was branded,
As he flew out twenty paces, he did roar,
"Your old man has hurt my feelings,
With you I will have my dealings
NEVERMORE.

MARY HAD A LITTLE BEAU.

Parody on Mary Had a Little Lamb.)

Mary had an ancient beau,
With fleece long since corrugated
One fatal night he called on her,
Most beautifully loaded.

She took him to the church that night,
To have her true love knotted;
"Why May!" the pious parson said,
"This gentleman is potted."

Now on the Job Are We.

With us no longer tarry,
It's the only chance I'll have to wed
With a father as won't marry.

THE VAMPIRE

(A Parody on Kipling's "Vampire.")

Oh, a man there was and he lived a life,
Even as you and I,
A lonely, single bachelor life,
Without a worry or care or strife,
Even as you and I.
And he never moaned, and he never groaned
And he never had to see
The butcher's and baker's and grocer's bills,
And the countless duns of the man of pills
Even as you and me.
So he looked on the tube and took to the weed
Even as you and I.
And bought whatever he thought he'd need
Of clothes and books and the richest feed,
Even as you and I
And he never was late,
Nor had to wait
At the foot of the stair
While she finished her hair
Even as you and I

But a woman there was and she set he.
Even as yours and mine,
For the man whose life was such a snap
Who had such a wad of dough on tap,
Even as yours and mine.
And a smile she smote as she passed him by,
And a wink she wunk when she caught his eye,
Till at last he sat up and noticed a bit,
And the woman knew that she had him hit,
And the poor man thought he was really it,
Even as you and I.
And it isn't the wink, and it isn't the nod,
And it isn't the smile she smoot,
And it isn't the way she blew his wad,
Or the way she swallowed him while,
But the thing that aches, and the think that takes
The breath of his friends galore,
Is the thought that he never, never could see,
The cinch he had in his life so free,
In his bachelor days of yore,
When he never moaned, and he never groaned
And he never had to see
The butcher's and baker's and grocer's bills,
And the countless duns of the man of pills,
Even as you and me.

THAT WINSOME WINNIE SMILE

VERSES BY CAROLYN WELLS

DRAWINGS BY PENRHYN STANLAWS

Copyright, 1911, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

Winnie was very fond of Bridge, but never played for money.
"Because," said she, "winning is fun—but losing isn't funny."
And though she played for prizes—which often she would take—
She never would consent to play for e'en the smallest stake

2

Well, one night at a party, the man who hoped came late;
Winnie sat at a table, where she'd been since half-past eight.
Now, Philip didn't care for cards, but as 'twas nearly one,
He hoped he might see Winnie home after her game was done.

3

But when he came to Winnie's side he started in surprise;
He knew her moral scruples—he could scarce believe his eyes!
In front of every player were bills and piles of gold!
And Winnie's cheeks were burning—though her glance at him was cold.

4

'Spade!" "Diamond!" "Heart!" "Without!" "Two hearts!" the eager players cried;
"Two without," "Double!" "I go back!" "Again!" "I'm satisfied!"
Now this meant ninety-six per trick! Winnie had risked her pile.
When her opponents scored three tricks—Winnie vouchsafed a smile!

5

Then Philip, though with angry face, to Winnie's rescue came;
"I'll pay your losses!" he growled out, "but you must quit this game!
This scene is most disgraceful!" Said Winnie, "Not at all!
I lost to Aunt Susanna—she's my rich aunt from St. Paul!"

6

"She has the gambling spirit, and she wanted me to play:
She gave me all this money—so if I lost I'd pay!"
And Winnie patted Philip's hand, and Winnie sweetly smiled:
And the fascinated Philip became quite meek and mild.

Cleo de Merode Learning a Trade

THIS IS CLEO MODELLING A FIGURINE IN CLAY—SHE EXPECTS TO DERIVE A LARGE INCOME FROM THESE WHEN SHE HAS BECOME ADEPT

AND HERE SHE IS BESIDE THE TABLE FILLED WITH COSTLY MEMENTOES OF OLD KING LEOPOLD

CLEO DE MERODE AT HER TYPEWRITER—ANOTHER USEFUL ACCOMPLISHMENT

CLEO DE MERODE, who was admired by wicked King Leopold above all other women has taken to work.

She is learning a trade

The gold and jewels once lavished upon her by King Leopold have ceased to flow in. She must live upon her own earnings from the stage and these are scanty. She is growing old and soon they will be scantier still.

So now for work!

Cleo has an artistic sense and she would earn her living as an artist, if possible. Therefore she is studying sculpture. But she is prudent and practical. She knows that it is difficult to win success as an artist. Therefore she is mastering a humbler calling. She is learning the typewriter.

Mademoiselle de Merode is working very hard at her trade of sculptress. She fashions little models of the human figure in the style of the Tanagra figurines. They are usually dancers, shepherds, and shepherdesses. Her instinct for dancing has given her an understanding of graceful poses of the figure and she has studied industriously the technical part of her art.

The little figures she has made are graceful and pretty. She has succeeded in selling them for considerable sums among the large circle of wealthy men, whose acquaintance she made while she was the most admired dancer on the Parisian stage.

As soon as her dancing fails to bring a handsome salary, she will devote herself entirely to sculpture. Will she succeed at it? Is not the small success she has already won due to her notoriety as a dancer? Well, if that be so, she will become an industrious manipulator of the typewriter.

Cleo de Merode has been in her time probably the subject of as much gossip as any woman in the world. The late King Leopold, of the Belgians, made her celebrated, but it must be said that she seconded his efforts with a strangely striking type of beauty.

The old king used to slip away from his country incognito and spend three weeks out of four in Paris. Upon one of these occasions he saw a new premiere danseuse at the grand opera. It was Cleo. She had an exquisite, pure passionless profile and her black hair was pasted in bandeaux over her forehead, after the manner of a painting by Botticelli. It was a strange type to a frequenter of the Boulevards and therefore an alluring one.

The unblushing old king caused the young dancer to be presented to him immediately. She was then eighteen. He gave her splendid jewels and other presents. Nothing was too fine for her. At the same time he provided her with a useful reputation in the theatrical

"Here I sit on my Throne, waited on by my faithful wives, honored by the medicine men, magicians and sooth sayers, and served by the best cook in the island who prepares for me the finest chickens and lobsters and even a plump dog which is especially esteemed by these simple people."

My Home Life as a Cannibal Island King

Ex-Wall Street Stock Broker, Now a King, Tells How It Feels to Have Numberless Adoring Wives and Rule Over a Race of Hearty Eaters

"The duk-duk picks out a few of the richest and meanest citizens for punishment."

"The sacred fetish is the emblem of my royal power on this island."

"My old friend King Ruba of Orrawai presents a decidedly picturesque appearance."

ARCHIBALD C. EVERETT, a former Wall Street stock broker man about town, Beau Brummel and bon vivant of two continents, has become king of Aroral in the South Sea Islands.

The news of his accession to the throne has just been published in San Francisco, New York and Paris.

Mr. Everett was as well known in Paris as in New York. He lived on lobsters, champagne and all kinds of rich food. The chorus girls never had a more generous host.

Suddenly a slump in Wall Street left him without a dollar and in a stinky state of health. Disinclined to become a drudge where he had once been a prince, he borrowed a thousand dollars, packed up several trunkfuls of good clothes and started out to wander through the world.

At last he came to Aroral, in the Gilbert Islands. It is in the midst of the stupendous maze of islands scattered through the Southern Pacific. It is 1,500 miles from Samoa, the nearest place where there are extensive evidences of western civilization.

Mr. Everett fascinated old King Rovaka of Aroral. His handsome appearance, his smart clothes, his easy social familiar manner, cultivated in Wall Street and the Gay White Way, captivated the venerable monarch. He begged Mr. Everett to consider everything on the island his, gave him his favorite ... daughter in marriage and named him heir to the throne.

Within two years the venerable ruler was gathered to his fathers and Mr. Everett ascended the throne. He has ruled with great wisdom, moderation and success. He is fitted by nature and training for his high post. Bevies of charming chorus girls, or, rather, dancing girls, exert all their arts to please him, and ask no greater recompense than a smile and a kind word from him. They catch unlimited lobsters in the inexhaustible ocean and cook them for him. Mr. Everett here gives a little sketch of his life on the happy island.

"Arawai, the Only Daughter of the Late King Rovaka Has Always Remained My Most Beloved Wife."

"My chief of police is a black bushy-haired fellow, with odd ideas of facial decoration."

"Home, Sweet Home"

By ARCHIBALD C. EVERETT.

DOMESTIC life here is entirely free from the worries that accompany it in the United States and most European countries.

Here I find that a girl not only considers it an honor to marry me, but costs me nothing and contributes to my support as far as lies in her modest power.

During the six years I have been king of this island I have never refused to marry a girl, old or young, rich or poor. This, I believe, is the chief secret of my hold on my warm-hearted people.

At least once in each month I take a fresh bride but I have no rule against admitting larger numbers to my household. Sometimes it happens that I receive as many as a dozen at a time. Families are large and rapidly growing in these islands. Whenever a father has a marriageable daughter he does not know what to do with, he presents her to me as a mark of his loyalty. It is an ancient custom, and I cannot but respect it.

The ceremony is always an occasion for a joyful gathering of the people of this and neighboring islands. Then they display their pictures ... native customs. Wreathed in hibiscus flowers and smiles, men, women and children dance and sing and pledge my health in cocoanut wine for three whole days and nights.

You must not suppose that the frequent acquisition and exchange of wives is destructive of permanent domestic affection. My darling Arawai, the only daughter of the late King Rovaka, has always remained my permanent and most beloved wife. She was the old king's favorite daughter, and when I married her he named me his successor on the throne.

She presides over my household with perfect grace and modesty never doing anything to disturb my peace and comfort, or that of my fewer wives.

My wives are recruited from daughters of neighboring kings and leading chiefs of this island, and even from daughters of poor fishermen, why, by their pleasing manners and appearance, may gain a place in my household. They are happy, simple, unaffected little creatures, whose only object in life is to minister to my pleasure and win my approval.

My wives wreathe themselves in flowers and sing and dance for me. They live for me. My life is one long round of perfect domestic harmony. No wife ever quarrels with me or talks back at me. They would sooner be stricken deaf, dumb and blind than do that.

They would never dare to quarrel among themselves unless I gave them permission, and then they would tear one another to pieces. But I never give them permission.

I do not keep all my wives. By a simple but affecting ceremony I transfer those I feel that I can spare to some chief whom I wish to honor. Last Christmas I gave one to my old and esteemed friend and subordinate, Chief Rubbarari. She was a little lame in the feet and unable to wait on me blithely, and therefore, of no especial value to me. But the old chief received this token of my affection with tears in his eyes.

In spite of my occasional liberality I have an abundant household, counting at present two hundred odd wives.

Our time is spent in feasting, singing, bathing and resting beneath the shady palm trees. No one works unless he has a mind to.

Our life is enlivened by pleasant social intercourse and swimming parties. Our neighbors come to see us in their big canoes from as great a distance as five hundred miles, and when they come they stay for a month or two. During their visit there is continuous feasting.

My old friend, King Ruba, of Orrawai, an island two hundred miles from here, drops in to see me quite frequently in his royal canoe, with a dozen of his youngest wives. He is a delightful old gentleman, full of humor and character. Dressed in a naval officer's coat, a small pair of bathing drawers, a necklace of sharks' teeth and a Panama hat, he presents a decidedly picturesque appearance, and yet, withal, he is every inch a king.

The old monarch's memory runs back to stirring times and events I suspect that he is not entirely a stranger to "long pig" himself. However, he would never refer to this subject in my presence, for he is quite a gentleman. I feel perfectly safe with him. Whatever his weaknesses may be, I am sure he never ate a man with whom he had previously dined.

Here I may say that I feel it to be my sacred duty to respect the religion, the customs, and even the ancient prejudices of these people. If I did not they would not let me stay here. They are happy, prosperous and free from care under their system of government and morals, and one cannot blame them if they do not care to have that system changed for one suited to an entirely different race of people.

My subjects occasionally go on a war party in their canoes. Before they go on their journey, there is a great pow-wow of the warriors, and I presine, wearing the terrible triple-faced death mask. I do not go away with the fighters, for my royal duties require my presence here. When the warriors return there is a fresh supply of strong meat on the island.

I am particularly careful to respect their religious customs, many of which are very curious not to say alarming. They maintain a large class of priests, or "medicine men," who live in idleness and luxury. It has been one of the first principles of my government to treat these gentlemen generously and never to interfere with their plans in any way.

At certain seasons, when there is a lack of fish or rain or some other public misfortune, a solemn gathering of the people is held under the direction of the priests. I merely occupy a position of dignified inactivity at these meetings.

A supposedly supernatural creature called "the duk-duk," makes his appearance and smells over the people until he has found out who have offended against the gods and thus brought misfortunes on the land. He picks out two or three of the richest and meanest citizens for punishment, and they are carried away for a course of treatment by the priests. The sinner is made to part with all his superfluous wealth, and then everybody is happy again.

The "duk-duk" is a familiar figure in many of the South Sea Islands. His distinguishing feature is a huge mask, with eyes and nose outlined in white, designed to inspire terror into the simple-minded islanders.

"I preside at the Pow-Wow, wearing the terrible triple-faced death mask."

The "duk-duk" never pays any disagreeable attentions to me, because I am king, and because I possess the sacred oval fetish, which is itself a divinity.

The possession of this symbol of authority and supernatural power is indispensable to the king of the island and it is the emblem of my royal power in this island. I obtained it from my esteemed predecessor and father-in-law, King Rovaka.

The chief of police, who keeps the crooks away from me, is a black bushy-haired fellow, with odd ideas of facial decoration.

As I never question the right of my people to observe their ancient customs, so they never expect me to share in those that are repugnant to me. It is possibly the fact that I am different from them that makes me such a successful and satisfactory king.

My prestige among these simple people has also been greatly augmented by the white flannel trousers made by one of the best tailors in New York, which I wear on state occasions. When I lived in more conventional lands, I had a great fondness for well-made white flannels, and so I happened to land among these islands with a trunkful of them.

I suppose it is the contrast between my white-clad limbs and their own uncovered brown ones that makes them feel that I came from another world, and have been sent from heaven to rule over them.

A good supply of negligee shirts, an old high hat, some colored silk socks and variegated pajamas help me to make a royal impression.

Here I sit on my throne, waited on by my faithful wives, honored by the medicine men, magicians and soothsayers, and served by the best cook in the island who prepares for me the finest chickens and lobsters and even a plump dog which is especially esteemed by these simple people. I am as happy as a man can ever expect to be.

world. She obtained a brief engagement in America at an enormous salary.

Now the King is mouldering in his grave and the fame which he gave her is fading away. It will not carry her through the years that kill beauty and stiffen the limbs. Therefore she has turned to sculpture.

Strange to say, a statue had much to do with her early fame. Soon after King Leopold discovered her the eminent sculptor, Falguiere, exhibited at the Salon a completely undraped figure, called "A Dancer." The head was plainly that of Cleo de Merode. But the figure! Cleo has a slender face and the opulence of the sculptured figure astounded everybody. Bold journalists inquired if the figure was really hers. She evaded the question. It has always been wrapped in mystery for the majority.

Gladys Vanderbilt's "Back Door" Triumph!

Sixteen Unmixed Noble Ancestors Being Indispensable at Vienna, She Has Been Presented at Budapest, Where They Are Not So Particular.

Vienna, March 18.

THE Countess Laszlo Szechenyi, formerly Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, is still ineligible for presentation at the Austrian Court

Americans, who assume that the Countess has overcome the unexcusable rock of etiquette at the Austrian Court because she has been presented to the Emperor at Budapest, in Hungary, are mistaken. She has only achieved a back-door triumph.

To be eligible for presentation at the Court of Vienna a man or woman must have at least sixteen quarterings of nobility, that is to say, must be of unmixed noble ancestry for four generations past. Such ancestry the Countess Szechenyi cannot, of course, show, and all her millions cannot procure it for her

The stamp of highest social rank the proud condition of being "hof fachig," is not acquired by being presented to the Emperor at a ball or semi public function, at a military review or public affair, or even at the subordinate Court of Budapest. Such presentations are accorded freely to provincial mayors, minor officials and even to fortunate laboring men. The supreme distinction is to be presented, on the ground of birth alone, to the Emperor at his Court of Vienna. This distinction the Countess Szechenyi, with all her millions, cannot attain

Why is it not as great an honor to be presented to the Emperor at Budapest as at Vienna? Because at Vienna it is based on birth alone, while at Budapest it may be based on personal merit. The Emperor Francis Joseph rules over a dual monarchy, in which he is Emperor of Austria and King of Hungary.

Austria is the country which is noted above all others for the antiquity of its nobility and the rigidity of its court etiquette. Hungary, on the other hand, is far more rigid and aristocratic in its ideals. Hungary has its own separate court at Budapest, at which the Emperor is usually represented by one of the Archdukes, although he occasionally presides there himself. Many Hungarians are presented to the Emperor or his representative at Budapest, who could not conceivably be presented at the Court of Vienna. The Countess Szechenyi belongs in this class.

Some special reason must be offered even at the Hungarian Court for the presentation of a person who is not of noble birth. In the case of the Countess Szechenyi, it was pleaded that she had spent her millions freely in Hungary, that she might spend more if encouraged, and that it was desirable to promote friendly relations with America.

All the influence of the Vanderbilt family was used to procure the distinction for the Countess. It is stated that the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador at Washington, Baron Hengelmuller, who is himself a Hungarian, represented to his Government that it was desirable to show favor to an American heiress, as otherwise much capital might be diverted to England, France and other countries

By all these efforts what may be termed a secondary distinction—a back-door triumph—was obtained for the Countess, but she is no nearer than ever to the sacred seclusion of the palace at Vienna, where the descendants of the crusaders enjoy their own society and admit no other

Another person not of noble birth, presented at the same time as Countess Szechenyi at Budapest, was Mme. Delukses, wife of the Hungarian Finance Minister. She is the former wife of a Hebrew who became wealthy by remarkably audacious met ods.

There can be no doubt in the mind of an intelligent person, even if he is not in the court secrets, that the Countess has failed to obtain a presentation at Vienna. The mere fact that she has been marri - three years without being p sented there is sufficient evidence. It is only few hours' journey for her. American heiresses do not usually omit ' take the highest social position they can.

It is, moreover, inconceivable that Count Szechenyi, who is an imperial chamberlain, and, of course, has been presented himself, would not present his wife if he could.

There is every reason to believe that the Countess expected to be presented at Vienna after her marriage. She was in negotiation to lease the Lobkowitz Palace, the largest vacant residence of the nobility in Vienna, but abandoned the idea in disgust when she found she could not be presented at court.

The fundamental requirement for presentation at the Austrian Court is to have only noble ancestors on both sides back to and including your great-grandparents. This is known in heraldic language as possessing "sixteen quarterings of nobility," each man in the line of descent having the right to quarter the arms of his father's and mother's families.

Exception is made to this rule as a matter of course, in the case of those of very high officials, such as Ambassadors and Cabinet Ministers. This suggests the only way in which the Countess Szechenyi can be presented. Her husband must become a very great official.

Any other departure from the court rule is fiercely opposed by the Austrian aristocracy. It is true that the Emperor may issue a special decree authorizing the presentation of some private person in whom he is himself interested, and it seems probable that he is not personally disinclined to grant such favors, but he practically never does so, on account of the court prejudice.

The only exception of this kind was made by the Emperor in favor of the late Baron Albert de Rothschild, who had rendered great financial services to the Empire. But the Baron and his family were so offended by the attitude of the court nobility that they never availed themselves of the privilege accorded me. Here it is interesting to note the effect of birth from which the Countess Szechenyi suffers. She will pass to her children and descendants for four generations. In the fourth generation from her children they may again become "worthy of presentation at court" or "Hoffachig," but Count Szechenyi will provided they make no other mesalliances in the meantime.

The etiquette of the Austrian court is a marvellous thing, as is the training of the little archdukes and archduchesses, which is closely bound up with that etiquette. All the members of the Imperial family are born archdukes and archduchesses. They are never boys or girls.

An incident to be recalled of a young archduke who had been brought up in the constant contemplation of the double-headed eagle which forms the most conspicuous feature of the Austrian Imperial arms. When he was nearly grown up, the archduke was taken out on a shooting expedition and shot a bird which an attendant informed him was an eagle.

But this could not be an eagle, and the young archduke replied: "It has only one head."

History informs us that the Archduchess Louise, who became the second wife of the great Napoleon, was brought up with extraordinary refinement and seclusion. Gentleman cats and poodles were the only companions excluded from the interior of the palace where she was brought up, while roosters and other creatures of the male persuasion were kept out of the farm and garden attached to the palace with as much care as plebeian citizens are now excluded from court.

Nevertheless the archduchess encouraged very early in the knowledge of good and evil after her marriage, and Napoleon threatened to kill Count Neipperg, who was sent from Austria to advise and assist her

The Doll Idea of Woman.

By Haryot Holt Dey

THE enfranchisement of women depends upon how soon we get through playing with dolls!

Children are not the only ones who play with dolls. Dolls are really a splendid and fascinating play for children, for little girls since it is boys are not encouraged.

There are two kinds of people who never grow are fond until they are obliged to, till life's batters and bumps so hard that finally the toys are broken.

There is the man who loves a doll. When he was a boy he scorned a doll; but when he grows big he gets the doll idea has a doll of his own, according to a certain something he did's an ideal, and believes it is the real thing.

The man who objects to enfranchising women has never outgrown the doll idea. But he will some day—as soon as the time comes for him to endure having the illusions cleared up for him.

There is the woman who plays with dolls. She is her own doll. All day long she thinks about what the doll will wear and where the doll will go. She has 2 o'clock gowns for the doll, and 3 o'clock hats to match, and 3 o'clock shoes for it, the only things she sees are the things that might look well on the doll, and she wonders how they would look. All the shops are filled with dude for dolls. It's an absorbing hobby, not illuminating, for you couldn't expect illusions to be illuminating.

When a man has a doll it's harder for him to give it up than it is for the woman to give up hers. A man will work, and scheme, and lie, and cheat, and steal, and sometimes lie down and die for a doll, especially if it's a partnership affair—if he and she both own the same doll.

A man has been known to do his level worst for a doll!

No boy ever clung to a loved toy half so hard as a man will hang on to a doll—the particular doll he loves. His most vivid illusion is—that the doll he loves is a real woman!

Come, all you with the doll idea—wake up!

Odd House Gowns by "Poiret," Maker of the "Harem" Skirt, and a New "Lucile" Creation with an Original, Striking Color Scheme

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, illustrating it with sketches and photographs of her own original models.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment is at No. 17 West Thirty-sixth street, New York City.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

THE doom of the "harem" skirt has been sealed as far as London is concerned by a public and almost pitiful display, originally arranged, I presume, to gain new followers for this "freak" fashion, but, in reality, having entirely the opposite effect.

The Parisian fitting boys, in fact, acknowledged their defeat and, in accepting the situation, gave up the skirt, and [illegible] their pride to a [illegible] have just introduced a model which gives a suggestion of that division which has now been discarded. To effect this the skirt is made with more than usual fullness, its soft folds being then gathered in between the feet into the narrow encircling hem, in a way which, I fear, hardly tends to freedom of movement.

A New Poiret One-Piece House Gown.

A Modified "Harem"—Skirt Not Actually Divided but So Caught Between the Feet as to Suggest a Definite Parting.

But, of course, there are some women who will not look their best in schemes either definitely Oriental or classical, and so, for the benefit of all such, I am sending a photograph of a rather favorite model of mine, which is sufficiently Eastern in coloring to be both fashionable and fascinating, and yet not at all aggressively so in contour, wherefore it can be donned with complete success by practically any woman, always presuming, of course, that she be numbered among the brunettes.

The tunic is of gold tissue shot with blue and bordered with an applique of dull gold and silver and pipings, too, of vivid emerald green satin, while, swathed about the waist, is a sash of mauve and gold, just a peep of purple coming from the hem of the underskirt. Shoes and stockings of emerald green and a green scarf wound closely about the head and tasselled with gold bring into further evidence that first suggestion of color contrast. This head-dress, by the way, being a modified form of the Oriental turban, to whose really effective wearing the vast majority cannot perhaps aspire.

All these decorative, not to say daring, effects, as displayed in afternoon and evening gowns, are in strange and striking contrast to the almost severe simplicity of the new Spring tailor-mades and it speaks well for the adaptability of the modern woman that she manages to look equally well in two such entirely different forms of attire.

For she who in the evening will be garbed as an Eastern princess or a Greek goddess and whose every languorously graceful movement will be in keeping with the character and the costume will the next morning be alert and trim in the scantiest and smartest of short coats and still shorter skirts of, say, gray suiting, with only a tab or two of braid as trimming. She will probably, moreover, display one of those new lingerie shirts of the finest hand-tucked lawn, which very cleverly combine a picturesquely down-turned collar with a piquant and outstanding side frill, both being alike, however, in their bordering with a deep applique of Irish crochet lace.

All of the foregoing is intended to have a Spring application—and, speaking of the return of warm weather, the graceful and comfortable house gown is of seasonable importance.

The two Poiret models shown here speak for themselves in the illustrations. Both are graceful in their lines, can be made up in a variety of materials and can be guaranteed for comfort and good [illegible]

Getting Back to the Old "Staff of Life"

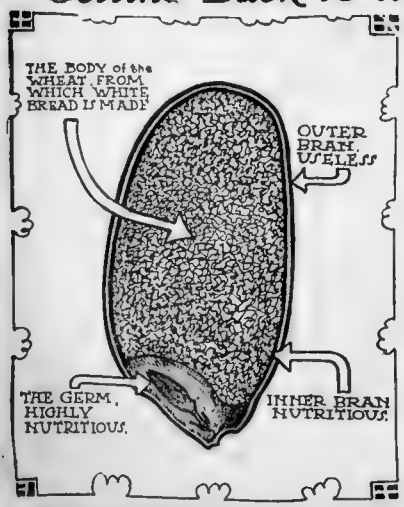

Diagram of Wheat Grain Showing the Nutritive Parts Used in "Standard Bread."

How the Old Fashioned Bread Is Coming Into Its Own Again Because It Contains the Nutritious Germ, the Inner Bran, All of the Wheat Grain

FOR some time indications have been accumulating that point to a return to the old "staff of life"—to bread which contains elements of the wheat grain that are most nutritious, but give a brownish tinge to the flour and the loaf.

These elements are the gluten cells, the germ and the inner bran of the kernel—the most nutritious and wholesome part of wheat. What remains after they, and the outer bran, are eliminated is perfectly white flour, but analyzes nothing but starch.

The recognized food value of the germ, the gluten and the inner bran, in combination with the starch has caused a great and increasing demand for what is called "standard bread," which is dark in color, but is claimed to be much more appetising and immensely more nutritious than white bread.

In England at the present moment there is a widespread crusade on behalf of what is called there, "standard bread," which really means whole wheat bread. The movement has made such headway that the Government is seriously considering the adoption of standard bread as part of the regular army ration.

The popular revulsion in favor of more nutritious bread, even at the expense of whiteness, may well be opposed by those financially interested in the great up-to-date flour mills, in which steel rolls have long since superseded the old fashioned mill stones. For, in making whole wheat flour the latter still serve every purpose, as their prototype, the small, hand revolved millstones, did in the most ancient times. Thus, general abandonment of white flour in favor of flour containing gluten, germ and inner bran would have a tendency to restore to usefulness many moribund old-fashioned flour mills.

Between whole wheat meal and the English standard meal there seems to be a "light difference in favor of the latter. Roughly speaking, the wheat grain is analysed thus:

White flour	70 per cent
Middlings with the tiny germ	10 per cent
Bran or husk	20 per cent

Wholemeal bread retains the 20 per cent of bran, which most people are better without. White bread retains only the 70 per cent of white flour.

Standard bread retains the middlings and the germ, which are rich in gluten and phosphates, digestible and powerful bone and muscle builders.

A British scientific expert commissioned to report on the comparative advantages of standard and white bread responded with the following table:

	Standard.	White
Weight before testing	7 ozs.	6 ozs.
Water given off	4.51 gms.	2.81 gms.
Loss of moisture	2.41 gms.	2.81 gms.
Percentage of moisture	43	62½

"It is clear," he says, "that bread one day old in a normal condition is more than two-fifths water, and that standard bread on bulk may contain only a shade more water than white bread.

"Bulk for bulk, standard bread is in almost all cases heavier than white bread. That is to say, a 2-lb loaf of standard bread is usually perceptibly smaller than a 2-lb loaf of white bread.

"For standard bread is in general much closer and does not rise so much in the oven as white bread. But, as everybody who has tried it knows, its greater weight does not make it unpalatable.

"The germ, which is visible to the naked eye in the grain, is divided and dissolved to such an extent before the loaf is ready to be eaten that it is indistinguishable in the magnified photograph of a portion of a crumb."

There is also the question of effect upon the teeth. Dr. Pascal Taylor, a reputable English dental surgeon, reported:

"White bread is the greatest enemy known to teeth, and I trace the ills of most of my patients directly to the white starchy bread which has so long been in general use.

"The amount of starch in this so-called bread sets up fermentation between the teeth. This fermentation produces in the mouth an undue supply of lactic acid, which dissolves the lime salts from the natural enamel of the teeth, and so makes the way easy for the decaying work of bacteria.

"The coming of standard bread will change much of this.

"For standard bread comparatively free from the baneful workings of starch, produces far less lactic acid fermentation between the teeth than does white bread.

"Moreover, it requires more chewing than does white bread, which gives the teeth but little desirable exercise, and produces a greater flow of saliva."

MODERN MAN 170,000 YEARS OLD!

A Sectional Diagram of the Thames River Bed as It Is To-day, It Ancient Banks Covered with Factories, and Its Bed, 170 Feet Lower Than When the Galley Hill Man Lived. The Cross Marks the Spot Where the Galley Hill Skeleton Was Found

This Diagram Shows a Sectional View of the Thames River Bed as It Must Have Been When the Prehistoric Man Was Drowned in Its Shallows—Indicated by the Cross—170,000 Years Ago.

How the Discovery of an Immensely Ancient Briton with Surprisingly Intelligent Features Pushes Humanity's Emergence from the Monkey Into Unthinkable Antiquity.

THE discovery of a fossil man in England, estimated to be 170,000 years old, has upset all calculations as to the antiquity of man, and raised an intensely puzzling problem which scientists are as yet unable to answer.

The most puzzling feature lies in the fact that this 170,000-year-old man is shown by his head to be nearly as intelligent and well developed as the average modern Englishman or other European.

Now the Neanderthal man, the most noted prehistoric specimen previously discovered, has a face with distinctly apelike characteristics. If it has taken 170,000 years of evolution to produce the small difference between the Galley Hill man just discovered in England and the modern man, how long must it have taken to produce the enormous difference between the Neanderthal man and the modern man? That is the great problem.

It is reasonable to say that there is a hundred times greater difference between the Neanderthal man and the Galley Hill man than there is between the Galley Hill man and the modern man.

This would make the Neanderthal man 17,000,000 years old. It would put him back to a period earlier than scientists have believed the beginning of man's existence to a period even earlier than the beginning of life on the earth, according to some geologists.

Is this possible? Is it conceivable? Is it not equally reasonable to suppose that modern man came suddenly into existence instead of being the result of a slow process of evolution? If this latter view is to be accepted science may have to construct a new theory, which will be nearly the same as the first chapter of Genesis.

Here it may be noted that other scientific experiments are pointing to the conclusion that the various species of animals were the result of a sudden development, rather than a slow evolution. Eggs of moths, hatched at a certain temperature higher than the normal, have produced a race of moths immensely larger and more brilliant than those from which they were descended.

The fossil man of Galley Hill was discovered by Robert Elliott, a working printer of London, who spends his spare time in archaeological research.

At Galley Hill a deep gravel pit is being worked, and it is such excavations that give the archaeologist his opportunities for discovery. Galley Hill is situated near Gravesend, the port lying on the banks of the Thames near the ocean. At this spot the main road from Gravesend to London passes near a great bank of chalk which rises many feet above the level of the river, from which it is separated by a flat tract of meadows and marsh nearly a mile wide. On the top of the chalk is an extensive bed of gravel, sometimes feet in depth, which has to be removed as the chalk pit is extended.

The gravel is known to geologists as the high level or 100-foot terrace, and is known to be an ancient bed of the Thames. In this gravel the oldest or paleolithic form of flint implements have been found, and so have remains of the mammoth and of other animals which existed in England immediately after the glacial period.

In those days the river engulfed many objects in its flood and by covering them up with mud preserved them for future ages.

In the gravel a workingman came upon a human skull and soon after he had found that Mr. Elliott arrived. The skull was in a bed of gravel that had once been the bottom of a pool of the old river.

The skull was eight feet below the surface of the gravel and two feet above the chalk. As only the skull had been found when Mr. Elliott came, he went to work and, to his great gratification, succeeded in unearthing the rest of the skeleton. The bones were extremely soft and fragile, but all complete.

They were clearly the remains of a prehistoric man. Certain peculiarities of structure of the bones showed clearly that this man differed from the modern man. Several trained observers satisfied themselves that the remains had not been disturbed since the gravel was first deposited.

Apparently the prehistoric man had fallen, through some accident, into the pool, been drowned and preserved in the mud for ages.

The calculation of the prehistoric man's age seemed comparatively simple. The Thames now flows through a bed 170 feet lower than the place where the skeleton was found. Now it is quite certain that the skeleton's resting place was originally part of the river bed of the Thames and that the Thames has regularly worn down its bed, becoming smaller at the same time.

It has been calculated from observations in historic times that the Thames has lowered its bed at the rate of one foot in a thousand years. Therefore the river bed must have required 170,000 years to fall 170 feet to its present positions.

Professor Arthur Keith, conservator of the Museum of the Royal College of Surgeons, examined the remains of the prehistoric man and carefully noted the peculiarities of his form.

His head was remarkably long and narrow, but its dimensions are shown by many modern men. He was a little over five feet high. His brain was remarkably short and his forehead was low at a peculiar slant to his skull.

His teeth were considerably larger than those of a modern man with the same sized jaw. His jaw was prominent, but his chin was retreating. His forehead was also noticeably retreating.

His brain was somewhat below that of the average modern man, but bigger than is often seen in highly intelligent men.

"The lesson that the Galley Hill discovery has taught," says Professor Keith, "is that he modern type of man, the man who has shed all traces of simian traits in face, [illegible] is absolutely most [illegible] was remarkably short and his forehead was low at a peculiar slant to his skull.

"The lesson that the Galley Hill discovery has taught," says Professor Keith, "is that he modern type of man, the man who has shed all traces of simian traits in face, [illegible] is absolutely most [illegible] exercising their cranes and perceptive organs more.

He was there while Julius Caesar and his Roman legions were invading the old Celtic people of ancient Britons. He lay perfectly still while the Saxons came and attacked the Britons and while Normans came and conquered the Saxons in turn. He was there while Oliver Cromwell and his Puritans were overthrowing monarchy in Britain.

And to-day when flying machines and wireless telegraphy are filling the air, he has been dragged from his grave and forced to tell us what the world was like 170,000 years ago.

The development of his head tends strongly to show that he belonged to a fairly advanced race of cavemen, but not to be classed with the ancients who at that period of the world's progress [illegible] it is supposed that this race was master over the fellow creatures could make weapons, such as spears and axes, out of flint, and probably knew how to build a house. All these abilities show an enormous progress from the merely animal condition.

The first evidence of a race of man with distinctly apelike characteristics was the skull found at Neanderthal, in Germany, in 1856. This skull had enormous overhanging ridges and practically no forehead and a very projecting lower jaw. The brain was short and had territorially powerful bones like a gorilla.

Many specimens of a man of similar development have been found in and around LeMoustier in Central France. Four years ago a skull was found at Heidelberg considerably lower in development than the other German and French skulls. The earliest date that the most daring scientists assigned to these specimens was 200,000 years ago.

Now we have the Galley Hill man, carefully estimated to be 170,000 years old, who is much nearer to the modern Englishman than he is to the Neanderthal and other prehistoric European men. How old, then, are they?

Then there was the Pithecanthropus erectus, discovered by Dr. Dubois, of the Dutch army, in Java, in 1891. He was so primitive that Dr. Dubois gave him a name indicating that he was an ape with manlike characteristics rather than a man with apelike characteristics.

How old was he? Judging solely by the small change of type shown in 1,000 years, he might have been hundreds of millions of years old.

The wife of the Galley Hill man must have resembled closely the type of modern Englishwoman shown above in the photograph of the high-bred Countess of Westmoreland, and not, as has been supposed, the type of the Neanderthal man's wife, whose picture as reconstructed by Carbiel Max is shown below.

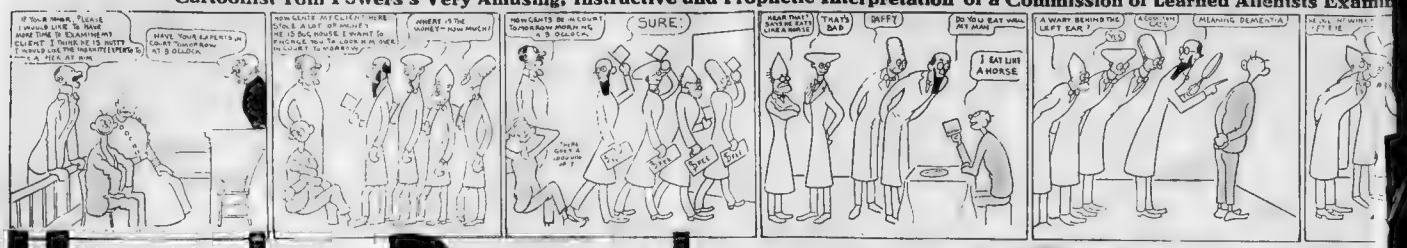
Cartoonist Tom Powers's Very Amusing, Instructive and Prophetic Interpretation of a Commission of Learned Alienists Examin



How they Prove that Everybody is Crazy

OF course everybody knows that Joseph G. Robin is the "skyrocket" New York banker who wrecked several New York banks and then rushed to a private insane asylum in his big automobile and called in insanity experts to prove that he was crazy.

It was Mr. Jerome, formerly New York District Attorney, and Harry Thaw who introduced the modern insanity specialists and experts to the public. But it has remained for Robin, the banker, to make a comic opera burlesque out of this insanity expert humbug and laugh it out of court finally and forever.

The new modern medical specialist who poses as an infallible expert on insanity calls himself an "alienist." In the dictionary we find the following definition for the word "alienist":

"Alienist—A physician who devotes himself to the study of the pathology, clinical conditions, progress, cause and treatment of disease affecting the mind by a study of the symptoms and physical signs. Many diseases affecting the mind present marked physical changes, such as tremors, alteration in tendon reflexes, pupilary anomalies, etc., as well as perversions of conduct, or of action, such as exaltation, prodigality, suspicion, abulia, etc."

Ever since the Thaw trial the public has been in a confused state of mind about the mystifying methods and conclusions and theories of these alienists. If such great men as were paid from five to fifty thousand dollars for their opinions swore that a person was hopelessly insane, who should be bold enough to doubt such impressive testimony?

And this same hocus-pocus buncombe would still prevail had it not been that Judge Swann, of New York, and a jury of twelve men with common sense laughed at the unanimous testimony of thirteen great alienists and declared that Bankwrecker Robin was sane enough to be punished.

These alienists are the most distinguished in America. Three have not yet been named, but the other ten are laurel bearers. One was Dr. Austin Flint, consulting physician to Bellevue and Manhattan State Hospitals. Another was Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffe, consulting neurologist to Manhattan State Hospital. There were Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, Dr. Pearce Bailey, Dr. Charles L. Dana, Dr. William Mabon, Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald, Dr. William A. White, Dr. Max Schlapp, Dr. H. Valentine Wildman. There was, too, Dr. Louise Robinovitch, Robin's sister and editor of the Journal of Mental Pathology. Every one of these experts had appeared in many famous criminal trials. Each is connected with some great hospital. Great was their indignation at the action of this stupid jury, and great was the indignation of Mr. Jerome—almost great enough to cause him trouble for contempt of court.

Why We Knew Robin Was Sane.

By SOL BOEHM,

Foreman of the Special Jury to Inquire Into the Bank Wrecker's Sanity.

WHEN a man looks sane, talks sane and acts sane, a man of common sense concludes that he is sane. The fact that a number of alienists testified that he wasn't sane might have impressed us more had we not known that most experts testify the way the side that hires them wants them to.

So we dismissed the medical testimony. Without that there was nothing to do but bring in a verdict of sane, for Robin's attitude on the stand convinced us that he was not only sane, but extremely clever. His conduct showed that his so-called hallucinations were all shammed.

He showed that he had an excellent memory. He answered every question promptly and intelligently. He was quick to resent any attempt to heckle him. He had been running banks for years and dealing with the most eminent men of affairs.

I wish I was as insane as Robin. I'd be a richer man.

Just at this juncture, to the horror of Mr. Jerome and the dismay of the thirteen alienists, Mr. Robin threw off his mask and cheerfully confessed that he had been playing the role of a lunatic! Mr. Robin did this because he was sane enough to see that, while any child could fool the alienists, he had failed to deceive the jury of ordinarily intelligent citizens. And since it was a jury of citizens who were to decide whether Mr. Robin went to jail or not, and not the medical experts, Robin saw that he was playing a losing game and he decided to stop his nonsense and confess.

Bank-wrecker Robin has performed a distinct public service in making ridicule the absurdity of the modern insanity expert. How ridiculous they all appear is seen by the letter which the distinguished Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton wrote in his righteous indignation the day after the jury declared Robin was sane.

Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton was greatly grieved at the stupid ignorance of these jurymen, who could not possibly understand the great significance of a man's eyebrows or realize the criminal inheritance which goes along with an ear whose lobe is tied closely to the head.

Here are some of the things which Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, one of the most eminent of the alienists who swore that Robin was insane, wrote and had published the day after the jury laughed him and his fellow experts out of court:

"To the Editor:

"Sir—The extraordinary action of a petit jury yesterday in finding Joseph G. Robin sane is, I think it must be admitted, another instance of stupidity and unfairness, and a fresh reminder that medical questions should not be passed upon by untrained minds.

"Thirteen medical men, some of whom have not been called, have thus far expressed the opinion that Robin should be sent to an asylum and watched, and no one has been brought forward to differ with us in our conclusions and recommendations.

"This time there was no 'conflict of experts'

"It is to be hoped that ere long every question connected with disputed mental and physical states will be decided by some other tribunal than the kind which has made such a sorry mess in the Robin matter."

And on top of this indignant protest, in the one case, as Dr. Hamilton so aptly remarks, where there was "no conflict of experts," the subject finding deceit unprofitable confesses that he has been shamming and that the learned alienists, with all their exact formulas and analysis, have been deceived. Ungrateful Robin!

Since the Thaw trial a whole literature of "symptoms" has appeared. Most of the thirteen alienists, whose opinion the twelve jurymen disregarded, have added a book or two to it. There is a literature of mental symptoms in which, like the old-fashioned medical advertisements, every one who reads can find in themselves all the marks of mental disease.

Another part of this literature, of which the chief exponents are Nordau and Lombroso, deals with the outward signs of degeneracy or criminal insanity—and by these signs ninety-nine out of a hundred persons can be proven to be mentally and morally irresponsible. The literature attaches much importance to the shape of the head and to the symmetry of the features in diagnosing a case of insanity or degeneracy that leads to irresistible criminal impulses. Degeneracy, the alienists contend, is usually indicated by some marked lack of symmetry of features. Thus one eye or one ear is lower than the other, or smaller than the other; the nose is on a slant; the mouth is awry; the eyes are too close together or too far apart, or the jaw is badly shaped.

These peculiarities the alienists designate as stigmata, or signs of degeneracy. All the books speak of them and all the alienists refer to them on the witness stand when it happens to help the side of the case on which they are testifying.

Dr. Frederick Peterson, of New York, one of the most distinguished alienists in the country, lays considerable stress upon these facial characteristics.

"Inequality of the two sides of the face," he says, "when congenital and not due to some such disease as hematrophy, is to be looked upon as a stigma of degeneracy."

As a matter of fact, a schoolboy knows that with very few exceptions every person, sane or insane, normal or abnormal, moral or degenerate, presents this inequality of the two sides of the face. Its reason is in nature itself—in the joining of the first cells of the embryo. The perfectly symmetrical face, if considered on the basis of frequency of type, is the abnormal product. The so-called degenerate face is the universal one. So, if this test upon which the alienists place such weight is a trustworthy one, we are all degenerates; none of us is responsible for our acts.

To illustrate the uselessness of any such test, however, it is only necessary to take the photograph of any person famous for his or her intellect or moral force, and observe the irregularity of feature which characterizes every one of them.

Look carefully at the photograph of Thomas Edison, shown at the top of this page. Edison, one of the brainiest men the country has ever produced, and the soundest, may be a potential criminal if the standards of the alienists are applied to him, but his degeneracy in that event has been the means of uplifting the world in a hundred different directions. Observe in the picture to the left the actual photograph of the inventor. Observe his jaw, which is anything but symmetrical; his mouth, one corner of which is turned down and the other turned up; his ears, of which the right is considerably lower than the left; his eyes, of which the left is fully a quarter of an inch higher than the right. Men have escaped the gallows and the prison and gone to comfortable insane asylums for less marked "stigmata" than these.

To make the point plainer, this same photograph of Edison has been cut in two; two copies of the left side of the face have been made; one of them has been reversed and fitted to the other, and the result, reproduced beside the actual picture of Edison, shows exactly what he would look like if his face were equal—a symmetrical Edison.

The fact that the face, which naturally is of the most intellectual, the most noble and most genial type, becomes, when so treated, the face of a misanthrope, is interesting, but not significant.

The important revelation is that this "symmetrical Edison" is absolutely different from the real Edison; from which it naturally follows that the real Edison is not at all symmetrical and, if judged by the alienists' tests, would inevitably be classed as a degenerate!

It is just as impossible to conceive of Edison committing a crime as it is to think of him as insane, but if the great inventor ever was so accused, what a perfect case of insanity alienists could build up in his defense, adopting the mental standards by which Robin was measured!

A thousand witnesses might be brought forward to prove that Edison never sees any one except upon a special appointment. What is to be inferred from that? Common sense would answer that Edison is a very busy man, but the alienists would probably see in this peculiar circumstance strong evidence that the inventor was in constant dread of the assassin's dagger, pointing strongly to the conclusion that Edison was a paranoiac.

Edison often spends the greater part of the day in the seclusion of his laboratory, refusing to be disturbed. Why this seclusion? Common sense answers: Edison is a great worker; but the alienist would probably answer, as did Dr. Hamilton, Dr. Jelliffe and Dr. White, in Robin's case: "Edison is of a sensitive, suspicious, secretive and impulsive make-up that mark him as a type of abnormal character!"

When thus engaged in his laboratory Edison frequently refuses his meals. What does this mean? Horse sense replies "Edison is so wrapped up in his investigations that he doesn't wish to be disturbed for meals," but the alienists might answer, "Edison fears that his meals are poisoned."

For a number of years past Edison has devoted much of his time to the perfection of a plan of erecting houses by pouring liquid concrete into specially prepared forms or moulds. He has frequently declared that his purpose is to enable the man who works in a trench at a dollar a day to live in a house which could not be duplicated in the ordinary manner of building for $10,000. He is convinced that when his plans are perfected he will be able to improve the living conditions of mankind. If testimony of this phase of Edison's work were produced in court, how eloquently experts might refer to it as evidence of Edison's ideas of grandeur and exaltation, a very marked symptom in all cases of paranoia.

Dr Frederick Peterson, whose remarks upon the symmetry of the face have been quoted, is one of the greatest alienists in the world, and one of the few experts not called in to examine Robin. His books are standards for all other alienists, and because of this and his non-participation in the Robin case it seems fairer to quote from his writings than from the books of those who were duped by the bank wrecker.

This Picture Was Made by Combining Two Copies of the Right Half of the Opposite Photograph Into One. It shows the "Symmetrical Edison," and Proves Conclusively that Each Side of His Face is Markedly Different. This "Asymmetry," According to the Alienist Code, is a General Proof of "Degeneration."

Dr. Peterson enumerates 110 physical marks or stigmata of degeneracy. There are 22 of the ear, 17 of the eye, 4 of the nose, 8 of the tongue and lips, 19 of the skin, 7 of the palate, 12 of the limbs, 3 of the speech, 5 of the face and 13 of the body in general.

Among the distortions of tongue and lips indicating degeneracy, Dr. Peterson lays particular stress on the "pusy" lip. "Undue swelling or pulpiness of the lips," he says is "noteworthy." One of the most conspicuous characteristics of President Lincoln's expressive countenance was the swollen, puffy, hanging lower lip. The whole mouth was awry. A glance at the photograph of his mouth on this page will show how much. But would you believe that Lincoln was anything but the great and noble soul history shows him?

Again, Dr. Peterson says "deformities of the ear have been deservedly well studied, for as stigmata of degeneration they take high rank."

Man has but two ears. The complete list of the anomalies is too long to be printed in its entirety, but here are some of the irregularities specified

"Abnormally implanted ears: They project too far or lie too closely, are placed too high or too low, too far forward or too far backward.

"Excessively large ears: 1—absolutely too large; 2—relatively too large.

"Ears which are too small.

"Ears which have a generally ugly shape. The breadth of the lower part may exceed that of the upper and vice versa; excessive length.

"Ears which are not uniform in width.

"The ear with adherent lobule; the lobule is enlarged, adherent and inclines downward toward the cheek.

"The ear with too large or too small a concha."

It is difficult to conceive how Nature, with all her versatility, could construct an ear which did not fall within at least one of these comprehensive classifications.

Judged by this test the late Queen Victoria, one of the most humane and enlightened of modern monarchs, had degenerate ears. By her photograph it is seen that her ears would clearly fall within several of the classes enumerated. The ear itself is not only excessively large—the perfect ear is only as long as the nose—but the lobule is lengthened and extends downward toward the cheek to the line of the mouth. The concha, the deepest hollow of the organ, would fail foul of another of these specifications in that it is too large in proportion to the size of the entire ear.

Dr. Peterson declares that "the deformed palate is, to my mind, one of the chief anatomical stigmata of degeneration," and he specifies the seven varieties of types: "Palate with Gothic arch, palate with horseshoe arch, the dome-shaped palate, the flat-roofed palate, the hip-roofed palate, the asymmetrical palate and the torus palatinus, or palate with a projecting ridge or swelling."

This seems rather a comprehensive classification of palates, but unless you can prove that your palate does not fall within any of these types you have one of the chief anatomical stigmata of degeneracy—and up to date a good defense if you wish to rob a bank or shoot any one.

If, when you are accused of crime, you can induce your parents to testify that you were rather late in getting your first or second set of teeth, it will help you considerably, for this, too, is a sign of degeneracy. So, too, are projecting teeth, misplaced teeth and a double row.

Look at yourself in the glass. Is one of your eyes smaller than the other? Is one higher than the other? Does one lid droop over the eye a little further than the other? It is a thousand to one that one or the other is the case. Not one person in a hundred thousand has eyes of the same size. Yet these are decided "stigmata of degeneracy," before the Robin confession good for at least a third of a virtual acquittal on the ground of "irresponsibility." Look at the eyes of that most estimable lady, Mrs. Russell Sage, whose philanthropies are the largest in the world. Mrs. Sage is one of the kindliest, most generous and sane of women—yet if Russell Sage had left any heirs who wanted to limit Mrs. Sage's benefactions this common ocular disproportion would, alas! give much weight to their contentions that she shouldn't be trusted with the money!

Those who recall the testimony of experts in cases where insanity is involved will remember the prominence given to the presence, absence or exaggeration of what is known as the knee-jerk or patellar reflex. If a person cross one knee over the other while sitting, and a smart, quick blow is then administered to the uppermost knee, just below the kneecap, the experiment is followed by a contraction of the anterior thigh muscles, causing the suspended foot to move forward an inch or two.

If this jerk is absent or delayed or too pronounced, alienists regard it as an indication of nervous disorder of some kind. In most of the murder cases where insanity has been pleaded as a defense the knee jerk of the defendant has been learnedly discussed.

As a matter of fact there is no accurate or definite test regarding the phenomenon. Whether the jerk in a particular person is normal or abnormal, delayed or pronounced depends largely upon the viewpoint of the alienists.

And this finally explains how it is that the defense can herd a line of experts who will lustily testify that the accused has all the marks of the irresponsible, while the prosecution can marshal a line equally as formidable who will as lustily vow that he is a perfectly sane man.

Look at this picture at the bottom of the page—the photograph of the Countess Annesley's head enclosed in the 36 small squares. There is a standard of perfection. The Countess Annesley's head comes up to it at every point—ears in the proper squares, eyes the same, line of nose, line of chin, whole profile just right. But the Countess Annesley is a freak, if a freak is something that the vast majority of people are not. Not one person in a million would accurately fit into this "square of perfection." And yet the alienists contend that every deviation from this square is a deviation toward degeneration and a sign of it.

If this is so we are all of us insane!

It is not likely that ever again will the criminal courts see the armies of alienists drawn up on sides to discourse for days upon whether the man who has duped thousands, wrecked banks or satisfied by murder a personal grudge, is sane or insane, basing their testimony upon these common variations of the human face and body and upon "distorted interpretations of universal idiosyncrasies." Bank Wrecker Robin has cynically overturned the whole elaborate system.

"This Time There Was No Conflict of Experts!"

THE day after the special jury in Judge Swann's court had decided, despite the testimony of the thirteen experts, that Robin was shamming insanity, Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton wrote this indignant letter to a newspaper. Because of the subsequent confession of the bank wrecker that he had fooled the alienists, this letter has gained a highly instructive and diverting aspect.

There have been no public letters from any of the alienists since Robin's confession.

To the Editor

The extraordinary action of a petit jury yesterday in finding Joseph G. Robin sane is, I think it must be admitted, another instance of stupidity and unfairness, and a fresh reminder that medical questions should not be passed upon by untrained minds, despite the opinion of the presiding Judge, who approved the decision of the twelve men in the box as an example of "horse sense," whatever that may mean.

To those who are unfamiliar with the case it may not be amiss to state briefly that when Dr. Jelliffe and I entered the case at the solicitation of the District Attorney we were distinctly biased against the prisoner and subjected him upon several occasions to grilling examinations.

Despite all these suspicious elements we were soon forced to believe that the prisoner was really of unsound mind, and intimated this upon two or three occasions to the District Attorney and his associates. When this doubt arose Mr. Whitman empowered me to secure other alienists out of town, and I submitted the testimony already taken to Dr George Jelly, of Boston, who until recently has been head of the lunacy commission of Massachusetts, and to Dr George T Tuttle, superintendent of the McLean Hospital, at Waverley, Mass.

Dr W. A. White, the learned head of the Government hospital at Washington, came to New York and saw Robin upon two occasions, and as a result of these examinations we pronounced the defendant to be in a condition in which he was unfit properly to instruct his lawyer.

It was then that Mr. Whitman decided that the prisoner was sane, and the court called in Dr Dana and Dr Bailey, of New York, who independently and promptly reached the conclusion held by the rest of us, and perhaps were more radical in their views.

Thirteen medical men, some of whom have not been called, have thus far expressed the opinion that Robin should be sent to an asylum and watched, and no one has been brought forward to differ with us in our conclusions and recommendations.

This time there was no "conflict of experts."

The astute occupants of the jury box in a few minutes, seconded by the learned Judge, have decided a question that has taken us a month to solve, and Robin, whatever may be his faults, or however contemptible may be his character, has been sacrificed as the victim of a certain class of public opinion.

This letter is longer than intended, but it is hoped that are long every question connected with disputed mental and physical states will be decided by some other tribunal than the kind that has made such a sorry mess in the Robin matter.

ALLAN McLANE HAMILTON, M.D.

New York, February 4.

Robin's Eight "Marked Symptoms of Insanity"

1—Most people throw newspapers on the floor when through reading. Members of Robin's household testified that on entering his bedroom in the morning they invariably found the floor strewn with the papers he had read before retiring. The alienists attached great importance to this as indicating morbid suspicion—declaring that Robin's purpose was to detect intruders, as the noise of their walking on the papers would awaken him.

2—In some of Robin's rooms he had pasted strips of paper around the windows. Reasons given said he had done this to keep out the draughts—but the experts believed that his real purpose was to keep out the voices which (when he wanted to be thought insane) he said were always whispering to him.

3—Robin was often caught peeping out of his office window, as though looking for some one. The alienists thought this showed him to be of a sensitive and suspicious temperament that "marked him as a type of abnormal character."

4—No one likes to eat a meal which is badly cooked. Sometimes even Robin's high-priced cooks could not suit him. On such occasions he refused to eat the meal. The alienists pointed out that his real reason was that he suspected poison, and that this unwarranted suspicion indicates paranoia.

5—When the sun is at its height most of us pull down the shades to protect ourselves from the glare. Robin frequently kept his shades down, and although he explained that he did so to keep the sun out, the alienists contended that this crafty explanation was invented to conceal his real purpose—to shut off the gaze of spies!

6—Every sensible persons wears rubbers when the weather is wet, and many wear rubber heels all the time. Robin did both. The alienists agreed that he did it through fear of one, mies attacking him by means of death-dealing currents of electricity, against which the rubber shoes would insulate and protect him.

7—Most of us have some guard against intrusion. Robin kept two bolts on his bedroom door. The alienists saw in this another evidence of his suspicious and "abnormally secretive character."

8—Most men who have sisters are anxious that they shall secure good husbands. Robin frequently told Dr. Robinovitch, his sister, not to get married until his schemes came to fruition, and that some day she would marry a prince. The alienists regarded this as evidence that Robin possessed unwarranted ideas of grandeur, which are said to mark the paranoiac.

"The Master of Grotesques"

How Heinrich Kley, the German Artist, Shows Life-Like Elephants, Turtles and Crocodiles With Real Human Attributes

NO, it is not that the editor has been "seeing things." The elephants pictured on this page are not of the "pink" variety. Neither are the racing snails, the suffragette crocodile, nor the turtle vaudeville team inspired by any such questionable means.

Strange as it may seem to the casual spectator, the reproduction of the remarkable pictures on this page is to serve a grave and serious purpose, namely, Art—with a large, capital initial. They are the work of that very modern Master the Grotesque, Heinrich Kley, of Munich Germany.

These drawings—and many others so exceedingly grotesque that they would cause consternation if in general circulation outside Germany or France—make up two volumes of a recently published collection of Kley's most characteristic work.

It will be noticed that this artist has amazing facility in imbuing his elephants and other animals with human attributes without departing in the least degree from their own true anatomy. Observe the anxiety with which convivial Father Elephant—having carefully removed his shoes—looks at his watch on finding the matutinal milk bottles on the doormat of his domicile. No respectable citizen of New York City, who had remained out unduly late with "the boys," could illustrate the moral more effectively.

Directly above this "horrible example" you see two frivolous specimens indulging in a terpsichorean pas de deux which could hardly be excelled by Pavlowa and her masculine partner at the New York Metropolitan Opera House while to the left of them is an indication that the elephantine dancers have been celebrating New Year's Eve on Broadway.

Lower down on the left you observe how Father Elephant can rise to the dignity of the respectable head of a family, calling and offering a wreath and his condolences to poor Mrs. Elephant, a neighbor, who has lately been widowed. It is really almost touching.

Then, just below, note the charming domestic scene. Mother Elephant—who evidently lives in Brooklyn—is about to send Baby Elephant out for an airing in the baby carriage which, of course, will be propelled by Father Elephant. In the meantime, she is fortifying Baby Elephant with some natural nourishment.

The Turtle Vaudeville Team is equally happy in conception and execution. Never were turtles truer to nature, physically, yet never did Spanish dancer and mandolinist play their parts with livelier grace.

Madame Crocodile, pictured just below, evidently has been reckless enough to promenade Fifth avenue, New York, at the Forty-second street crossing. Where was the policeman to warn her of the approach of the haughty automobile that was to cut off a yard and a half of her tail?

At the bottom of the page a really wonderful scene is depicted—an arena in which two snails, with their houses or their backs, are racing with what appears to be the speed of Roman chariots. The famous chariot race in "Ben Hur" was not more exciting. Yet the snails—though somewhat magnified—are most faithfully drawn.

"Woman Unprincipled—Let Her Vote!"

By Yvette de Montpelier

(Famous French Beauty and Writer.)

MONSIEUR, you demand my view as to whether the women of France should be given a vote. My reply is, If she is poor enough—yes. If she is dependent for her life upon her husband—yes. If she is rich and independent—no.

Our workman of France in these days is a man of principle; he has work to do, and he does it. If somebody gives him work that is not in his department, he puts down his tools on principle and strikes.

If a friend of his in the same trade is harshly treated he lays down his tools, too—on principle.

It is a good thing for him that he has not only got principle, but he has got a vote as well. His wife has neither vote nor principle, or it might be a very bad thing indeed for the federations of this country.

All the wife's principles are devoted to mundane and commonplace affairs, such as providing the necessary breakfast for her children and the eking out of her slender resources to the best advantage.

She cannot see things in their true perspective. She cannot see the world-shaking merits of the principles that bring no charcoal to her grate and no food to her cupboard. She would be prepared, I think, to let all these noble thoughts of her husband's go bang, and the fetish of intelligent federationism crumble to dust, and the fat socialist deputies, with their stipend, to which her husband contributes, return to hard work, from which glib tongues have rescued them.

When little Jeannette is shivering with the cold, and young Felix has no boots to wear, the regeneration of the human race does not bulk so largely in the woman's eye, monsieur, because, as I have been careful to explain, she has no principle.

It is the case of the sun and the farthing dip. The fact that the sun is lighting the cities of the Western hemisphere brings no joy to her when she cannot afford the necessary candle to attend to her children in the middle of the night.

Somebody has expressed the view that it will be a terrible business if the vote is not exclusively given to women of property, because, so these wise persons tell us, it simply means that the working man has two votes instead of one.

This is all right in theory, but it does not work out in practise. Because, however much she may admire the large mind of her husband, and to whatever end she may go to please him—such as bearing the children he cannot feed, and doing the work of three general servants for the wages of a convict—she may not, and certainly will not, vote for principles which make her lot, already an arduous one, necessarily harder, and which increase the difficulty—no small one—of feeding the children she has, and of providing for the children who are not yet born, but who are as certain to arrive as the day follows the night.

She is an unprincipled woman. I hope she gets the vote.

Queer Shadows You Can Leave Behind

THERE are many superstitions about shadows, but a freak of nature has produced something in that line that quite outdoes the product of Oriental imagination—real shadows of your figure that will remain after you have walked away from the spot. For a short time the sun can actually shine on this freak shadow without obliterating it.

To many Orientals one's shadow is a sacred thing. It must not be stepped on or treated with any sort of indignity; it can be "stolen," and that is a crime to be wiped out in blood; to say "May your shadow never grow less" is a civil and much appreciated salutation.

But no Oriental ever pretended ability to leave his shadow behind him. This feat, however, is easily accomplished under certain natural conditions which science has lately explained.

The phenomenon was first observed in the oil-producing regions of California, where there are many large ponds of crude petroleum. The strange property of the surfaces of these ponds of retaining for a few seconds any shadow cast upon them was for a long time a mystery even to the natives. Incredulous visitors were astonished to observe that their shadows remained on the surface of a petroleum pond for ten or fifteen seconds after their bodies had been withdrawn from between them and the sun.

They could walk along the margin of a pond, stopping for a few seconds between steps, and leave a row of their "freak shadows" on the oily surface. It was uncanny; nobody could explain it.

Then the logically inquiring mind of science came along and observed that the longer an object obscured the sun from a certain spot on the petroleum surface the longer the shadow remained after the object had been withdrawn.

This was the only clue required. It was plainly a case of change of temperature of the oil from which the direct rays of the sun were shut off, and a consequent physical change in the oil surface, which is reached constantly by millions of minute gas bubbles from below.

With the sun shining on the surface these gas bubbles meet the air and burst more quickly than when a shadow intervenes. Wherever the shadow rests, with a cooling effect, the little gas bubbles accumulate and defer their bursting till the sun again warms them. Consequently the exact "print" of the shadow is fixed for a few seconds on the oil surface even after the object that cast it has moved away.

The whole phenomenon—an uncanny one, indeed, when first observed—is due to the supersensitiveness of the rising gas bubbles, which accumulate without bursting when subjected to a slight lowering of the temperature—which a momentary obscuration of the sun is enough to produce.

How The Sultan And I Went "Down and Out" Together

Most of Abdul Hamid's 800 Harem Women Doomed to Degradation—His Favorite Pashas Dead of Despair and Suicide, or Drug-Crazed—The Widow of One (Who Tells the Story) Penniless in a New York Municipal Lodging House.

THE adventurous life of the Baroness de l'Obel, formerly the beautiful Eva Van Passe, of San Francisco, has found temporary pause in the Municipal Lodging House, of New York, where persons temporarily out of funds wait for remittances. The Baroness is the daughter of the Hungarian Count Von Passe, is well known to society in New York, Paris and San Francisco and was a classmate of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Herman Oelrichs.

One of the most interesting experiences was her residence in one of the kiosks of the Sultan's palace in Constantinople. There, the wife of Baron de l'Obel, one of Abdul Hamid's aides-de-camps, she spent four years.

When the Sultan was deposed the Baron lost his place. As the Baroness expresses it, the Sultan and she went "down and out" at the same time. The difference is that Sultan's condition is permanent, while her's is but porary.

During her life at Yildiz Kiosk the Baroness had unusual opportunities to study the harem system, and here she gives a new and intimate view of it, together with her story of the misfortunes that followed the ex-Sultan's household and of the scenes that accompanied his downfall.

By Baroness Eva de l'Obel

THE Yildiz Kiosk, palace of the Sultan at Constantinople, was my home for four years, my husband, Pasha Jamell de l'Obel, being an aide de camp to Abdul Hamid up to the day of that tyrant's overthrow.

Few of Abdul Hamid's great household escaped the general disaster. I can say with truth that the old Sultan and I went "down and out" together.

In a few weeks my husband was in his grave. Another Pasha had killed himself, and still another wrecked his mind and body with drugs.

Most of the eight hundred women of Abdul Hamid's harem have become poor, degraded creatures of the streets. A remarkable exception is, to Occidental eyes, the least attractive of them all—the Belgian bearded lady. A freak of nature had provided her with the means of independence; I hear that she is now travelling with a circus and saving up for a "rainy day."

I see that Abdul Hamid has just tried suicide. I know he has tried it several times. The wives he took with him drove him crazy asking for the French dresses he no longer has money to buy them.

The close view I had of Abdul Hamid during those four years convinced me that he was one of the wickedest men that ever lived—a Nero of cruelty without Nero's courage. I was forced to the conclusion also that life in the harem is one of the surviving horrors of the Middle Ages.

That any woman visitor to Turkey can return to this country and declare that Turkish women are in advance of American women is incomprehensible to me.

My first glimpse of Sultan Abdul Hamid was shortly after my arrival in Constantinople from Paris, where I had married the Baron de l'Obel. Hearing that his aide de camp and superintendent of the manufacture of the royal porcelains had married a singer, the Sultan commanded "His Excellency" to appear before him.

This meant that I was to sing for the Sultan, his pashas and eight hundred or more women of his harem. I was seized with a sensation of terrible fright. I felt that the centuries had rolled backward and I was alone and helpless in the amphitheatre waiting for wild beasts to rush from their cages and devour me.

I was facing a half circle of latticed boxes through which I caught glimpses of white veils and very large eyes looking with steady, unfriendly gaze upon me. There was a slight, stirring noise, and in my nervousness I thought I heard deep breathing from these cages—the cages that might soon open and let hungry beasts escape! That I knew these boxes contained the wives and other harem women of the Sultan made me no less nervous. In a large open stage box sat the Sultan himself, a wicked looking old man.

I never saw His Majesty again until four years later, at 2 o'clock in the morning, when I saw him take a train from Constantinople to leave his empire forever—a bowed, humbled, venomously vindictive man, his ugly little eyes flashing impotent flames at his stalwart guards.

The life, as I saw it day after day in the harem where I was permitted freely to visit, is like a nightmare in my memory. The women are educated, but only in the accomplishments that are the veneer of education. They are taught French and music, but they are not taught to think. They have not that great boon of the woman who lives in Christian countries—the freedom to think. They have no responsibilities. They preen themselves like peacocks. They have nothing to do from morning to night. They spend all their time bathing and at their toilets, eating sweets and smoking cigarettes.

To prevent jealousies, Sultan Abdul Hamid housed his women in different kiosks, that is, small individual houses. And he never paid them visits, but invited them to visit him. Each day, because he was afraid of assassination, he moved to a different kiosk. When he wished to enjoy the society of one of his four legal wives, or of his eight hundred others, he sent the head eunuch to bid the honored one make herself as lovely as possible, because it was His Majesty's wish that she should pay him a visit. This head eunuch, by the way, died rich and full of years. The years were one hundred and two. The riches were two million dollars.

The women of Abdul Hamid's harem had one duty, which they deemed so rare a privilege and honor that they would not call it such. They assisted His Majesty at his toilet.

The Sultan would have only women attendants. He would summon a half dozen to his presence in the morning and each was allotted her share of preparing him for public appearance. One gave him his daily manicure. One daily applied fresh dye to his hair and closely cropped whiskers. One performed the service rendered by Mary of Magdala to the Saviour—she washed his feet. One brushed his clothes, another his teeth.

Abdul Hamid chose the women of his harem purely upon hearsay. He never saw them until one of his pashas had bought and paid for her at his command, and brought her into his presence. Every man of his household had a standing order, so to speak, for beautiful women.

Each of them as he went about in Constantinople looked for beauties for his lord. Each one knew that the Sultan admired women who were very fat. He knew also that Abdul Hamid abhorred all women who had not small feet. He further knew that His Majesty, by the law of contrast, admired blondes. If he saw one he began trafficking for her at once.

Nearly all of the women of Abdul's harem were Circassian slaves. The Circassian women are the most beautiful in the world. Their chief beauty is in their eyes and hair. The eyes look twice as large as the eyes one sees in a stroll on Fifth avenue, New York. They are dark, and liquid looking and very long.

Abdul Hamid really admired but the one type, which he considered the most attractive, the Circassian slave. It is not true that foreign women became members of his household, and this for the sufficient reason that he did not want them. Had he done so there would have been women of other nations in his harem. For I never knew a woman of any other land who lived in Turkey who wouldn't have been glad to enter the harem. They coveted the ease of the life and the honor of it.

But the harem life seemed to me abominable. Also it was hateful. If there were no other reason for disliking harem life, there is the sufficient reason that one has no male society. The wit and gayety of associating with men does not exist there. And not a woman in the harem but wants that society and would have it if she dared.

Turkish women are great flirts. It is the part of prudence for their husbands to soothe the fares of these women in vets.

That the life of the harem is that of undeveloped intellects and undeveloped affections is shown by the fact that when Abdul Hamid called for volunteers to go with him into exile, only thirty-two women of the eight hundred who had fattened on his bounty, offered to join him. He had always provided well for them. If they displeased him he did not cast them into the Bosphorus, but married them to his pashas. The pashas were willing, because usually a handful gift went with them.

If he tired of them they received no more notice as the royal kiosk. But they were well supplied with lucrative for the rest of their lives. And when they died they were buried, as is the custom in that country, not in caskets, but on mattresses, covered with silk, the faces that had once pleased their lover often hidden from the gaze of all other men in death as in life.

When on the night of his abdication, Abdul Hamid was told that he must give up his mad rule he first asked that he be permitted to live in the most beautiful palace in Turkey. When that was refused him he fell back upon the floor in convulsions. When he recovered consciousness, he sent in order to the harem that all who wished should follow him into exile. The screams, as of wild beasts, that had been ringing from the harem since news of the disaster had reached it, ceased when his messenger went among them. When at last the big door returned, there followed him but thirty two women, and these, by no means the youngest nor prettiest.

"Knuckle Duster Jewelry"—

Deadly Rings and Ornaments Used by Society Abroad in the Place of the Thugs' Brass Knuckles

JEWELRY which is useful as well as ornamental is the latest vogue in Europe.

It is a common thing in Paris to see "a man about town" with three or more big rings on his fingers. This is not ostentation but precaution—the rings affording a powerful weapon of defense against the Apaches' sudden attack, or in any similar emergency.

It was probably this class of weapon to which Baron Richard von Arkovy referred when he declared, upon his arrest recently, that almost every European gentleman considered it not only proper but necessary to carry brass-knuckles.

The weapon discovered in the Baron's pocket, however, was of a more villainous type, resembling the kind favored by the Apache fraternity for offence, rather than that carried by peaceful citizens for self-protection. Arkovy's weapon was constructed of nickel-plated steel and protruding from the knuckles were four sharp spikes an inch long.

But among the "useful jewelry" seen in Paris and other European cities there are articles equally as formidable as the regulation Apache knuckles, although their power to inflict injury is cunningly concealed by an innocent exterior.

There is a narrow gilt ring, for instance, which any woman might wear without exciting comment, but which, by the pressure of the palm of the hand against the inside of the ring, releases an ugly-looking prong as sharp as a stiletto and as dangerous.

Less innocent in appearance, perhaps, but readily hidden, are the rings to which a sharp spike is attached in such a way that the spike may be held in the palm of the hand until the necessity for using it arises, when it is readily turned around to the outside of the hand and is then capable of inflicting a mortal wound.

MY SECRETS OF BEAUTY

No. 117—THE FIGHT FOR YOUTH,

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

"Pat tissue-feeding oils or cold cream into the neck to make it plump."

Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri

FROM a crowded Eastern city comes this plain spoken plea of a worried woman:

"I am at an age when I need to keep myself up. Being poor and self-supporting makes my fight for prolonged youth doubly hard, but doubly necessary. I have always tried to keep myself up. But I am failing, I may say, under my chin. My neck is getting flabby and there are wrinkles under my eyes. My skin is sallow, no matter what I do.

"I am forty years old, a blonde. My hair, naturally a light brown, is turning gray. Kindly advise an unfortunate wage earner."

My dear woman, before anything else let me advise you not to worry, for worry and sickness are the greatest of "debeautifiers." You want to prolong your youth. You want to look as well as you can as long as you can. Very well. You are quite right in so wishing. But don't be satisfied with merely wishing. Will to maintain for many years the mid-summer of life and you can do so. A strong, persistent will, a never ceasing purpose, make most things possible.

Determine that you will hold to bright eyes, a charming expression, a clear skin and an unaged figure, and with certain aids of hygiene and common sense, and perhaps a little art, you will succeed.

First, look to your expression. It is in the expression, more than perhaps anything else, that youth resides. Study the expression of the young. It is bright and vital and interested. Cultivate that expression, but cultivate it not as a mere surface mark, but from deep within. Take the youthful point of view of life. Enjoy everything. That is one of the secrets of youth, the unlimited capacity to enjoy. Develop it in yourself.

This woman must change her viewpoint if she would "keep up." The last line in her letter reveals a secret she herself may not know. "An unfortunate wage earner" she says. This description of herself betrays the fact that she is discontented. Now discontent and beauty are enemies. Discontent drags the lips downward, carves a deep, long line from the nostrils to the lips and another vertical line between the brows.

You say that you "are failing under the chin." That is a careless way of stating that your muscles are sagging. Sandow, than whom there is no greater expert in the splendid science of rebuilding the body, says that at thirty-five a woman may expect to see her facial muscles begin to fall. She must begin to counteract this tendency of nature at once. There are four methods of doing this all of which I should advise using, choosing them as circumstances permit.

A method which is effective in combination with the rest is a careful pose of the head. Keep the chin up, training the muscles of the face to firmness.

You can give yourself a never to be forgotten lesson in the value of this pose by studying yourself in the mirror while the chin is held up and again when it falls upon your breast. These two extreme attitudes of the head subtract from in the one case, in the other add to, the seeming age of the person. Study some youthful model. The young person instinctively goes about with her chin raised. Dropping the chin permits the muscles of the neck to relax. Keep the chin up and the muscles of the neck will remain firm.

You complain that your neck is growing flabby. Perhaps it is starved. Have you thought that often the "old neck," and we may see the "old neck" on the young body, is the neglected neck? Perhaps it is because it is poorly nourished. Pat tissue-feeding oils or cold cream into the neck. In time, if you are patient, it will respond to its feeding by becoming more plump, and as the muscles round out the crosses or lines will become less conspicuous.

The neglected neck also reveals that neglect by its color. Perhaps your neck is aging in appearance because you have worn tight, high collars for many years, interrupting circulation. Stir him up! Field Marshal Necessary! Make him change the color of this gray moustache. Buy BUCKINGHAM'S DYE!

"Look to your expression. In this, more than anything else, youth resides."

"The lowered chin adds to the seeming age."

ME. CAVALIERI addresses her readers to-day on a theme that has a deeper human interest than have most beauty articles.

A woman of forty, who is self supporting, has sent the famous beauty a plea that touches her heart.

"I am at an age when I need to keep myself up," writes this business woman. "Being poor and self supporting makes my fight for prolonged youth twice as hard, but doubly necessary."

Mme. Cavalieri gives advice that is valuable, sympathetic and practical to this inquirer. It is advice that applies to all women who have reached the zenith of their lives and wish to prolong its midsummer.

chance by wearing the collarless gowns just now so fashionable. Scrub it every night with a complexion brush dipped into soapy water into which you have sprinkled ten drops of tincture of benzoin.

The benzoin, besides whitening it, is also a powerful astringent, and will draw up the loosened skin.

Rubbing the neck with slices of lemon will also whiten it. But persevere in using these remedies until you see results. Women are childish in their expectation of immediate results.

If possible rest at midday, or directly after the midday meal. If you can lie down for fifteen minutes in a darkened, silent room, you will feel stronger and look better all day for the brief rest. Over the tired eyes place loose cloths or bandages moistened with

Rosewater	1 oz.
Witch hazel	1 oz.

While taking this midday rest and before retiring for the night, bind up your muscles that would otherwise sag. The rubber chinband is much used for this purpose by women. A few who think that their use causes neuralgia prefer snug muslin bands which they can prepare for themselves. These bands can be made in folds or can be heavily stitched. They can be fastened by safety pins or tied at the top of the head.

I said there were four methods of avoiding this "failing under the chin." I have explained the need of keeping the chin up. Also the foregoing method of tying up the falling muscles. A third method is the plentiful use of cold water bandages, often renewed, or of passing lumps of ice beneath the chin. A last method is that of vigorously slapping the muscles of the chin with the backs of the hands, first the right, then the left, alternating. This causes renewed circulation and the parts of the body well nourished with blood supply do not show age.

The sallowness of your complexion can be corrected by a firm slapping of your face each morning and evening with the palms of your hands, using any of the good emollient creams for which I have given scores of formulæ, one of the best being the famous Kentucky cold cream made of

Rosewater	2 ozs.
Almond oil	2 ozs.
Spermaceti	½ oz.
White wax	½ oz.

"Scrub your neck every night with a complexion brush dipped into soapy water."

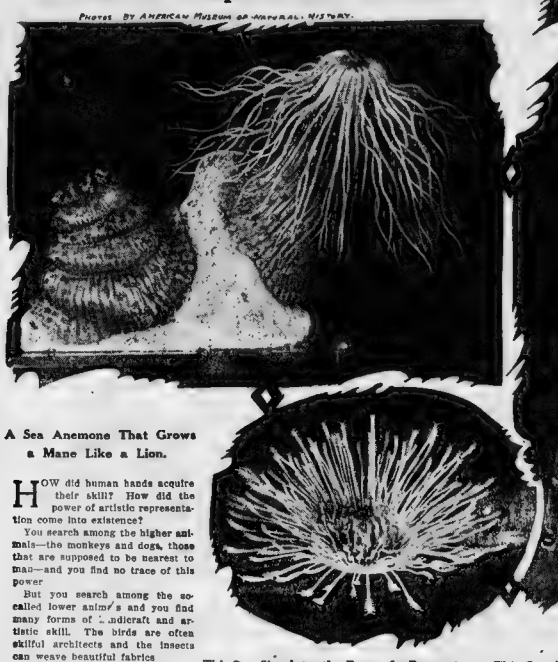
Creatures at the Bottom of the Ladder of Life Whose Work Would Do Credit to Sculptors and Jewellers

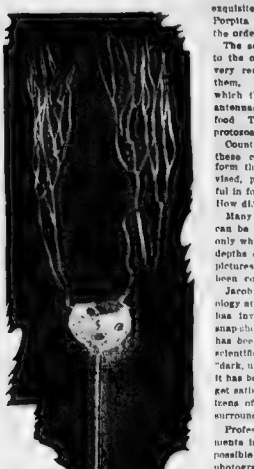
Weird Artist Animals

Photos By American Museum of Natural History



A Sea Anemone That Grows a Mane Like a Lion.

This One Simulates the Form of a Bouquet of Rare Flowers.



This One Builds Up a Beautiful Latticed Ladder at the Bottom of the Ocean.

HOW did human hands acquire their skill? How did the power of artistic representation come into existence?

You search among the higher animals—the monkeys and dogs, those that are supposed to be nearest to man—and you find no trace of this power

But you search among the so-called lower animals and you find many forms of industrial and artistic skill. The birds are often skilful architects and the insects can weave beautiful fabrics

But it is in the very lowest forms of animal life that we find the most astonishing approach to the human idea of artistic craftsmanship. Creatures which are at the very beginning of animal life, scarcely distinguishable from the lower plants, construct objects that would be the glory of a goldsmith or a sculptor.

Here perhaps we have a clue to the mystery of human evolution, a partial solution of the riddle of the universe.

Most astonishing builders are the minute creatures called Rhizopoda, which are generally found in the ocean. The New York Museum of Natural History has a remarkable collection of models of these sea creatures. Few people except those who have had a special education in biology stop to think of the wonder of this thing. Here are creatures lower in organization than an earthworm which are able to build structures which would be a credit to the creator of a skyscraper

The Rhizopoda are protozoans - that is to say, they belong to the very first or lowest order of animal life. They are furnished with "pseudopodia," or false feet, which they sometimes use for purposes of locomotion and the ingestion of food.

One of the Rhizopoda shown at the Museum builds up a structure which is something like the newest lattice work masts of the battleships, but much more beautiful and ornamental. This creature is called Sethopyramis annedactis

Equally remarkable is the Tetrasporis tetracorethra. This perhaps is the most wonderful artist of them all. It constructs a little bowl upon a long stem that is as graceful as any vase that was ever turned out by Tiffany

Another sea creature builds up a structure looking like a basket of exquisite flowers. This is called Porpita linneana and belongs to the order of hydrozoa.

The sea anemones, which belong to the order of actinozoa, are also very remarkable. Here is one of them, called Chadactis costae, which throws out a mass of long antennae with which to catch its food This is higher up than the protozoa, but not more beautiful.

Countless myriads there are of these creatures, simulating every form that the art of man has devised, producing structures beautiful in form, coloring and symmetry

How did they learn to do it?

Many of these little animal artists can be seen to the best advantage only when they are alive and in the depths of the sea. To take these pictures many odd devices have been constructed

Jacob Reighard, professor of zoology at the University of Michigan, has invented a device for taking snapshots under water, and the way has been cleared for thorough and scientific exploration of the ocean a "dark, unfathomed caves" Hitherto it has been practically impossible to get satisfactory pictures of the denizens of the deep in their natural surroundings

Professor Reighard's achievements in this line have been made possible by the increased speed of photographic plates and the development of rapid lenses. He has originated a system of photographing submerged objects with a camera held above the water. He uses a reflex camera enclosed in a watertight box and a screen to cut off the light reflected from the surface of the water into his lens

This screen is made of black calico and it attached to poles with pieces of adhesive tape. The poles are thrust into the water, so that the object to be photographed falls within the limits of the screen as mirrored, on the surface of the water. In this way the subject of the picture is bathed in sunlight, while the water above it is shaded

Somewhat the same device is used for picturing fish in their native element

Dr. H. W. Shufeldt, who has devoted a good deal of time and study to the photography of living fishes under water, has produced some remarkably good results. He has made an effort to secure pictures of fish while engaged in some act or habit characteristic of its kind. For example, he succeeded in photographing a "star-gazer" just as he was settling down in the sand—a habit in which it differs from others of its kind.

The Famous Wells of ABILENA

Nature's Wonderful Gift—is This Perfect Laxative

One of the most remarkable of all natural productions is the famous Wells of ABILENA, from which flows a perfect laxative water by Scientists of to-day, with the accumulated knowledge of 4 000 years to guide them, have not been able to manufacture a drop less laxative which relieves constipation and stimulates the liver as ABILENA water does. ABILENA is the only natural laxative water in America.

You will never need laxative medicines of any kind—pills, tablets, capsules, salts or artificial waters—if you drink a small portion of ABILENA at intervals when conditions call for a laxative

ABILENA

America's Natural Cathartic for Constipation and Biliousness

ABILENA comes to you pure—just as it flows from the wells of Abilena,—harmless as the water you drink—clear, sparkling, refreshing

It flushes and cleanses the system thoroughly and in the gentlest way possible. Instead of irritating the delicate intestinal membranes as drugs are apt to do, it allows these tissues and stimulates the liver.

For ABILENA is almost wholly sodium sulphate—the ideal laxative base—whereas other similar laxatives are largely magnesium, a harsh irritant which gives temporary and unpleasant results. Ask your physician about ABILENA.

ABILENA is a safe, sure, inexpensive laxative, convenient and pleasant to take. A small bottle will convince you that ABILENA, not medicine or artificial water, is what you need for constipation or biliousness. For sale by all druggists. Try ABILENA to-day (34)

How to Cure Dandruff By Our Family Doctor

DANDRUFF is a form of skin disease affecting the outer surface of the scalp and the roots of the hair It is characterized by the formation of fine, flaky scale or crust-like material, which may be found covering the entire head, upon the hair itself and at its roots, or it may be a localized condition limited to a single area of the scalp tissue It is a more or less common affection, occurring among people of all ages and sex, and is usually a manifestation, to a certain extent, of a general systemic derangement

It has been found in some instances that dandruff was contagious. It has been induced in animals, and reports of cases in the human being seem to show that using the hair brush or comb of a person affected is liable to spread the trouble

In general, dandruff is easily recognized by the small, fine, light yellow or grayish scaly crusts which are found to be of oily or fatty nature when rubbed between the fingers These scales form over the surface of the sca p tissue, which of itself may be reddened and slightly irritated, and as a rule, tends to be general or diffuse rather than limited to a definite area although the latter condition is sometimes found.

The hair is usually quite dry and there may be slight itching or burning of the scalp, which is aggravated when the patient is active or overheated. The scalp and hair are seen to be covered by an abundance of the small scales, which are easily removed, and falling, cover the clothing whenever the hair is brushed.

Locally, when the hair and scalp are very dry and much dandruff present the scales and crusts should first be softened and removed by application of a greasy ointment or oily preparation; ordinary olive oil is perhaps the best thing one c. use for this purpose. The head should then be thoroughly shampooed with cool water and tincture of green soap; this makes one of the most cleansing and agreeable washes available. If however, considerable redness and irritation of the scalp exist, a good variety of glycerine soap is better and acts in milder form

Follow the cleansing which should be done about once a week, the head is well dried and the following ointment, which is frequently recommended in these cases with good results, should be rubbed well into the scalp

Sulphur ointment.....½ to 1 ounce
Rosewater ointment.....2 ounces

A small quantity of this ointment is used every night for about one week, and it is very necessary that it should be thoroughly rubbed into the scalp tissue and about the roots of the hair. At the end of a week the head should be washed and the oil or greasy preparation again applied.

This ointment is used until the condition improves or the dandruff disappears, the applications being gradually reduced in frequency from once a day to once every other day, and finally to once a week. After courses of this treatment the scaling and crusting will disappear and the condition be apparently cured It often happens, however that relapses occur, and one should be on the lookout for reappearance of symptoms, beginning active treatment at once at the first sign

In cases of dandruff where the sebaceous secretion is marked, as shown by the greasy, oily appearance and feel of the scalp and hair, the following measures are indicated The head should be washed, with the tincture of green soap and water every day or so, well dried, and then the following preparation applied:

Resorcin.....2½ to 3 drams
Glycerin.....½ ounce
Alcohol...enough to make 3 ounces

One should be very careful to avoid using combs and brushes of others who are affected by this condition, for it is often transmitted from one person to another in this way.

anything to take part in our big $100.00 prize contest. This contest is open to all without any restrictions. To win a prize you need merely pick out all the misspelled words and grammatical errors in the advertisement on Page 110 of the March Cosmopolitan and send them to us with the best fifty-word reason for using a dictionary.

Every day of our lives we need a dictionary. We haven't all of us realized that fact, but the need is still there. For instance, in looking over the advertising section of the current issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine I found, on Page 110, an advertisement offering a set of Robert Louis Stevenson free. In this advertisement there are a number of misspelled words and grammatical errors.

ster's Intercollegiate Dictionary (50,000 words). We have recently been able to purchase 1,000 volumes of Webwith a thickness of only an inch and a quarter. It is a round-cornered volume 5¼x7¾ inches. This, too, in spite of 1224 pages of text and twelve pages in full colors on heavy plate paper. Printed on the famous English Bible paper, this dictionary contains 50,000 words, fully defined as to meanings, pronounciations, origin and and synonyms. It is bound in real flexible morocco leather, with red edges and thumb index notches and is a beautiful example of the bookbinders' art. We are going to sell these dictionaries in connection with a year's subscription to our magazine. The best way to sell them is to make the public realize clearly the necessity of using a dictionary. That is why we offer this prize.

SUNDAY-AMERICAN-EXAMINER-PATTERNS

BARGAIN DAY

ANY TWO OF THESE PATTERNS FOR TEN CENTS

NO. 8893.—LADY'S SHIRT WAIST, WITH GIBSON PLAITS.

A TYPE of shirt waist that is easily made and becoming to most women is here shown. The pocket is a smart feature that may be omitted. The sleeve is the regulation shirt sleeve, with straight cuff and lap.

The pattern is cut in six sizes—32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. It requires 2 7-8 yards of 36-inch material for the 36-inch size.

NO. 8895.—A COOL FROCK FOR THE LITTLE GIRL.

SIMPLICITY and comfort combine to make this garment attractive and pleasing. It will not take long to develop this neat little dress, which may be made with or without the flounce portion. A shaped facing trims sleeve and round yoke edge.

The pattern is cut in four sizes—2, 3, 4 and 6 years. It requires 3 yards of 36-inch material for the 4-year size.

NO. 8916.—A PRACTICAL KITCHEN APRON.

EVERY woman, whether she has to do the work about the house or not, will find use for a simple, practical work apron, such as the one here pictured. It slips on and off easily, and is the simplest of garments to make. The usual apron materials are suitable for reproduction, such as linen, gingham, holland and percale.

The pattern is cut in three sizes—small, medium and large. It requires 3 3-8 yards of 36-inch material for the medium size.

NO. 8912.—GIRL'S ONE-PIECE JUMPER DRESS.

WITH lace, net, embroidery or tucking for the guimpe and dotted dimity for the "jumper," this design will make a pretty dress. Other wash fabrics, silk or cloth are equally desirable. The dress closes at the side, and the upper part is cut in fancy shape, displaying the guimpe underneath.

The pattern is cut in four sizes—6, 8, 10 and 12 years. It requires 3 yards of 36-inch material for the dress and 1 7-8 yard of 27-inch material for the guimpe for the 10-year size.

To obtain any two of these desirable patterns, fill in the accompanying coupon and mail, with 10 cents in silver or stamps, to BARGAIN DAY, Post Office Box 260, New York City.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.—Send 10c. in silver or stamps for our Up-to-Date 1911 Spring and Summer Catalogue, containing over 400 designs of ladies', misses' and children's patterns.

NO. 8744.—LADY'S OVER-BLOUSE, WITH TUCKER.

THIS graceful model may be worn over a guimpe or made with the tucker supplied in the pattern. The design is equally appropriate for lawn, chambrey, mesaline, poplin or cashmere. The body portions are finished with box plaits and a deep Gibson plait over the shoulder.

The pattern is cut in six sizes—32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. It requires 2 5-8 yards of 32-inch material for the over-blouse and 1 3-8 yard of 32-inch material for the tucker.

NO. 8919.—BOY'S SUIT, WITH KNICKERBOCKERS.

EVERY home dressmaker will be attracted by the simple lines of this model. The design is suitable for wash or woollen fabrics. It is double-breasted, and the fulness of the sleeves at the wrist is disposed of in tucks that simulate box plaits.

The pattern is cut in three sizes—3, 4 and 6 years. It requires 2 5-8 yards of 44-inch material for the 4-year size.

NO. 8878.—A STYLISH MODEL FOR MOTHER'S GIRL.

THIS design is composed of a plaited skirt, and simple waist, embellished by stole-shaped trimming piece that extends over the skirt. Blue linen, with braiding in white or self color, would be very effective, or white lawn or dimity, with embroidery or lace edging for a finish on the stoles.

The pattern is cut in four sizes—8, 10, 12 and 14 years. It requires 4 yards of 44-inch material for the 8-year size.

NO. 8892.—MISSES' ONE-PIECE DRESS.

A PRACTICAL but stylish design is here shown. The fronts are crossed below the bust, and the neck opening is outlined by a sailor collar. Gibson plaits lend breadth to the shoulders. The waist is cut on the popular "peasant" lines, and may be worn with or without the tucker. The skirt has a front and back panel stitched in tucked effect and joined to side and back gores.

The pattern is cut in four sizes—14, 15, 16 and 18 years. It requires 4 5-8 yards of 44-inch material for the 16-year size, with 1 1-2 yard of 27-inch material for the tucker.

FOXY GRANDPA

LITTLE BROTHER & The Boys

The Boys Give Little Brother a Shower, but Foxy Grandpa Helped to Soak the Young Mischiefs

1. BOYS—Here comes Little Brother with Gran'pa's old umbrella. We will give him a Spring shower.

2. GRANDPA—Mischief seems to be going on there!

3. GRANDPA—Baby, you must go back for your doll. If the boys try that trick again I'll soon fix them.

4. BOYS—Oh, look! Why, here he comes for another little dose!

5. GRANDPA—Now for the water works!

6. GRANDPA—Hello, boys! What's the meaning of all this? Playing another joke on Little Brother?
